Iron Guards Tell Carol to Quit, Set Up 'Death Watch'

Pro-Nazi Premier Reported Heading Abdication Move; Riots in Bucharest

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Rumania (Friday), Sept. 6.—A throng of Iron Guardists, threatening an armed uprising unless King Carol abdicates at once, set up a "death watch" on his throne early today.

Taking up their stand about a quarter of a mile from the palace, and ringed about by soldiers and gendarmes, they cried out over and over:

"Carol must abdicate! But don't let him take the money!"

Inside the palace, a long and urgent conference was in progress: Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's new military dictator, was reported on the authority of a government official to be demanding that the monarch step down.

In a statement issued before this latest critical conference, Antonescu asserted his friendship and cooperation with the Axis powers and pledged himself to carry out the Vienna agreement whereby Rumania yielded Transylvania, into which the Hungarian occupation forces began marching today through a series of isolated but bloody clashes.

First Assault Broken

The Iron Guardists already had been involved in a bloody riot near the palace, which was broken by troops only to spread out then into sporadic rifle and pistol clashes at numerous points in the city.

In this initial outbreak, hundreds of troops, using armored cars and machine guns, fought the pro-Fascist Guardists.

Despite the ferocity of the action, first reports indicated only one person had been killed and several wounded.

The outbreak was set off by a crowd's demonstration against King Carol. They shouted bitter denunciations within earshot of the palace, sang songs critical of the monarch and cried "long live Antonescu!"

Despite the salutations to the new dictator, however, the troops fired when the mob refused to disperse. The official version was that the soldiers had been ordered to shoot into the air, and that any casualties resulted from falling or stray shots.

For a short time, the demonstrants themselves had control of an armored car equipped with powerful motor hoses. They turned the Cluj, Transylvania (Friday), Sept. 6.—Small but bloody clashes between retreating Rumanian soldiers and the advancing Hungarian army of occupation occurred on the north Transylvania border, it was officially announced today.

The chief executive official of Cluj said a number of deaths had occurred. But, he declared, the skirmishes were isolated, and the withdrawal was in general orderly.

[Two Rumanian and two Hungarian soldiers were killed and one Rumanian trooper was wounded in a clash near Diosig when Rumanian troops repulsed Hungarians who had crossed the border ahead of schedule, the United Press reported.

British Ambassador Visits 15 Child Refugees in Virginia

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Marquess of Lothian, Great Britain's Ambassador to the United States, got his hair mussed and his hat battered yesterday.

In the name of his King, Lord Lothian put aside all thought of destroyers and naval bases and journeyed 50 miles over the Virginia hills to call on 15 English children, who a fortnight ago found sanctuary in this country from German bombs.

Lord Lothian's was the first masculine British voice the children had heard since their convoy reached Montreal, and the result was a gay and somewhat strenuous reception for the diplomat. Angela Kristin, a golden-haired miss of 5, got hold of his fedora and made off with it. When she gave it back, it closely resembled something on a scarecrow in a nearby corn field.

Clovercroft, the estate outside Warrenton where the children are staying for the duration of the war, echoed to childish laughter as the little refugees ran forward to greet the Ambassador.

The Ambassador was enchanted by the white-painted house, the trees and the garden.

"Truly, it is a fairyland," he said.

He learned from Miss Margaret Leechman and Miss Barbara Ravenscroft, owners of the nursery school which most of the children attended in a bombed area of Devon-

Costa Rica Would Grant Canal Base

Cocos Island Site Offered to America, President Reveals; Fort in Pacific

By the United Press

San Jose, Costa Rica, Sept. 5. Costa Rica has offered to lease Cocos Island, 400 miles off the Pacific Coast, to the United States for establishment of air and naval bases to guard the western approaches to the Panama Canal, President Rafael A. Calderon Guardia said today.

No reply to the offer has yet been received from Washington, the President added.

President Calderon said:

"The government of Costa Rica has not yet received an official communication from Washington relating to Cocos Island negotiations. However, the government approves the extension of facilities permitting the United States to use the island for installation of defense measures if required by them. For that purpose we have already offered the island to the United States and are now awaiting their reply."

Favors Long Term Lease

The President said this country would not permit sale of the island but would consider favorably a long-term lease to the United States.

"I consider that by providing the United States with such facilities for defense of the Panama Canal, we also derive an additional means of security for Costa Rica," the President said.

United States Navy Secretary Knox yesterday expressed a desire to obtain both Cocos Island and the Galapagos Islands, owned by Ecuador, for Pacific bases. Cocos Island is about 600 miles northwest of the Canal, while the Galapagos are about 1,000 miles southwest.

[Tonight, however, Secretary Knox said at San Francisco:

["I am sorry if the press gained the impression that negotiations were actually in progress as no concrete steps have been taken toward that end.]

Fish's Plan to Try Voluntary Enlistment First Is Approved; Decision May Face Roll-Call Test, Must Win Senate Concurrence

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The House late yesterday amended the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill to give the voluntary enlistment system a 60-day "last chance" to meet the Army's man-power requirements. The vote was 185 to 155.

Tentative adoption of the amendment, introduced by Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, came in the face of warnings from Administration spokesmen that delay in enactment of the draft would increase the danger of American involvement in war.

Earlier yesterday the House gave final approval to the $5,200,000,000 defense bill, carrying appropriations to start construction of a two-ocean Navy, provide equipment for an Army of 2,000,000 men and buy more than 14,000 planes for the Army and Navy.

At $15,000,000,000 Mark

The measure, bringing this session's defense appropriations and commitments beyond the $15,000,000,000 mark, now goes back to the Senate for final action on minor modifications made by the House.

The House also indirectly approved the principle of conscription of industry when it eliminated a provision from the defense appropriations bill which would have repealed a section of the recently-enacted Navy "speed up" measure empowering the Secretary of the Navy to commandeer industrial plants under certain conditions. The vote was 143 to 73.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, explained that it was thought advisable to let the commandeering authority stand because the whole issue would be settled under the pending conscription bill.

Defeated in Senate

The Fish amendment may face another test in the House today or tomorrow since it was adopted by a teller vote while the House was sitting as a committee. Managers of the bill have the right to demand a roll call vote in a formal session of the House, with each member going on record on the explosive issue.

If the "waiting period" proposal stays in the House version of the bill, it must then go back to the Sen-

Willkie Favors Limited Draft Of Industry

By William H. Lawrence

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 5.—Republican Presidential Nominee Wendell L. Willkie said today his position on the Russell-Overton industry conscription amendment has been misunderstood and that he would favor a bill providing emergency conscription of industry "by rule and regulation instead of by the arbitrary action of one man."

He said he favored the Burke-Wadsworth selective service bill for men, but felt that the Overton-Russell amendment, added to it by the Senate, provided for plant seizure through "the capricious determination of one man."

He made the statement in a press conference after he had conferred with G. O. P. leaders from 22 States whom he charged with the task of piling up such a vote in November "that the pernicious doctrines that have been preached the last few years will be completely eliminated from America."

Had Called It "Sovietization"

Navy Buying 2,617 Planes

Agreements between the Navy Department and aircraft manufacturers for 2,617 additional fighting and scouting planes and 27,000 aircraft propellers were disclosed yesterday.

An account of the agreements, which will be superseded by formal contracts, was placed in the Congressional Record by Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee. Combat planes ordered by the Navy now total 3,648.

Some of the planes and propellers ordered in the new agreements will be used by the Army. The planes are to be manufactured by five corporations and the propellers by one, United Aircraft. The cost was not disclosed.

Last week agreements were reached by the Navy with United Aircraft for 17,000 Pratt & Whitney engines and by the Army for 20,000 Wright engines and 14,000 Curtiss propellers—all to be delivered for Army and Navy within the next two years.

Willkie Debate Challenge Splits Voters

Opinions Follow Party Lines; G. O. P. For, Democrats Against

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 5.—The attitude of the typical American voter toward Wendell Willkie's offer to debate President Roosevelt is largely dependent on party leanings. Republican voters interviewed this past week in a national poll tend to favor the debate, and Democratic voters to belittle the Willkie challenge.

The question put to voters was:

"Wendell Willkie proposed that he and President Roosevelt hold a series of debates, both speaking from the same platform. Do you think the President should accept the proposal?"

Yes	49%
No	51

Approximately one voter in seven (14 per cent) was without an opinion on the issue.

The sharply partisan nature of sentiment on the question is well illustrated in the following vote by parties:

'Can Stand It,' Churchill Says

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 5.—Winston Churchill declared today from the very midst of the Battle of Britain that no matter how Hitler multiplies his air raids, "we can stand it," and expressed his deep satisfaction with what he termed the eastward advance of the United States' armed frontiers.

For 45 minutes prime minister and House of Commons waited in recess during London's second air raid alarm of the day. Then, some minutes before the "all clear" sirens blew, the House reassembled and Churchill began the scheduled statement.

Outside, a Nazi raider formed with smoke or exhaust fumes a great cross, with the rough outlines of a swastika.

Churchill explained the government had received information of "danger of a particular kind in the vicinity"—(presumably an intended attack on the Westminster area in which the Houses of Parliament are situated.)

The essence of Churchill's speech was confident defiance of the German Fuehrer's threat of yesterday to "erase" English cities in revenge for British raids on Germany.

However, he ranged from a thankful resume of the British-American agreement to trade Western Hemisphere defense bases for 50 over-age United States destroyers to a declaration that the British are ready for heavy trouble in the Middle East.

The prime minister stressed that the defense-base destroyer deal in no way changed nonbelligerency of the United States and said it constituted "simply measures of mutual assistance rendered to one another by two friendly nations."

"No doubt," he added, "Herr Hit-

Japan Reported Given Right To March Through Indo-China

By the Associated Press

Hongkong, Sept. 5.—A preliminary basic agreement giving Japan right of way in French Indo-China for a back door on China in an effort to wind up the 3-year-old war was reported tonight by authoritative neutral quarters at Hanoi.

This concession of a "limited" right to land Japanese troops and supplies at Haipong, was said to have been reached between Tokyo and the Vichy government of France. It was still subject to negotiation of details at Hanoi.

This was the latest and apparently best informed version of the crisis in the most populous segment of defeated France's troubled empire.

The threat of a full-fledged forcible invasion of Indo-China—the essence of a reported Japanese ultimatum of Monday—appeared to have passed. One explanation was that Maj. Gen. Issaku Nishihara, Japanese negotiator in chief, had overstepped himself.

'Common Problems'

Army Considering Sending Its Old Tanks to Canada

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

Dispatch of "important" quantities of war material to Canada—starting with obsolete tanks for training purposes—is being considered by the United States Government, it was revealed yesterday.

On the heels of President Roosevelt's release of destroyers to Great Britain, Mayor La Guardia, of New York, American chairman of the Canadian-United States Joint Defense Board, told newsmen it would be safe to assume that this Government is discussing the question of supplying war material to Canada.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, immediately gave weight to this hint by telling his press conference that the Army is "favorably considering" release of several hundred World War tanks to Canada.

LaGuardia, after presenting to President Roosevelt an informal report on Canadian-United States defense cooperation to date, was asked if the question of sending war equipment to Canada had come up.

"I wish you had not asked that question," he replied. "I think you would be right in assuming it however."

The supplies would be in large enough amounts so "they wouldn't be for any Fourth of July celebration," LaGuardia said.

Neither the Army chief nor the New York mayor mentioned what Canada might offer in return, but

Administration Men Open Fire on Right Of Subcommittee

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

Anti-third term hearings before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee stirred an hour's debate in the Senate yesterday, as Administration leaders opened fire on the subcommittees right to proceed.

An hour earlier, William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College, told the subcommittee that America was drifting toward "Cæsarism" and a Presidential term limitation would check the trend.

Maintaining the subcommittee's right to hold hearings, and avowing his intention of raising the third term issue "whenever I can get a single person to listen," Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, invited Senate leaders en bloc to appear before his group.

Burke asked Senate Majority Leader Barkley and other Democratic Senators to explain "why they changed their minds" after voting for a 1928 resolution opposing a third term for any President.

Both Barkley and Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, questioned authority for holding the hearings, contending the subcommittee had expired after reporting last year to the full committee.

Burke cited a fresh grant of life frm Chairman Ashurst to consider a new two-term resolution. Neither Barkley nor Byrnes pressed the fight.

The row was touched off by Senator Ashurst, who rose to disclaim responsibility for the hearings which he said were bringing scores of mailed protests to him. Ashurst said he had made it a rule never to interfere with the work of his subcommittees, and would not "bottle" this one up.

The Arizonan, who voted for the 1928 anti-third term resolution, in turn was challenged by Burke to appear as a witness. Ashurst said he was ready to testify at once.

"I have not changed my mind," Ashurst said. "I must vote for a third termer or a third rater, and I prefer to vote for a third termer rather than a third rater."

"Wise Men Change Minds"

Burke said that reply "is hardly worthy of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee."

Barkley, similarly challenged, said, "Wise men may change their minds, fools never do." He said what he would say before the subcommittee "would be merely the expression of my opinion"—that the subcommittee would get "opinions" only from all witnesses, and no facts.

"The American people have the right," said Barkley, "regardless of Washington's refusal to take a third term and regardless of what Jefferson said about the matter on a certain occasion, to elect a man President of the United States three times or as often as they are willing to elect him. They can never exercise that right unless they have the opportunity."

Burke said he agreed there was no written constitutional prohibition on a third term, but through custom "it has become part of the unwritten Constitution which many consider as binding as the written one."

Burke Astounded

The Nebraska Senator said it was possible "for an honest and intelligent man" to change his mind, and for that reason he wanted Barkley to testify "fully and frankly why he has changed his mind and takes a different position now."

"I am astounded when I look at the names of the Senators who voted in favor of that resolution in 1928, who declared then their firm conviction that for this country to lo what is now attempted to be done was fraught with peril to our free institutions," said Burke.

"Certainly in this day, when Congress and the entire country are primarily concerned with every effort to preserve our free institutions, any one ought to hesitate to rise in this body or elsewhere and question in any way the patriotic duty that rests upon everyone to explore this question."

When Byrnes asked why Burke "waited until 60 days before the election to hold hearings," Burke admitted that the President's decision to accept a third-term nomination caused him to call hearings.

Urges Six-Year Term

Meanwhile, Lewis, formerly head of George Washington University here, told the Burke subcommittee that a single six-year term limit should be placed on the Presidency to curb "one-man power."

Lewis, fourth witness to appear before the subcommittee, said if he correctly read current trends "it seems quite evident to me that we are rapidly approaching the point in the development of the Republic which the Roman Republic of 50 B. C. and the French Republic of 1793 and 1848 met their downfall."

Lewis said representative institutions tend to come under control of the "more capable and active persons of the community."

"Then," said Lewis, "comes along an extraordinary, vigorous, ambitious and self-confident personality who proclaims himself the tribune of the people, and seeks to rally round himself as the nucleus of a new kind of organization.

"It Can Happen Here"

"The people, as he calls them, but in reality always the more adventurous part of the people. And he appeals to the people to ride down their representative institutions and take things into their own hands, which always means practically to give things into his hands as their sole representative. This is Caesarism, Bonapartism. This is the way it always comes out."

Asserting that "it can happen here," Lewis said "our people are no less emotional—are no more difficult to lead than some of those across the water." He said that if the argument should hold that a President should be retained in times of crisis, then "a clever group of political leaders could easily create a crisis in order to keep their man in office."

Next witnesses scheduled to appear before the subcommittee are Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, retired Methodist bishop of Washington; Representative Allen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, and former Representative Pettengill (Democrat), of Indiana. Among witnesses soon to appear are Irvin S. Cobb, humorist, and Jefferson Davis, grandson of the president of the Confederacy. Barkley congratulated Burke on a "glamorous" witness list.

Wickard Moves Up, Succeeding Wallace

COMMISSIONED AGRICULTURE SECRETARY—President Roosevelt presents commission to Claude R. Wickard after he was sworn in at the White House yesterday as Secretary of Agriculture. He succeeds Henry A. Wallace, who resigned to campaign for the Vice Presidency

Reorganization of the President's Cabinet neared completion yesterday, as a new Secretary of Agriculture was sworn in, approval was sought for a new Postmaster General and Congress moved to clear the way for appointment of a Secretary of Commerce.

Claude R. Wickard was administered the oath as Secretary of Agriculture in the President's oval office as Mr. Roosevelt sent to the Senate the appointment of Frank C. Walker as Postmaster General.

Meanwhile, both the House Banking Committee and the Senate Commerce Committee approved resolutions to make it possible for Jesse H. Jones to become Secretary of Commerce while continuing in his present job as Federal Loan Administrator.

Wickard, succeeding Henry A. Wallace, who resigned to accept the Republican Vice Presidential nomination, immediately announced appointment of two assistants on his Agriculture Department staff—Carl Hamilton, formerly of Ames, Iowa, and Herbert Parisius, of Wisconsin. Paul H. Appleby, formerly Wallace's assistant, was sworn in as Undersecretary of Agriculture.

The 54-year-old Walker, close friend of the President and once executive director of his National Emergency Council, will succeed James A. Farley, who resigned as Postmaster General to take over the New York Yankees.

The joint resolutions approved by the House Banking and Senate Commerce committees mention Jones by name in providing that "notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary," Jones may hold down the posts of Federal loan administrator and Secretary of Commerce, but receive only the salary of the latter post.

Nazis Backing 7 Candidates For Congress, FBI Told

Friends of Democracy, Inc., Declare Preparations Are Under Way to Seize Power Here Through Legal Means

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was told yesterday that Nazi Germany, preparing to seize power in the United States through legal means, is backing seven candidates for Congress in the forthcoming elections.

The charge was made by Friends of Democracy, Inc., whose national director, L. M. Birkhead, is a Unitarian minister from Kansas City. The organization has been active in attacking the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, and Nazi organizations.

Birkhead, calling for an F. B. I. investigation of the political supporters of the candidates, mentioned these would-be officeholders:

Joseph E. McWilliams, candidate for the House of Representatives from the Eighteenth Congressional District, New York.

Kenneth A. Brown, candidate for the House from the First Congressional District, Oregon.

Louis B. Ward, candidate for the United States Senate from Michigan.

Dr. George H. Derry, candidate for the House from the Fifteenth Congressional District, Michigan.

T. W. Hughes, announced candidate for political office, from Los Angeles.

George Deatherage, St. Albans, W. Va., who has announced he would run for Congress as an independent candidate of the American Destiny Party.

"All of these candidates," Birkhead said in a memorandum to the F. B. I., "are running on a platform which suggests appeasement of Nazi Germany.

"We believe," he asserted, "that they represent a deliberate move to gain political power and political office for the purpose of obstructing the legislative processes of the Nation."

The aspirants to office intend, Birkhead charged, to establish "focal points around which an American Sudeten group, whose first allegiance is with Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy, can be developed."

Sponsors of Friends of Democracy, Inc., are listed as including Westbrook Pegler, George Gordon Battle, Louis Bromfield, David Cushman Coyle, Van Wyck Brooks, Thomas Mann, and Robert Millikan.

Col. Frank Evans To Retire by Dec. 1

Col. Frank E. (Daddy Pat) Evans, who wrote thriller stories about the Marines a score of years ago, is slated to leave the Corps by retirement on December 1.

Col. Evans has of late been stationed in New Orleans, where he was in charge of recruiting. After studying at Princeton University for three years, he joined the Marines for service in the Spanish-American War.

SEC Reports Big '39 Profits By 21 Air Firms

Volume of Business Soared in Year; Large Dividends Paid Out

Twenty-one firms engaged primarily in making aircraft and aircraft equipment showed a combined operating profit of 16.5 per cent of sales in 1939, compared with 14.3 per cent of sales in 1938, the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday.

Reviewing financial operations of the companies for 1939—a year that included four months of war and eight of preparations for conflict—the commission said the 21 enterprises did a combined volume of business amounting to $274,000,000, compared with $198,000,000 in 1938.

Officials pointed out that much of this profitable business resulted from sales of aircraft to such foreign nations as Holland, Turkey and Brazil, where losses suffered in other business could be more than recouped.

The combined profit of the firms after all charges, including non-operating gains and losses, prior claims, interest and income taxes, was $34,000,000, or 12.3 per cent of sales, compared with $23,000,000, or 11.6 per cent of sales in 1938.

The report was the fifth of a series of supplements to a previous report covering the financial statistics from 1934 to 1938 of listed corporations in a large variety of industries. Prepared as a WPA project under SEC supervision, the report covered only firms in the aviation field whose stocks are listed with the SEC.

United Aircraft paid dividends in the year of $5,299,000, Curtiss Wright paid $2,317,000, Wright Aeronautical Corporation, $1,200,000; Glenn L. Martin, $1,092,000; North American Aviation, $4,809,000; Sperry Corporation, $4,031,000, and Douglas Aircraft, $1,800,000.

Willkie May Win Va., Kentucky, Says Colladay

Rushville, Ind., Sept. 5 (AP).—E. F. Colladay, Republican Committeeman for the District of Columbia, predicted today that Wendell L. Willkie would win back "the Republicans who left us in the last two campaigns."

Here for a meeting of party organization leaders with the Republican Presidential nominee, Colladay told reporters that "it is quite possible that Willkie will carry Virginia and Kentucky."

"I think the outlook is very encouraging for a victory for Willkie," he declared. "I feel that we will maintain at least all our present indicated support and increase it in the States north of the Ohio, west of the Mississippi and north of Oklahoma clear to the Rockies.

"Willkie will get the farm vote. He will have the 16,000,000 who voted for Landon and will get Republicans who left us in the last two campaigns. There also will be substantial support from Willkie clubs and Willkie Democrats."

Democrat To Lead Ohio Drive

New York, Sept. 5.—The appointment of former Gov. George White, (Democrat), of Ohio, as the first of 8 State advisory chairmen, was announced today by the National Committee of the Democrats-for Willkie at national head quarters in the Chanin building.

At the same time, executive members of the national committee opened a Nationwide drive organize Democrats supporting Wendell L. Willkie for President.

John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, was in Winston-Salem, N. C., for a meeting with Southern Democrats. Alan Valentine, president of the University of Rochester and executive director of the Democrats-for-Willkie, was in Chicago.

Representative Robert G. Allen, of Pennsylvania, national treasurer, was in Pittsburgh. Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, prominent Tulsa, Okla., Democrat and former president of the Federation of Women's Clubs, was touring the Southwest.

U.S. World War Tanks May Go To Canada for Training Use

military authorities were quick with the suggestion that this country could use bases along Canada's Pacific Coast and land right of way between the Northwestern States and Alaska.

Gen. Marshall said that the United States Army is forbidden by law to use the tanks, a number of which are at Fort Meade, Md., where they have been abandoned. An act of Congress forbids the Army to spend money for gasoline or repairs on World War motorized equipment.

Both light and medium weight, their speed is only 2½ to 3 miles per hour, making them unsuitable for the fast-moving blitzkrieg maneuvers of recent war games.

Gen. Marshall said the tanks can be released to Canada by the Secretary of War under authority permitting sale of obsolete equipment. One procedure that might be followed, it was understood, was to sell the tanks to some American manufacturer who in turn would sell them to the Canadians. The proceeds would be applied toward buying modern tanks. This procedure has been used in selling rifles, ammunition and planes to the British.

The Army is acquiring a "pretty fair force" of modern high speed tanks, meanwhile, Gen. Marshall said. Work has already begun on an experimental "mobile fortress," a tank equal in weight to the monsters Germany hurled across France, he disclosed. Emphasis in tank procurement, he added, will be on light and medium models.

Col. F. F. Worthington, commander of the new Canadian armored brigade, has been in Washington recently. Gen. Marshall said he might be here to negotiate for new tank models as well as the old ones.

Mayor LaGuardia, who lunched with the President, said the next meeting of the defense board would take place Monday in Washington, lasting perhaps two days.

LaGuardia Optimistic

Expressing optimism over the conferences with Canada on joint protection problems, LaGuardia said:

"I think there has been a common understanding between the two sides that it is a mutual problem and, of course, we are very much concerned with the defense of the North Atlantic Coast because it so happens that all the strategic points are in Canadian waters and naturally the bases just acquired in Newfoundland facilitate a great deal the actual working out of defense plans."

It is a safe assumption, LaGuardia said, that two bases will be located in the Newfoundland territory the United States acquires under the destroyer-bases deal with Britain.

Another disclosure by Gen. Marshall was that by next spring between 40,000 and 45,000 reserve officers would be in the Army, about one-half the number of officers required to command the projected Army of 1,200,000 Regulars, National Guard and selective service troops.

Figures on Planes

Gen. Marshall, confirming reports published in The Post yesterday, acknowledged that the Army had only about 300 of "the most modern combat types" of airplanes, but added that it had 1,500 "tactical" planes in the General Headquarters Force which "we would use."

Wholesale Commodity Index Rises in Week

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported yesterday a rise of 0.6 per cent in its wholesale commodity price index for the week ended August 31.

The increase lifted the index to 77.7 per cent of the 1926 average which the bureau said was 3.2 per cent above a year ago.

By DON HEROLD

For 20 years I've been looking for a pair of shoes which would mind their own business and let me alone.

I don't have freak feet. Just feet. But when my feet tire, I tire entirely.

I tried all kinds of shoes—up to $20. And all kinds of trick shoes. And still my feet nagged me.

A few months ago a friend told me about Mastershoes. They're just good-looking shoes—not M.D. shoes—but with a construction idea (pat. applied for) which makes them seemingly weightless, which makes breaking-in unnecessary, and which I know will end foot-fatigue for many people.

Mastershoes cradle the back of your foot in snug, restful comfort, but leave the front as free and flexible as if you wore slippers.

Maybe a pair of Mastershoes at $9 will be the end of your eternal shoe search for you. Will you take my word and go to a John Ward store today and try just 21 sample steps in a pair of them?

Two More Convicts Killed by Possemen

11 Still at Large After Prison Break Costing Six Lives

By the Associated Press

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 5.—Eleven convicts, most of them short-termers, remained at large tonight out of the 36 who staged a sensational Labor Day break at Cummins prison farm that has cost six lives.

Relentless possemen, after killing two of the desperados and capturing another early today, continued with the aid of track dogs efforts to round up the remaining fugitives believed scattered in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

A group of officers was reported trailing one of the felons in plantation country near Tillar, Ark. Another search went forward at Natchez, Miss. North Louisiana officers maintained vigilance on the chance others may have made their way to that sector.

Posses Kills Four

In resisting recapture four of the fleeing convicts were killed, two of them in a cabin near Winchester, Ark., today. A guard was slain at Cummins during the break and a posseman was killed near Columbia, La., where three high school students were held two nights and a day as hostages. Twenty-one have been retaken.

A trusty guard from Cummins kicked in a cabin door and killed James Scott, 21, serving one year for grand larceny, and Raymond Harrell, 24, serving 21 years for robbery, as the two fired on a posse led to their hideaway near Winchester today by dogs.

Gov. Carl E. Bailey told his press conference today the prison break, largest in the history of the State penal system, was "just one of those things where they thought they could run off" and not a result of the "trusty guard system."

Defends System

Defending the system, Bailey said to replace it would either require expenditure of several million dollars for installation of cell blocks or employment of sufficient paid guards to provide one guard for each ten men every eight hours."

The Governor said States that used cell blocks keep their prisoners "in idleness at the expense of the taxpayers", while Arkansas kept its prisoners engaged in healthful outdoor work at a profit of approximately $100,000 annually.

District Man Asks $100,000 For Arm Loss

Health Department Inspector Was Hurt In Trolley Crash

Harmon Burns, 39, of 2618 Quarry road northwest, sued the Capital Transit Co. in the District Court yesterday for $100,000 damages for the loss of his left arm in a collision of two street cars on July 27.

Burns, who is an inspector for the Health Department, was represented by Attorneys Alvin W. Newmyer and David G. Bress.

Burns' complaint asserted that his arm was crushed between two cars which collided at Seventeenth and H streets northwest. Because of the injuries, the arm was removed at the shoulder.

Newmyer said that Burns' arm was resting on a window ledge of the street car and was jolted outside the window when the motorman abruptly put on his brakes in an effort to avert the collision.

The complaint asked for a jury trial.

Youth Attempts To Attack Girl, 11, In Rock Creek Park

Park police last night launched a manhunt in Rock Creek Park after a young colored man had attempted a criminal attack on an 11-year-old girl.

The girl and a playmate were walking on a trail near Pierce Mill, she said, when the assailant stepped out from behind a tree and seized her. The playmate fled, and the girl managed to escape a few minutes later.

Police said the child had not been harmed.

Helene Chadwick, Star of Silent Films, Dies

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, Sept. 5.—Helene Chadwick, 41, star of silent pictures with a salary once reported at $2,000 a week, died in a hospital today.

Her physician attributed her death indirectly to injuries suffered last June when she stumbled over a chair.

The actress was born in Chadwick, N. Y., a town named after her father. She began work in pictures in 1917 and later was starred by Producer Samuel Goldwyn.

As her fortune turned she achieved more or less success in talking pictures as a character actress until 1935. Since then she had worked as an extra but always expressed confidence there would be a turn for the better.

Miss Chadwick's pictures included "The Cup of Fury," "Dangerous Curves Ahead, "Brothers Under the Skin," "Godless Men," "Quicksands," "Father and Son" and "Men Are Like That."

HELEN CHADWICK

She was the former wife of Director William Wellman. They were divorced in 1923.

Funeral services will be held Friday.

Arthur Stone Also Dies

Hollywood, Sept. 5 (AP).—Arthur Taylor Stone, 56, veteran of vaudeville and a character actor in silent pictures, died of a heart attack today.

Recently he had been working as a film make-up artist. In vaudeville he was a member of the team, Stone and Hayes. In silent pictures he appeared with such stars as the late Milton Sills, Colleen Moore and Richard Barthelmess. Funeral services will be held Friday.

Slain Man Found In Steamer Cabin

Baltimore, Sept. 5 (AP).—The body of a man with a bullet wound in the right temple was found in a cabin of the steamer State of Virginia when it docked here today.

Police Lieut. Henry J. Leineman, who investigated, said identification cards in the man's pocket bore the name Truman S. Russell, Springfield, Ohio. No gun was found in the cabin.

On the upper deck, directly above the cabin porthole, officers found fragments of several bills, including bills of $100 and $50 denominations. They said the money may have been torn up and thrown through the porthole, then blown back to the ship by the wind.

Miss Cosgrave Freed in Auto Death of Child

Mary Rita Cosgrave, 22, of Chevy Chase, Md., who was held jointly responsible by a coroner's jury Tuesday in the traffic death of Margaret Ann Watson, 11, of 5112 Connecticut avenue northwest, was freed in Police Court yesterday.

Assistant District Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin in charge of Police Court prosecutions, refused to issue papers against the young woman after a complete rehearing of the case in his office. He ordered a negligent homicide charge placed against James H. McDowell, colored, 23, of 327 Fourteenth place northwest, driver of a light delivery coupe.

McDowell immediately was arraigned before Judge John P. McMahon. He pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial. He was released under $1,000 bail.

McDowell and Miss Cosgrave both were held under the Negligent Homicide Act Tuesday after a 4-hour inquest at the District morgue.

The Watson child was struck and killed August 31 while crossing Connecticut avenue northwest, at Nebraska avenue with a playmate, Elizabeth Fentress, 13, of 4707 Connecticut avenue northwest.

McDowell said that his automobile, southbound on Connecticut avenue, struck the Fentress child but that the dead girl was knocked down by Miss Cosgrave, who was northbound on the thoroughfare.

Miss Cosgrave testified at the Morgue that her machine did not strike either of the children, but that the Watson girl was knocked under her wheels by McDowell's car. Elizabeth suffered a broken leg.

McLaughlin said he heard all of the witnesses who appeared at the Morgue before issuing papers against the colored youth.

Police Move on Anti-Draft Rally

Only one demonstrator was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. Several suffered minor injuries.

The conscription opponents first gathered at the Supreme Court at 10 p. m. and started marching to the Capitol led by Charles I. Stewart, chairman of the New York Committee for Inalienable Rights; Rabbi Moses Miller, of New York, chairman of the Jewish Peoples Committee; Miss Anna M. W. Pennypacker, of Philadelphia, and the Rev. Owen A. Knox, of Detroit.

They were met by Chesley W. Jurney, sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, who declared that demonstrations on the Capitol grounds were barred by an act of Congress unless permits were granted by the Speaker of the House or the Vice President.

Several in the crowd demanded to know why they couldn't pray on the steps. Jurney insisted a permit was necessary, and warned that violators faced a $500 fine and year in jail.

Pastor, Five Others Seized

As police and guards moved to push back the demonstrators, they started to chant the hymn, "We Shall Not Be Moved," and then "Onward Christian Soldiers," and stood their ground defiantly. Whereupon police seized Knox, who said he was pastor of the Bethlehem Methodist Church in Detroit, and five other male leaders.

The six were held in the Senate guardroom and questioned for 15 minutes and released, while the crowd shouted "Where's the Reverend Knox?" and "Is this democracy?" Several persons refused to move and started to pray, a woman screamed.

The situation was relieved by a man identifying himself as Jack Zucker, of Washington, business agent of the United Shoe Workers of America, Local 136, who asked police to allow him 5 minutes in which to disperse the crowd peacefully.

Urges Crowd to Move

Zucker was hoisted on the shoulders of two men. He said: "We are going to Speaker Bankhead to insist on our constitutional right to meet." He urged the crowd to move back to the Supreme Court.

There Private Larry Cates of the Capitol Police further eased the tension by calling out, "Let's sing." Smilingly he broke into "America," and was immediately joined by the demonstrators.

Joseph Gelders, of Birmingham, who said he was connected with the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, asked the crowd to be seated on the steps and suggested if there was a preacher left unarrested in the audience, "he is welcome to come forward" and lead the prayer.

The Rev. Harold Wilke, pastor of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Columbia, Mo., stepped out in front.

"We pray that we may not be forced to take up arms against our brothers," he said.

Then the crowd sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "We Ain't Gonna Study War No Mo'."

During the prayer and singing on the Supreme Court steps, someone turned in a riot call, bringing six scout cars and all available motorcycle police.

Only one person was arrested. He gave his name as Manny Gerst, 25, of Greenbelt, and was charged with disorderly conduct at the First Precinct Station. He put up $10 collateral.

Just before the Capitol Hill demonstration, a score of the anti-conscriptionists attempted to pass out handbills in front of the armory at Pennsylvania avenue and Sixth street northwest to members of the 260th Coast Artillery, who were leaving following drill.

An Army officer ordered the distribution to cease, stating that the action was a violation of the city laws. When the handbill leader refused to halt, he seized the pamphlets and tore them up. Guardsmen did likewise with the other handbills.

The Rev. Peyton Williams of St. Mary's Episcopal Church, Arlington, who had joined in calling the prayer meeting, declared after the dispersal:

"An effort was made by a group interested in democracy to hold a service of prayer on the Capitol grounds in the interest of defeating the conscription bill. The gathering was entirely orderly until disorder was provoked by the police. The leaders were taken into custody. It is difficult to understand how such a gathering could suffer such treatment at the hands of the law."

Earlier in the day 200 protesters gave up their march at the foot of Capitol Hill when police took away their placards. No arrests were made yesterday for pamphlet distribution; three were arrested Wednesday.

2,000 See Colored Pageant Depicting Race's Progress

Nearly 2,000 persons attended a musical pageant of 100 colored singers at Griffith Stadium last night celebrating 75 years of progress by their race.

The musical pageant, directed by Rev. J. C. Olden, was intended to express the spirit of the Negro from slave days to the present, and included camp meeting and plantation songs.

Choirs from Campbell, St. Paul and Methodist churches participated in the musical which included songs entitled "I'm So Glad Trouble Don't Last Always" and "Free at Last." The chorus was under the direction of Maurice Hill.

70% of Vagrants Seized in Parks Have Records

Seventy per cent of the 77 vagrants seized for sleeping in District parks Wednesday morning have police records, Park Policeman Bernard J. Beckmann, the arresting officer, revealed yesterday.

He said that the Department of Justice files showed that 54 of the men had been arrested for various offenses both here and in other jurisdictions. The records will be used to substantiate vagrancy charges which were placed against the suspects.

They will be arraigned in Police Court this morning.

Minnesota Cuts Gasoline Tax

Minnesota's motorists are probably the world's happiest today. The Keystone Automobile Club has announced that gasoline in that State has been reduced 1 cent in price due to the State Legislature's refusal to reenact an emergency levy passed in 1937.

The reduction, first since 1936, is expected to save Minnesota motorists approximately $5,000,000 annually. Other States having an emergency gas tax scheduled to terminate within the next few years include Florida, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Wide Changes Likely in Bill To Tax Profits

Mine Speaker Calls It an 'Expert's Dream' Of Taxpayers' Maze

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Extensive changes in the House-approved excess-profits tax bill appeared probable last night as the Senate Finance Committee concluded its three-day hearings on the "labyrinthian document."

Approximately 50 witnesses — something of a one-day record for a Congressional committee—were given a few minutes each under the watchful eye of Chairman Harrison in a session that lasted well into the evening.

They all had specific complaints about the measure, which was picturesquely described by a mine representative from Wallace, Idaho, as "an expert's dream of confusion to taxpayers."

Senators' Objection

When the Finance Committee meets in executive session this morning to consider the bill, the basic complaint of some Senators will be that the proposed levy is not a tax on excess profits alone but also represents an effort to limit "normal" corporate incomes and to obtain revenue.

These Senators—believed to form a majority of the committee—will, accordingly, seek to knock out of the bill the 4.1 per cent "penalty" tax on corporations choosing to compute their excess profits on the basis of their average earnings for the last four years.

Senators George, of Georgia, and Herring, of Iowa, have openly expressed themselves in favor of abolishing this "penalty," and others of the Democratic majority are known to be in sympathy with them.

To compensate for the loss of revenue this move would entail, a proposal is under consideration to raise the normal corporation income tax from 20.9 per cent to about 24 per cent. This increase would be applied to all corporations as a straight revenue measure and not, as in the present bill, just to those selecting a particular method of paying the excess profits levy.

Several Senators on the committee appear also to have agreed on the necessity of establishing a special board to hear "hardship cases" that may arise under operation of the bill.

Furthermore, it is expected that a clause will be inserted granting corporations permission to file consolidated returns under rules to be prescribed by the Treasury Department.

George's Views

Senator George said yesterday he hoped to remove the rate discrimination in the House bill between the two alternative methods of calculating excess profits. Under the present measure, rates for corporations choosing their average earnings as a basis for figuring excess profits range from 25 to 50 per cent; while those corporations choosing the "invested capital" method (ratio of earnings to capital) must pay from 20 to 45 per cent.

Another proposed alteration in the bill stems from criticisms brought Wednesday by the Defense Advisory Commission against Government "strings" that would be tied on new, privately built plants granted certain tax privileges.

Senator Herring asserted yesterday that he was in sympathy with the defense commission's complaint. Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said, on the other hand, that he favored writing certain new restrictions into the law. He declared that while he had full confidence in the present commission, its personnel might be changed. He added that he wanted the statute to insure as fas as possible that private manufacturers could not take advantage of the Government.

"I do not think that in its present shape the bill could possibly be administered," commented Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Caroline, another member of the committee. "It is going to require a great deal of revision."

At the committee hearings yesterday, Donald A. Callahan, of Wallace, Idaho, representing the Idaho Mining Association, drew loud laughter from his audience as he declared the bill contains the work of "swivel-chair experts who are intoxicated by their own ability to juggle words to meet every conceivable situation."

"We would like to take them out into the practical field of conducting business and show them the real facts of industrial life," he stormed. "Our most skilled operators now are not our engineers and our metallurgists but our accountants and tax attorneys who . . . must devote their trained talents to unraveling the mysteries of revenue laws.

"We prefer to do our mining in Idaho and not in the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Washington."

Waves of Bombers Strike At London in 7-Hour Raid

minutes. The all-clear signal came at 4:30 a. m. But a new alarm sounded at 5:20 a. m. This last alarm ended at 5:31 a. m.

Though the raids were severe, there seemed to be less activity than in some previous assaults.

The British Press Association reported a hospital was struck by a high explosive bomb and some casualties resulted. Two nearby houses were damaged. The locale was not given.

One bomb burst in a square in front of a block of tenements. The buildings were damaged, but casualties were minor. A woman was killed and two other persons injured when a bomb hit a house in a nearby street.

Crashing Plane Fires Houses

One German plane crashed in flames on two houses in the main thoroughfare of the working class district of a northeast town, setting them afire. A woman was killed and two others injured.

Bombs fell over a wide area and the sky was alight with antiaircraft fire.

Nazi bombers also were over eight towns in the London section. They crossed the east coast in great force.

Incendiary bombs were dropped in clusters.

Waves of German bombers beat at London Thursday, attempting to disrupt a session of Parliament and scattering bombs which damaged industrial property on the busy Thames.

"Industrial Installation" Hit

Last night the glare and thud of bursting explosives, the metallic cough of antiaircraft and the dancing pencils of searchlights came with the siren wail of the day's third alarm—at 9:17 p. m.

Just a few hours earlier, Parliament had broken off its session for three-quarters of an hour at the start of an afternoon raid in which strong formations of raiders struck at airfields on both sides of the Thames estuary.

The air ministry said they were driven back, but acknowledged that an "industrial installation" on the river was bombed and that some damage resulted.

The Germans raided the city's outskirts first at 10 a. m., bombing and disrupting some communications in the southeastern metropolitan area before they were driven back by British fighters miles in the sky.

Then, just 20 minutes after Commons assembled to hear Prime Minister Churchill's second war report, they returned again, touching off sirens that resounded in Parliament's ancient halls.

Meeting Suspended

First the galleries were cleared. The members waited ten more minutes and then suspended meeting. But they returned before the all-clear sounded.

Churchill himself made clear that only the fear of a "particular kind" of danger "in the vicinity" had caused the interruption. This oblique explanation was left without further amplification.

An air ministry communique said that 39 enemy aircraft were destroyed yesterday. Twenty British fighters were lost but the pilots of nine of these were reported safe.

The aerial struggle was heaviest in southeast England, but the northwest, too, was hard hit. Gas and water mains in one town in that area were smashed; a hospital was hit.

German Plants Also Bombed

New British losses at sea were acknowledged. The admiralty announced that the destroyers Invanhoe and Esk had been sunk and that a third, the Express, had been damaged, but was now in port.

But the Royal Air Force announced another in the now almost uninterrupted series of raids on German-held territory.

These, it was said, were the objectives bombed Wednesday night:

Synthetic oil plant, at Stettin, on the Baltic; concealed military objectives in the Hartz Mountains, the Thuringian Forest and the German Black Forest; a power station and aircraft factory, in Berlin itself; oil tanks at Magdeburg, freight yards south of Bremen; airdromes in northern France and Belgium; oil tanks at Cherbourg and the docks at Terneuzen. Two British planes were acknowledged as lost; one crashed on landing.

Here in England was an incident that had a certain drama of its own:

An aerial battle over a cemetery forced the mourners and clergy to leap into ditches and hedges. The funeral thus interrupted was for 14 British airmen who died in action Sunday.

Churchill Says Britsh 'Can Take It'

ler will not like this transference of destroyers. I have no doubt he will pay the United States out if ever he gets the chance. That is why I am very glad that the armed air and naval frontiers of the United States have been advanced along a wide arc into the Atlantic Ocean and that this will enable them to take danger by the throat while it is still hundreds of miles away from their homeland."

As for the Battle of Britain, Churchill listed 1,075 dead, a slightly larger number seriously wounded, and 800 houses smashed as the toll of air damage in August, "a real fighting month." He compared these figures with Britain's total of 45,000,000 people and 13,000,000 homes.

Britons Cautioned

The Royal Air Force, he declared, is inflicting losses of 3 to 1 in machines and 6 to 1 in fliers on the Germans.

Again Churchill cautioned Britons to remember that fall and winter conditions "cut both ways" and will not eliminate the threat of German invasion.

Then he disclosed that Britain had sent heavy troop and naval reinforcements "in a continuous stream" to the Near East.

The members howled with laughter as he added:

"This movement, plainly visible to the Italians, was not molested by them."

The Prime Minister touched briefly, too, on "the severe territorial mutilation" of Rumania. He took occasion to say that Britain does not propose" to recognize any territorial changes by force in the war.

No one, he said, knows how big "Hitler's empire" will be before the war is over. But he added:

"I have no doubt it will pass away as swiftly—perhaps more swiftly—than did Napoleon's army, although, of course, without any of its glitter or glory."

Brewster Aeronautical Corporation, 411 scout-bomber airplanes and 108 fighting planes.

Grumman Aircraft Engineering Co., 254 fighting and 286 torpedo-bomber planes.

Douglas Aircraft Corporation, 252 scout-bomber planes. (Some 70-odd of these will be used by the Army.)

Curtiss aeroplane division of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, 300 scout-observation planes.

In addition, the statement said, the Army had reached agreements with Grumman for 144 utility planes, with Edo Aircraft Corporation for 1,362 float-type landing gears and with Curuss for 150 advanced training planes.

anxious to do everything possible not to diminish the sovereignty of Latin American nations over their territories.

Simultaneously, the State Department indicated that all Latin-American nations would be welcome to use the facilities of the eight bases which this country will establish on sites obtained in the destroyer deal with Britain.

Representative Izac (Democrat), of California, member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he believed the United States soon will reach an agreement with Canada for the joint defense of Iceland in order to complete the "Atlantic defense barrier" protecting the Americas from Europe and Africa.

Calls Islands Vital

He said he believed Iceland is the only remaining gap in the Atlantic defense system. He felt that bases at the Galapagos and Cocos Island would be vital and has introduced legislation designed to acquire such bases.

The United States, meanwhile, moved swiftly to carry out terms of its trade with Great Britain. Eight old destroyers already have left the Boston Navy Yard, presumably headed toward Canada for delivery to the British navy. Others were being readied for the transfer.

Experts Inspect Bermuda Islands

Copyright by New York Times

Hamilton, Bermuda, Sept. 5.—Within a few hours of the docking of the United States cruiser St. Louis, which had brought their from Norfolk, Va., United States naval and military experts this afternoon set out on a tour of inspection while others flew over the islands in two planes from the warship.

Speed is the keynote of the visit and the experts swung into action less than four hours after the cruiser had arrived. As soon as the permission of the British vice admiral here had been obtained the two planes took off.

Rear Admiral John W. Greenslade, head of the United States delegation—officially designated as a board of inspection—revealed in a press conference that for the time being the United States views its potential air bases as being principal patrol posts rather than as establishments for a heavy concentration of service craft and warship maintenance equipment.

He said the St. Louis probably would be here three days.

Legislation Not Needed

London, Sept. 5 (AP).—Lord Chancellor Caldecote told the House of Lords today it was not believed that legislation by the British Parliament would be necessary in the transfer of air and naval bases on British possessions in the Western Hemisphere to the United States.

case of men, y rule and regulation instead of by the arbitrary action of one man as in the Overton-Russell amendment."

Willkie last week denounced the Russell-Overton amendment as an attempt to "Sovietize" America and twice challenged President Roosevelt to express his stand on it.

His meeting with the Republicans ironed out some friction between the regular organization and the new and independent Willkie clubs, he said. It served also to launch formally the organized campaign exactly two months before election day.

Willkie said he had charged the G. O. P. chieftains to begin an "aggressive, vigorous crusade to preserve the American way of life," and that response of party workers was "perfectly magnificent."

The conferees shouted "No" when Willkie asked them in the presence of reporters whether there was a dissident voice who did not believe that the ticket of Willkie and his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, would be elected in November.

Willkie talked during the morning with Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, a leading Republican isolationist, and voiced sharp criticism of President Roosevelt for having failed to ask Congressional approval of the British-United States exchange of old United States destroyers for American naval and air bases in British possessions.

He said Vandenberg agreed with him that Mr. Roosevelt's action in completing the agreement before he announced it was "an arbitrary use of power, contrary to the spirit of our laws and the spirit of our free institutions."

Willkie and Vandenberg do not see eye to eye on foreign policy, but Willkie said he would ask the Michigan Senator to make several speeches for him in the fall campaign.

Republican National Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, telegraphed that "reports from all over the country indicate a united Republican Party, together with several millions of American Democrats, Progressives and Independents, will win a great American victory in November."

2 Former French Air Chiefs Accused

Lachambre, Cot Now in U. S. Criticized at Riom

Copyright by New York Times

Riom, France, Sept. 5.—Guy La Chambre and Pierre Cot, both one-time ministers, are the first two leading politicians whose names were officially mentioned in connection with the trial by the supreme court here of leading figures of the former French regime charged generally with responsibility for the war and the subsequent defeat.

After formal inauguration of Marcel Deveny as substitute judge, the court today heard the state's attorney's plea that M. La Chambre and M. Cot should be indicted and warrants should be issued for their arrest. It is understood that both are at present in America.

That the two former air ministers should become the first to be accused in the forthcoming trial does not surprise public opinion in view of the revelations since the armistice of the woeful inferiority of the French air arm when war was declared. It is generally accepted now that on September 3, 1939, France had in her hangars no more than 500 modern chaser planes and only 16 modern bombers.

M. Cot was air minister in the Sarraut cabinet, which preceded Leon Blum's popular front government in 1936, and retained that portfolio for several years. He was much criticized during his tenure of office for the slowness of French airplane production, which in 1937 admittedly was about 35 per cent behind schedule at a time when in Germany execution of Marshal Hermann Goering's program was proceeding according to plan—2,600 new machines yearly.

It is alleged that M. Cot's policy was based on Soviet support in case of war and that he wilfully neglected to build up the French air force because he relied on Russian aid in the air.

M. La Chambre became air minister under Premier Edouard Daladier during the war months. It is alleged that he systematically concealed the weakness of the French air force from Parliament and issued communiques exaggerating the possibilities of production. M. La Chambre was well known as M. Daladier's protege.

Paris Paper Says Bonnet Tried Hard to Avert War

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, Sept. 2 (Delayed).—Allegations that former Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet did his best to preserve peace in the last days of August, 1939, were made for the first time by the Paris newspaper Le Matin today in what is claimed to be a true account of the diplomatic events which precipitated the war a year ago.

Bonnet returned to Vichy tonight after spending a few days in Paris, during which he met an intimate friend, Count Fernand de Brinon, Otto Abetz, German high commissioner for the French occupied territories, and other prominent German officials.

Bonnet's presence in Paris coincided with that of Vice Premier Pierre Laval, and the talk of reshuffling the Vichy cabinet as well as Le Matin's revelations may eventually mean his comeback to play a prominent role in French politics—perhaps as foreign minister in replacement of Paul Baudoin.

Called "Clear-Sighted"

Le Matin, after stressing the fact that the French constitution of 1875 was violated when Daladier declared war on Germany without convening Parliament, recalls besides the three "clear-sighted" statesmen, Pierre Laval, Gaston Bergery and Pierre-Etienne Flandin, who "attempted to avert the catastrope, there is a fourth, Georges Bonnet, who would have succeeded in preventing war if it had not been for the British bellicose spirit and the stubborness of the Polish government."

"On August 28, the European crisis reached its climax," the paper said. "It seemed then that war was unavoidable but it could have been averted if two essential truths had been understood in Paris, London and Warsaw—first, the fact that Chancellor Hitler was not 'bluffing' and that he wanted complete settlement of Germano-Polish problems; second, that suppression of the 'foolish' terms of the Versailles Treaty could no longer be postponed."

Met With Skepticism

Le Matin also said that Chancellor Hitler left open the door to further discussions of Polish problems, and that M. Bonnet, on August 30, wired the French Ambassador at Warsaw, Leon Noel, that Herr Hitler was accepting direct conversations and also wired Berlin and Warsaw demanding that German and Polish troops withdraw several miles from the border in order to avoid an incident.

However, Bonnet's personal initiative was met with skepticism by both the French Ambassador in Berlin and the one in Warsaw, Georges Coulondre, Ambassador to Berlin, was quoted as wiring back:

"Chancellor Hitler's reply is too brutal. It is more like a "diktat" imposed on a vanquished state than an acceptance of negotiations with a sovereign state."

However, Bonnet was allegedly undauted by the many stumbling blocks in the path of peace, and insisted on demanding that London the same day join a common Franco-British demarche on Poland. This was accepted by the British government, and Ambassador Noel was instructed to call on Col. Josef Beck, Polish foreign minister, and urge him to make an immediate and favorable reply to the German suggestion of direct conversations.

Waited All Day

"Berlin awaited all day the demarche of the Polish plenipotentiary," insists Le Matin. On the morning of August 31 there was still no Polish reply in Berlin and the French Ambassador, M. Coulondre, the paper said, telephoned M. Bonnet from Berlin:

"There is much discontent in German circles that nothing has been done so far on the Polish side for conciliation. It is feared the Reich may order its troops to launch an attack if there is still no reply by noon. It is necessary that the Polish Ambassador, Lipski, be sent to Berlin immediately to start negotiations as plenipotentiary."

"There was not a single minute to spare," according to Le Matin, "and M. Bonnet immediately informed London while instructing M. Noel in Warsaw to make another demarche on Beck, who promised a reply at noon.

"It was not until 6 o'clock that evening that M. Lipski called on the Wilhelmstrasse without full powers to negotiate, which led Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop to refuse the conversations." military and civilians were barred from them. More than an hour after the central riot had been halted sporadic fighting still was going on in other parts of the city.

One Iron Guardist, who seemed

nozzles on buildings and scores of them were damaged.

They dismantled sidewalk cafes, throwing steel chairs at gendarmes.

Evening promenaders fled for shelter, and many were injured in the scramble.

The Iron Guardists had gathered in front of the National Theater at the precise hour of the outbreaks of last Tuesday night, in which shots were fired at a lighted window of the Palace where the King was in residence.

Suddenly, the gendarmes sprang from hiding, fixing their bayonets and unlimbering machine guns and gas equipment. The Iron Guardists stood firm.

One of them, standing near this correspondent, wrested a bayoneted rifle from a gendarme and threw it on the ground. I saw many people trampled. A man in a sidewalk cafe sank to the terrace, his head split open by a hurled chair.

Crowd Seizes Cars

Leaders of the shouting crowd argued at length with army officers, who finally agreed to let the demonstration continue.

But just then, two armored cars spurting hard streams of water from their revolving turrets rolled up. Young guardists rushed upon them, throwing cafe chairs.

Four men climbed to the top of one of the machines and took control of the protruding nozzles. As the car raced down the street they turned the water loose upon the nearby buildings.

All streets were occupied by the no more than 17, called to me as he ran panting down the street with a boyonet at his back:

"Come around tomorrow night—same time, same place. This is only the beginning!"

At the approach of midnight, machine guns were set up in front of the palace, where at dawn the King had given up substantially the last of his powers.

The new Antonescu government was expected to include pro-Nazi George and Constantine Bratianu, Liberal Party leaders, and Juliu Maniu, peasant chieftain, who bitterly opposed Carol's cession of Transylvania to Hungary under an Axis-dictated settlement.

Stern Measures Ahead

It was expected to be a small, compact body pledged to stern measures in an effort to hold what is left of Rumania after cessions to Russia, Hungary and Bulgaria. Bulgaria has not yet moved into southern Dobruja, but Rumania has been negotiating with her for deliverance of that territory.

Carol was reported considering retirement at his summer palace in the mountains at Sinai, and there were expressed beliefs in government quarters that he might abdicate, perhaps to rejoin his friend, Mme. Magda Lupescu, who was understood to be aboard the royal yacht at Istanbul after fleeing the country four days ago.

Carol once before gave up his rights to the throne and followed her into exile. That was when he was known as a "play-boy prince." But in the last ten years since he returned to rule he has been Rumania's strong man.

The monarch's present powers consist of such petty functions as handing out decorations, ordering money coinage, signing treaties. He cannot even appoint ministers without Antonescu's approval.

Hungarian troops moved into Transylvania as Rumanian soldiers retired, but there were steadily mounting reports of armed clashes between Hungarian and Rumanian peasants. In the border town of Sighet more than 150 were reported slain.

The Rumanian general staff issued a communique saying the northwest corner of the province had been occupied by Hungarian troops by nightfall, including the cities of Satu Mare, Carel Mare, and Sighet. Complete occupation of the 17,000 square miles is expected within a week.

"Royal Graciousness"

Gen. Antonescu said his powers were derived from "royal graciousness" on the part of Carol, and one of his first acts was to order the arrest of Gen. Bangliu who, as chief of gendarmes, supervised the mass execution of the Iron Guard assassins of former Premier Armand Calinescu.

By proclamation, the general also made it clear that "persecution" of the Iron Guard (a Fascist organization) would cease immediately. A group of Iron Guardists attempted to assassinate Carol Monday night.

Antonescu, in obvious reference to Hungary's gain of Transylvania, said "we will not put the veil of forgetfulness over this, but the veil of justice."

Haggard King Carol, after the all-night drama in which he despairingly turned over his country's destiny to the grim-faced general, went to bed. Antonescu, however, spent a half hour at the German Legation where he was said to have assured Adolf Hitler's Minister there that there was no necessity for sending Nazi troops to restore order.

Then he conferred with the Italian Minister for a half hour.

The inside story of the dramatic palace sessions which saw Antonescu's replacement of Carol was learned last night. It began with the Iron Guard uprising Tuesday night. When its extent became known, Premier Gigurtu was asked to resign and Antonescu, who had been imprisoned in a monastery, was released and invited to form a new government.

This hard-boiled general immediately ordered all Rumanian generals to fly to Bucharest immediately, obtained their full adherence to the move he planned, then reported to Carol. Wednesday night he was ready—but only on condition that the court clique surrounding the King be dismissed and all Carol's authority transferred to him. Carol hedged, or tried to, by announcing that Mme. Lupescu, who was blamed for Antonescu's dismissal from the army in 1935, was no longer in the picture, and others also were out of the way. But he insisted on clinging to his own royal powers.

Antonescu then told the King the army was behind him, and stalked from the palace. But Carol called him back.

The King, who has lost 33 pounds in the last few months, gave in at this conference and signed away his powers at dawn.

Rumanians Clash With Hungarians

and soldiers weeping.]

Col. Strat, organizer of a "Legion of Death," which was reported preparing to resist the Hungarians with a force estimated at 3,500 men, was still at his frontier post of Sacueni, having defied the Rumanian government's order to leave.

Deep in the Carpathian Mountains, in the area of Transylvania ceded to Hungary, numerous fatal outbreaks were reported.

In southern Transylvania, which remains in Rumania, angry citizens at Arad broke into Hungarian and German shops and attacked Germans and Hungarians on the streets.

Germans Beaten

At Timisoara Germans were beaten and stripped.

In Cluj workmen in Hungarian-owned plants established an armed guard after they had been driven out by Rumanian soldiers.

Hungarian soldiers began the occupation of northern Transylvania yesterday, carrying the ancient flags of the Magyars back toward the high slopes of the Carpathian Mountains.

The first contingent of 2,000 Hungarian troops—the advance units of 80,000—arrived like conquerors in a medieval pageant, led by the Hungarian regent, Nicholas Horthy, on a white charger.

New Kind of Conquest

But it was a new kind of conquest, familiar to Axis diplomacy, and not the old conquest of the sword. By prearrangement—the prearrangement made by Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini when they ordered Rumania to give up this area it won rom Hungary in the World War settlement—the Hungarians moved in. By prearrangement, Rumania's forces moved out.

Transylvania was under the harsh, quieting hand of martial law—imposed by the Rumanian government.

Four Rumanians and one Hungarian, killed in one of the many bitter struggles which had followed the surrender by King Carol's government of one more part of Rumania, were buried here in private lest the fighting start all over again.

Through the streets of the city marched dusty Rumanian battalions, retiring from northernmost Transylvania.

Man on Destroyer Describes Shelling

Dodecanese Fort Fails to Answer British Navy Guns

By Larry Allen,
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Fleet in the Mediterranean, Sept. 5.—From the rolling bridge of a British destroyer I watched Britain's Mediterranean ships throw tons of high explosives against Scarpanto, Italian island stronghold, yesterday.

Scarpanto lies southwest of Rhodes in the strongly fortified Dodecanese island group — an ancient battleground for Phoenicians, Greeks and Romans.

For a whole week we had been on the go, seeking battle with the Italian fleet without success. Now, after a sleepless night on a destroyer that moved like a wounded whale in the heavy seas, we were in the lee of the island, nearly deafened by the roar of the big guns.

Direct Hits Reported

The fleet's air bombers already had attacked Rhodes, giving that island its first taste of an aerial attack since the war's beginning.

British officers said they had made many direct hits on military targets.

The fleet bombardment was something else, and the British gunner's grim delight was only too plain as they strained muscle and eye to pound the island.

The Dodecanese Islands were attacked after the British fleet put on one of its mightiest displays of fighting power in the Mediterranean, plainly within sight of the Italian coast, for a week.

Italians Steam Away

But the British action did not bring Premier Mussolini's sea power into the open for a showdown fight.

Actually the Italian fleet was sighted only once and then it was some 15 miles away. The British said the Italian ships were steaming away.

Italian airdromes at Morizza and Calato, in Rhodes, were heavily bombed by the fleet's aircraft at dawn yesterday, the British said, and a number of planes were destroyed at Calato and ammunition dumps were set on fire. Barracks also were reported in flames as the bombers made direct hits.

Hangars, Gas Stores Hit

The British bombers reported they hit the two main hangars at Morizza and dropped their loads as well on gasoline stores, which sent huge sheets of flame into the air. Barracks and workshops likewise were hit.

These attacks occurred, the fliers said, when the Italians apparently were asleep and off guard.

Earlier, on August 31, British submarines accompanying the fleet sighted and torpedoed one enemy unit.

The Italians repeatedly bombed the British fleet both in the vicinity of Malta and the Dodecanese Islands, losing five planes under havy antiaircraft fire from British warships and in air battles.

Islands Shelled

I was the first American correspondent permitted aboard one of the destroyer leaders accompanying the fleet. From this destroyer, which Italian broadcasts had reported "sunk," I saw the big British ships give the Dodecanese Islands the worst shelling in their history.

The British fleet, eastern and western units, formed a formidable line of steel as it cruised the Mediterranean for nearly a week, meeting nothing more serious than attacks by Italian bombers.

After twice zigzagging in the hope of finding the Italian fleet, the ships headed in the direction of Malta. A few hours later it took up the search again.

Bulletins Announce Action

On the night of September 3 bulletins were posted in our destroyer announcing that "tomorrow" there would be action.

It was almost impossible to sleep on board this destroyer, but no one seemed to want sleep anyhow with the prospect of action ahead.

The ship rode like a roller coaster at an amusement park. Huge sprays of water flew over the bow. Water swept aft along the decks and I was almost dizzy trying to keep my footing. The destroyer seemed to float on its side rather than on its bottom.

Action came then at dawn Wednesday. I let go of the rail of my bunk and tumbled out onto the floor next to a ton of T. N. T., and clambered up a steel ladder to the top deck through a line of seamen passing up shells to the gunners.

Concussion Fierce

The brown hills of Scarpanto looked lovely in the faint pink light of the rising sun, and we caught a whiff of pines from shore.

The guns of the destroyers spoke. The noise was enough to blast my ear drums out of my head. The whole thing threw me against the bridge rail and my ears felt like the inside of a tolling church bell.

Then I stuffed wads of cotton into my ears. I was just in time to deaden the concussion of the second shell the British let loose.

My helmet bounced off and fell over my eyes. I threw it back. A few hundred yards ahead on Scarpanto stood a white house, the residence of the Italian governor, clearly visible.

Shore Batteries Silent

But the whole Island seemed to be asleep when the first shells went crashing into the brown hills, and the barracks and seaplane hangars in the harbor.

Time after time the guns spoke. On the south side of the island two cruisers were shelling the Italian airdrome.

We expected fire in reply, but the Italian shore batteries were silent.

Half an hour after our first shells went screaming shoreward, our gunners stopped and we moved off.

The sun was coming up more quickly now and the skies were brightening. Suddenly Italian planes appeared overhead, and bombs began falling. The planes were quite high and the bombs fell in the sea over a wide expanse until the whole sea looked like a watery garden fed by geysers.

The fleet moved steadily away, undeterred by the Italian fliers.

Two submarine alarms put us on the alert a little later, but the fleet moved on to Alexandria without further incident.

British Miss Contact

London, Sept. 5 (AP).—Mediterranean operations of the British fleet during a six-day period "have been entirely successful," except that no contact was made between our main forces and enemy warships," an admiralty communique said tonight.

The statement added that the British submarine Parthina, operating in the central Mediterranean, on August 31 made two hits on an Italian cruiser and destroyer force.

The eastern Mediterranean fleet was attacked September 2 by enemy aircraft and shot down five German Junkers 87 dive-bombers, the communique said.

Included in the fleet arm which attacked the Dodecanese Islands were the cruisers Sidney and Orion, which "left none of the surrounding buildings intact" after blasting Italian positions with 6-inch shells, said the admiralty.

Record Number Of Parole Cases Slated for Hearing

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 5 (AP).—One hundred and four convicts, the largest number of prisoners ever to be docketed for a single parole hearing, will have their cases reviewed Wednesday by Parole Director Herman M. Moser.

No parole hearings were held last month causing a backlog of cases, parole officials explained.

The leading cases to be heard Wednesday include:

Houston Greenway, serving 15 years for assault with intent to rob in Prince Georges County, in 1934.

David E. Burt, serving seven years for storebreaking, larceny and receiving stolen goods in Prince Georges County in 1938.

Earl D. Powers, sentenced to seven years for unauthorized use of an automobile in Montgomery County in 1938.

Richard Williams, colored, sentenced to seven years for robbery in Montgomery County in 1938.

Great Mediterranean Battle Reported Costly to England

By the Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 5.—British Italian air and naval fighting of a scope hitherto unreported from the Mediterranean has broken upon that sea which Italians like to call "ours."

One furious engagement carried the war into the Dodecanese Islands, with tangling of bombing planes, cruisers, destroyers and motor torpedoboats.

The Italian high command, picturing its own forces as the victors, reported today that in this and a western Mediterranean engagement 6 British warships, including 2 cruisers, were damaged by bombs, 12 British planes were destroyed, and a cruiser and two destroyers were "successfully" attacked by torpedoboats.

Admit Loss of Four Planes

The Italians acknowledged loss of four planes and one of their M. A. S. craft (motoscafi antisommergibili—antisubmarine motor torpedo boats).

"With the purpose of protecting" a large British convoy in the eastern Mediterranean, said today's communique, "enemy naval and air forces attempted to attack our naval bases in the Aegean in the early hours before dawn yesterday."

Two British plane formations, flying from carriers or land bases, blasted at Italian airfields at Gadurra and Marizza, in the Dodecanese Islands, while naval units turned their heavy guns on Scarpanto, southernmost of the Dodecanese group.

Attack Repelled

The Italians acknowledged only the wrecking of two of their planes on the ground from the air attacks and only "slight damage to civilian dwellings" and civilian casualties from the shelling.

"The intervention of our pursuit planes and antiaircraft batteries soon repulsed the attack, shooting down seven enemy planes," the high command said, and then, "with the enemy repulsed, our air forces began a counter-attack" in which "four ships were seriously hit and damaged and five pursuit planes shot down."

Italian torpedoboats, 69-foot craft with speeds up to 47 knots, "successfully" attacked a British cruiser and two destroyers in Caso Strait, southwest of Scarpanto. One of them "failed to return."

Two Cruisers Hit

Meanwhile, hundreds of miles away, near the western end of the Mediterranean, the high command reported, two cruisers of a British unit "navigating off the Algerian coast" were hit with large-caliber bombs by Fascist fliers "and big flames were seen on the deck of one of them."

Four British planes were reported shot down in north Africa and one in east Africa, where the British raided the airfield at Javello.

Libya Raided All Day

Cario, Egypt, Sept. 5 (AP).—British air forces carried out sustained raids all day yesterday on all the principal Italian airdromes in eastern Libya, including Tobruk, El Tamini, Bomba, El Gubbi and El Gazala, the Royal Air Force announced tonight.

Last Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Agnes Mullen

Funeral services for Mrs. Agnes G. Mullen, wife of Frank E. Mullen, 14 East Thornapple street, Chevy Chase, Md., who died suddenly at her home Wednesday, will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Washington.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Mullen is survived by a son, Richard F. Mullen, Chevy Chase, a brother and seven sisters. She was a native of Montclair, N. J., and before coming to Chevy Chase 12 years ago lived in Washington about eight years.

NYA to Present Radio Concerts

National Youth Administration symphonic and concert orchestras will launch a series of Sunday morning radio programs, over Columbia Broadcasting System networks, starting September 29, Administrator Aubrey Williams said yesterday.

The broadcasts, noncommercial, will be sponsored by Mrs. Roosevelt, Mayor LaGuardia of New York, and James G. Petrillo, president, American Federation of Musicians.

Williams characterized the programs as a logical development of the recent NYA audition contest leading to formation of the Stokowski All-American Symphony Orchestra.

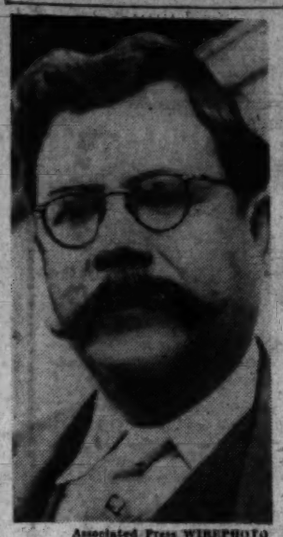
Mexican Troops Patrol Highways



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GRACIANO SANCHEZ, head of the Mexican National Confederation of Peasants, numbering 3,000,000, said yesterday that 80,000 of their number were ready to take up arms in support of President Cardenas against a revolt predicted by a leader of the party of Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan

Soldiers Reported Sped to Stronghold Of Almazan

By Jack O'Brien

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Mexico City, Sept. 5.—Administration spokesmen insisted tonight that a projected revolution by Gen. Juan Andreu Almazan, defeated Mexican Presidential candidate, had "already failed miserably," despite recurrent reports of rebel activities outside of the capital.

It was the government's contention that the oppositionist leader, who is in the United States, had lost face with his followers when he said recently a rebellion would succeed "with or without" him. This was taken as an indication of his unwillingness to lead a revolt. One member of the administration said that, according to official information, the Almazanista uprising was supposed to have started today.

Strikes Reported Scheduled

On the other hand, opposition quarters predicted that Gen. Almazan would sound the cry of rebelion in Mexico "within a few days," unless the government gave in to his claim on the Presidency. It was said that insurgent forces were awaiting "merely the signal" from their leader to start their fight against the "imposition" of the government's candidate, Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho.

[An International News Service dispatch reported that Almazan will make his supreme bid for power on September 10, when he will initiate a series of strikes. September 10 is the date when the official Mexican Congress will declare Avila Camacho President-elect of Mexico.]

[Graciano Sanchez, head of the National Confederation of 3,000,000 peasants, announced 80,000 trained members were ready to take up their rifles in support of the administration which backed Avila Comancho against Almazan in the disputed and bloody July presidential election, the Associated Press reported.]

Case of Jitters

The uncertainty of the situation gave rise today to one of the cases of jitters that the Capital has experienced in a long time—an ailment which may or may not have been planned deliberately by oppositionist leaders. Reiterated assurances from the war ministry and other government departments did little to lessen the nerevousness.

Officials at the Interior Department even went so far as to say that Gen. Almazan, despite his recent verbal attacks on President Lazaro Cardenas, could return to Mexico "as freely as before." It was added, however, that he might be "restrained" should his actions after arrival endanger public order.

A sample of some of the unconfirmed reports that abounded in the city was one to the effect that rebel forces were active in the state of Guerrero, home of Gen. Almazan and reputedly one of his strongholders. It was said that federal troops were involved in the movement.

Colonel Reported Slain

Reports published in the usually reliable newspaper Excelsior said federal troops had been dispatched to the vicinity of Morelia, in the state of Michoacan, after several farmers had been shot to death in clashes with army reserves.

At Monterrey, where Gen. Almazan commanded the military zone for 12 years prior to his campaign for the presidency, it was reported that a former army colonel, Jose Maria Vargas, was slain in an altercation which supposedly sprang from a labor dispute.

Newspapers in Mexico City carried a statement today by War Minister Augustin Castro in which he denied categorically reports of trouble outside of the capital, asserting that the electoral struggle had passed and with it "all cause for strife." He warned, nevertheless, that the army was on the alert and ready to act swiftly in the event of disturbances.

Defense Sidelights

New Weapon Offered to U.S. By Frenchman

New York, Sept. 5 (INS).—Because the French government refused to "use anything new," P. George Ducarpe, 51-year-old inventor, arrived in New York today to show U. S. ordnance experts detailed plans for an airplane machine gun which he claims fires faster, stays cooler, and jams less than any gun known.

He said he intended to confer with military experts in Washington and explain his invention to them in greater detail soon. Of the French government's refusal to use the weapon, Ducarpe said tersely:

"They wouldn't use anything new. That's why they lost to Hitler."

President Roosevelt nominated Maj. Gen. Ellard Arthur Walsh, of the Minnesota National Guard, yesterday to be a major general in the National Guard of the United States, and Brig. Gen. Gordon Cloyd Hollar, of the Iowa National Guard, similarly to be a brigadier general.

Seattle, Sept. 5 (AP).—Boeing Aircraft Co. and the Aeronautical Mechanics Union (A. F. of L.) today reported a "full agreement" on differences which threatened the big bomber producing plant with a strike closure last month.

"As a result," the company and union said in a joint statement, issued after a union meeting last night, "we are in a position to carry out effectively and without delay the needs of the national defense program for Boeing flying fortresses."

Maj. Sidney P. Simpson, aide to the Assistant Secretary of War, expressed gratification at the settlement "without the expense and delay of an arbitration.

Defense commission officials yesterday expected an early decision, perhaps in three weeks, on establishment of a tin smelter in the United States to free this country from complete dependence on Far-Eastern tin supplies.

Seeking an operator who can assure both an effective smelter and a satisfactory tin ore supply, the commission has been conferring with all firms interested in building and operating to refine Bolivian ore.

Among those considered, a commission expert said, are Phelps Dodge Corporation, American Metal Co., American Smelting & Refining Co., National Lead Co., and Bolivian intetrests controlling tin mines.

House Votes For Trial Of Enlistment

Fish Plan for 60-Day Delay on Conscription Approved by 185-150

ate, which voted, 43 to 41, against a similar amendment before approving the Burke-Wadsworth bill.

The Fish amendment would authorize the President immediately after enactment of the bill to call for 400,000 volunteers from the 18-35 age group for one-year enlistments in the armed forces. If 200,000 men volunteered during the next 60 days, only 200,000 would then be drafted. If 400,000 men volunteered, none would be drafted.

Simultaneously with an intensive recruiting campaign during the 60-day period, registration and classification of men for military training would be carried out, as provided in the bill. If voluntary enlistment failed to meet the Army's needs by mid-November, according to supporters of the Fish amendment, the draft then could go into immediate operation.

The conscription debate was conducted in an atmosphere of tension, with crowded galleries twice warned against demonstrations and several Representatives shouting defiance from the floor at all efforts to "intimidate" them. Capitol police had broken up an antidraft picket line near the Capitol steps shortly before debate began.

Cox Assails "Cowards"

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, a frequent critic of the Administration but an ardent supporter of the draft bill, told his colleagues they would stand exposed as "a miserable and cowardly collection of politicians" if they adopted the Fish amendment.

The amendment "is simply a way out" for Congressmen seeking to avoid political embarrassment, he charged.

"The people of this country believe an emergency exists," he declared. "This Congress knows an emergency exists. The time has come for men who love their country to stand up and be counted."

A rumble of booing and laughter came from the Republican side of the aisle as the Georgian shouted that the House, if it approved the amendment, "might just as well close the door of this chamber and go home and stay home."

Representative Smith (Democrat), of Illinois, another opponent of the amendment, asked whether it was merely "the long arm of coincidence" that the 60-day trial of volunteer method would delay the drafting of any man into the Army until after November 5, election day.

Majority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), of Tennessee, quoted Napoleon's dictum: "Time is everything."

"If we have the courage to get an Army by this democratic method of selection," he cried, "then let us have the courage to get it now. Let us let the world know we are getting ready today, not 60 days from now."

He said an added 60 days for defense preparations might have meant the difference between freedom and slavery for several European republics, adding in reference to the United States:

"I am very fearful that to wait means more war."

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, House sponsor of the draft bill, asserted that adoption of the Fish amendment would "throw a monkey wrench" into Army expansion plans.

South Stands Fast

Southern Democrats voted in an almost solid bloc against the amendment, while all but a handful of Republicans supported the amendment.

A strong indication that Administration forces would have difficulty holding in line Democrats from the North and East came when Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, an influential New Dealer, threw his support behind the amendment.

"There is no danger to America that is so imminent that it is necessary to provide at this time an outright conscription law," McCormack said. "The amendment sets up the draft machinery and at the same time encourages voluntary enlistments. This amendment strengthens the bill."

The amendment would authorize the President to issue a second call for 400,000 men at any time after January 1. Another 60-day period of voluntary enlistment would follow the second call to the colors, with the draft machinery in readiness to make up any difference between the quota and the number of volunteers.

Before acting on the Fish amendment the House approved a proposal by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to credit against the draft quota of each State the number of men volunteering during the 60-day period. Thus a State expected to produce 15,000 men as its share of the President's call for 400,000 would need to draft only 5,000, if 10,000 of its citizens had entered the Army during the voluntary enlistment drive. The Nichols amendment was approved by a standing vote of 133 to 129.

Still awaiting action by the House is the controversial "draft industry" amendment added to the Burke-Wadsworth bill in the Senate. Another issue likely to stir sharp debate is the House Military Affairs Committee's recommendation that all men from 21 to 45 register for compulsory training. The Senate bill covers only men from 21 to 31.

What Conscription Means to You

Student Aviators May Escape Draft

(Editor's Note: With conscription a certainty, The Post is presenting a series designed to answer everyone's questions about the effect of the draft on him. The series is based on legislation that has passed the Senate and the plans drawn up by selective service specialists since the World War. This is the thirteenth article. Questions are invited.)

By George Thorpe

Are 50,000 aviators, trained by the Civil Aeronautics Board for the Nation's air defenses, to be "grounded" for 12 months in a conscription camp?

Today, the program the Administration sponsored as a reservoir of pilots for the military and naval aviation branches has turned out 10,000 licensed airmen, 1,100 of whom have completed 80 flying hours in training—equivalent to the basic course at the Army's flying schools.

Seventeen thousand more will have finished the ground and flight courses necessary for a private license by the 15th of this month and, roughly, 30,000 other student fliers will be in training at approved, CAB schools by January, it is expected.

No Provision For Exemption

Yet there is no legislative provision for the exemption or deferment of these potentially valuable service airmen from the draft and a year's interruption of their aviation training.

CAB representatives, who say the amateur fliers would be wasted in conscription camps, point out that of 313 youths in the "experimental program" which started in mid-1939, 103 qualified for the Army Air Corps in which they are now officers.

The student fliers, all of whom must have completed two years in college, study many courses similar to those taught at Randolph Field, Texas, and Pensacola, Fla., training centers for Army and Navy branches.

The answer to the problem of the CAB student is the same as that of many others in the conscription machinery; in the end, the decision depends on the discretion of the local board.

Since there is nothing in the legislation that would exempt these specially qualified youths they must register. Then along with thousands of other they will fill out questionnaires.

At this point the boards must decide: (1), whether all CAB students will be deferred, or (2), those who have completed their 35-hour courses and are licensed amateur fliers, or (3), only the advanced 80-hour airmen.

It can be said almost certainly that the last group will be, as they actually have finished courses which bulk large in the curricula at the military flying schools.

Should they wish to avoid all possibility of being conscripted they should apply for places at these Army and Navy institutions, military men say.

Meanwhile, draft-age citizens pondered these questions:

If conscripted will I be sent to a training camp near my home?

In general the answer to this question is yes. The Army will try to keep trainees as near home as possible, if for no other season than economy. Naturally it will be cheaper for the Government to send a District trainee to Fort George G. Meade, near Laurel, Md., than to Fort Sam Houston, at San Antonio, Texas, for example.

However, it is expected that to a certain extent a trainee's special qualifications will govern his camp assignment.

Various Camps in Area

Thus, a Washington man who is an engineer in private life would undoubtedly be sent to nearby Fort Belvoir, Va., an engineer post, rather than to Fort Meade, an infantry camp which now specializes in tank and anti-tank training.

For similar reasons the trainee may be dispatched to distant points where the Army maintains bases for coast artillery, the tank corps and other branches.

Can a skilled worker who is exempted because of his value to industry choose his place of employment?

No. In general the policy will be to keep a skilled worker at the job for the continued performance of which he was exempted.

Even performing exactly the same type of work at a different plant, the worker might be less efficient—hence less valuable to the national defense—in surroundings to which he is not accustomed. Another reason for the policy would be to discourage workmen from shifting from job to job because of pay differences, thus disrupting the system.

(Tomorrow, The Post will recapitulate its answers to questions of greatest interest, according to their repetition by readers.)

Vichy Reported Bowing to Japan

ing of armed resistance to any invasion and a declaration that acquiescence would be incompatible with Vichy's instructions, Nishihara, under pressure from Tokyo, was said to have reentered conversations with French Colonial officials.

(Britain, meantime, has "reminded" Japan through diplomatic channels that it wants Indo-China's integrity preserved, it was announced in London.)

However won, the right to ship troops to the Yunnan border of Indo-China would open up for Japan a great new avenue of attack on the forces, resources and communications of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Central Chinese government. Invasion of Yunnan would put a serious crimp in Chinese resistance because of the war industries centered there and the Japanese would be able to cut the Burma road if Britain ever decided to reopen it.

Hull, Lothian Confer on China

Richard G. Casey, the Australian minister on common problems in the South Pacific.

Reports that the French government at Vichy was yielding to a Japanese ultimatum for passage of troops through Indo-China followed closely on Hull's warning to Tokyo Wednesday to keep hands off the French colony.

Hull had told the Japanese government that any change in the status quo in the Pacific would have an "unfortunate" effect on American public opinion.

Secretary Hull would not discuss particulars of the conversations. To questions he replied that there had been no suggestions, no requests, and no decisions in the talks, but admitted there had been a general exchange of views on the developments across the Pacific.

When he was asked if the three representatives had discussed the possible use of the British naval base of Singapore by the American fleet he again declined to go into the details of the parley.

Splits Voters Debate Challenge

by voters for their opinion shows quite clearly that those opposed to the debate think the President is too busy, and that such a debate would be "beneath the President's dignity." Those are the two main reasons in order of frequency.

A 55-year-old coal dealer in Berwyn, Md., comments: "Roosevent should keep busy on our country's problems and not be diverted by debates and trips."

Another voter, a woman in Stockton, Calif., reflects the viewpoint of many in the poll when she says:

"A man in such a high office should not have to condescend to barnstorming."

Those voters who, on the other hand, think the President should accept Willkie's challenge, advance two main reasons.

First, that the people of the country need public issues clarified and that a debate bringing out the differences of opinion would accomplish this.

Second, that a better comparison of the two candidates would be afforded the voter if the debate took place.

A contractor in Mayville, N. Y., reflects the attitude of the majority when he says: "A debate would clear up in my mind the differences between the two candidates, especially on national defense."

A few favor the debate because they think Roosevelt would win. "I'd like to see Roosevelt make Willkie look foolish," says a New York City WPA worker.

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 5.—Final returns of a Nation-wide poll show a majority of voters approve the transfer of over-age American destroyers to Great Britain.

Final returns in the poll are:

"England needs destroyer ships to replace those which have been damaged or sunk. The United States has some destroyers which were built during the last World War and are now being put back in active service. Do you think we should sell some of these ships to England?"

Yes	61%
No	39

One voter in ten (10 per cent) expressed no opinion. The vote by party lines divides as follows:

	Approve Transfer	Disapprove Transfer
Republicans	58%	42%
Democrats	63	37

John Parker Bequeathed Mortgages to Sister

The will of John Scott Parker, of Chevy Chase, Md., which has been admitted to probate in the Orphans Court at Rockville, bequeaths to his sister, Mary Smith, certain mortgages and the moneys secured by them and provides that the residue be distributed in accordance with the law of Maryland in cases of intestacy.

The testator's son, William Lee Parker, is named executor. The instrument, executed December 7, 1937, does not reveal the value of the estate.

Nazis Emphasize Destroyer Sinkings

British Lost Four In Day, They Say; Scoff at U. S. Aid

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Sept. 5.—Germany today claimed her torpedo boats and submarines had shot a big hole in Britain's destroyer force, now being augmented by 50 former United States ships, while her air force, favored by the best weather in weeks, increased the tempo of its hammer blows on harbors and airfields.

The Reich counted its largest admitted air raid casualties of the war—18 civilians killed—when bombs fell on a workers' quarter in a town of northern Germany, and two men killed when British airmen penetrated Berlin's defenses and bombed the Tiergarten, only a mile from Adolf Hitler's chancellery, an electrical plant and an army warehouse. The high command declared the main attack "foundered."

The high command told of the destruction of a destroyer of the Imogen class (1,370 tons) and 39,000 tons of shipping from a convoy by a torpedo boat flotilla.

U-Boats Claim 3

Three other destroyers were reported sunk by U-boats by the high command, the Esk and Express of the 1,375-ton Eclipse class, and the Ivanhoe of the 1,370-ton Intrepid class. The U-boats also got 27,000 tons of shipping, the communique said.

To emphasize its inroads on the British destroyer force, the high command recalled its report of September 2 of two other destroyers sunk—a total of six in the last few days.

The 50 over-age destroyers received by Britain from the United States in return for Western Hamisphere air and naval bases "might be of use only to cover the eventual glorious retreat of the home fleet across the Atlantic," said Hitler's newspaper, Volkischer Beobachter.

(The British admiralty admitted the sinking of the Ivanhoe and Esk, but said the Express was safe in port, though damaged. Observers credit Britain now with 200 or more destroyers, though she has admitted losing 32 since the start of the war.)

Aim at London Airports

Following up Hitler's threat Wednesday to give more than he receives, German planes were reported aiming principally at Biggin Hill and Kenley, suburban London airports. Twenty British planes were reported shot down in the first hour of the attack.

D. N. B. official news agency, elaborating on the high command's communique, said Wednesday night's raids started huge fires at the big harbors and munitions plants at Liverpool, Swansea and Bristol on the west, destruction of docks and harbor facilities at Hull and Great Yarmouth on the east, hard hits on the south coast at Weymouth and Poole harbors, and further bombing of London's great Tilbury docks and the government wharves at Chatham.

Swiss Cautioned

Germany expects Switzerland to "protect her neutrality by the sharpest means," the well-informed Dienst aus Deutschland news service said today.

The service for the second time drew attention to what it called the "resigned attitude" and weak "paper protests" of the Swiss toward alleged English raiders flying over Swiss territory to bomb Italian objectives.

"Berlin obviously does not want to direct Switzerland regarding measures it ought to take to protect its neutrality," the news service declared, "but it is recalled that formerly Switzerland made excellent use of its air force and with Messerschmitt pursuit planes shot down foreign planes illegally flying over its border or forced them to land.

"As a result, German quarters expect that Switzerland will safeguard her own neutrality also against England by the sharpest means."

Navy Denies Giving British Secret Device

Traded Destroyers' Have Only Old Guns, Department Says

The Navy Department yesterday denied reports that the 50 destroyers traded to England for island bases had been specially equipped with new antiaircraft guns and a secret device to neutralize the magnetic mine.

The reports followed publication of a picture showing what was alleged to be one of the destroyers scheduled to leave for Canada with the vanguard of the 50 destroyers in the deal. The picture showed cables around the ship, described as de Gaussig antimagnetic mine equipment.

As to the antiaircraft gun report, the Navy Department declared that the 50 overage destroyers were equipped with 3-inch antiaircraft guns, whereas our new destroyers are provided with 5-inch and "pom-pom" antiaircraft guns.

The de Gaussig device, it was explained, is not an American secret but a British invention recently developed in the war with Germany.

The antimine belts have been installed on some American warships—those which have had routine overhauling in American navy yards, the Navy Department said. The others will be equipped later.

Whether any of the destroyers being turned over to the British will have the magnetic mine protection, the Navy Department spokesman refused to say, since the names of the swapped vessels are not to be revealed.

Sidelights of the War

More Americans Land in Britain

By James M. Minifie
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

A North British Port, Sept. 5.—Hundreds of Americans wearing the uniform of His Majesty's forces, landed at a busy, thriving north British port yesterday, when a further contingent of the Canadian active service reached these islands "without incident."

Their first question was, "where are we!" Their destination had not been revealed to them. All they knew was that it was "somewhere in Britain." Then they shouted with one accord: "Tell the folks back home we're here and feeling fine."

The Canadian Black Watch of Montreal had attracted the largest contingent of Americans.

Although the majority of the Americans in it came from the Eastern Seaboard, the glamour of the Black Watch's great fighting name had brought men from as far as Florida and California.

They made up about 40 per cent of the Black Watch and there was a sprinkling of them in the Saskatchewan Regiment, the Royal Canadian Artillery, the Calgary Highlanders and in the reinforcement detachments for the Princess Pats, the Toronto Scottish, the Royal Twenty-second and the West Nova Scotians, which also came over in this convoy.

When this correspondent went aboard one of the transports he was surrounded in a few minutes by eager New Yorkers, demanding news of the standing of the major leagues and of the war situation.

There was some lusty back-thumping and cheering when they heard the 50 American destroyers had been turned over to the British.

One of the arrivals was Gerald Johnston, New York City, who played opposite Mae West in "Diamond Lil." He said modestly he was "in the show business" and that he had come across with the Canadians "because there was a war on."

Police And Public

A District grand jury is considering the case of two policemen accused of brutality. Should they be indicted, convicted and sentenced, they would be the first punished by the courts on this perennial charge since 1932.

The present defendants were suspended from the force after half a dozen persons complained of being kicked, clubbed or otherwise assaulted. One man said two policemen invaded his home and beat him "without provocation."

Only by the most thorough investigation of facts and causes can these serious charges be properly disposed of. No circumstances can justify unprovoked attacks by police on citizens, and if such occur they must be punished with dispatch. Brutality could only stir resentment which would aggravate the problems of effective law enforcement.

Washington's police do face some difficult problems. In the last few months many patrolmen have been attacked by persons resisting arrest. A park policeman has been killed, a detective sergeant shot and disabled, and a "rookie" so badly beaten that he spent a week in the hospital.

If officers walking lonely beats feel their colleagues are so few and help so far away that they must resort to illegal and brutal methods to put fear into the people they are supposed to serve, then the whole ugly picture must be displayed. Congress cannot go on indefinitely denying the District an adequate number of police.

Another Captive People

To avoid abdicating his throne, Carol II of Rumania has agreed to abdicate his authority. He will remain the nominal ruler of his truncated kingdom but henceforth will be permitted to exercise only ornamental functions. The dictatorial power he has enjoyed during recent years will now be wielded by Gen. Ion Antonescu, Rumania's new "strong man."

In a catastrophically brief period, the Rumanian people have watched with steadily mounting bitterness the crumbling away of their country's post-World War frontiers. Bessarabia and northern Bucovina were lost to Soviet Russia without even a token struggle. Southern Dobruja is soon to be ceded to Bulgaria. And at the very moment that Gen. Antonescu took office, Magyar troops began moving into that portion of Transylvania which Rumania, under pressure from the Axis, has agreed to turn over to Hungary.

This reduction of the kingdom almost to its pre-World War dimensions has inevitably had a demoralizing effect on Rumania. The widespread rioting which followed the Vienna dictate, the attempted coup d'etat of the Iron Guard and similar disturbing developments suggested that Rumania might be plunged into chaos. A strong hand was needed at the helm. His own prestige badly tarnished, Carol was forced to turn to Gen. Antonescu, who appears to have the support of both the army and the Iron Guard.

Yet even if Antonescu succeeds in clamping the lid on Rumania's seething cauldron, her troubles will by no means be over. It is an ominous circumstance that, coincident with the entry of Magyar troops into Transylvanian frontier towns, German troops are also reported to be massing in the east. These troops may be sent into the kingdom to "protect" her against further territorial losses.

We need only to recall what this kind of "protection" has meant in Poland, Bohemia-Moravia and Slovakia to realize how unpalatable it may prove to the people of Rumania. But they will have little to say about it.

Pressed from without by Germany, the dictatorship now established at Bucharest will suppress any manifestations of discontent. The lot of the Rumanians, like the lot of all the captive peoples of the continent, is tragic.

Retarding Defense

Probably no member of Congress would deliberately attempt to sabotage the defense program. Yet some of the amendments written into legislation now before the House and Senate may have precisely that effect if they are allowed to stand.

The production of airplanes, tanks, guns, ammunition and other equipment for an army of 1,200,000 men will require active cooperation of literally hundreds of industries. In very large measure the Government is relying upon private enterprise to supply these emergency needs. Large sums must be invested in new plants. Production schedules must be stepped up. Men must be hired and trained for new tasks. Industry has an enormous assignment.

Because this country believes in free enterprise and its institutions have been developed on that basis, the defense program is being carried out through voluntary cooperation of industry. Such cooperation is undoubtedly essential if plants are to be put quickly to work manufacturing the equipment the Army and Navy need. Yet certain groups in Congress seem determined to make it difficult for private concerns to make the necessary adjustments and to invest capital in new plants.

In passing the excess-profits tax bill, for example, the House adopted an amendment that would seriously retard the flow of capital into defense industries. The National Defense Advisory Commission has unanimously requested the elimination of that provision. Leon Henderson told the Senate Finance Committee that it might "just as well drop any idea of attracting private funds into the defense program" if this amendment is retained.

As explained by William S. Knudsen, the tax-bill amendment would deny to private concerns the benefits of the special amortization allowance for new defense plants, unless those companies would surrender partial control over such plants to the Government. In other words, the bill would give an incentive for the investment of private funds in defense plants with one hand and take it away with the other.

This effort to extend Government control over private factories bears a striking resemblance to the Russell-Overton amendment to the conscription bill. In both cases the present emergency could be used to bring vast manufacturing facilities into permanent possession of the Government. From the long-range viewpoint our whole economic system might thus be transformed. From the short-range viewpoint, such potential threats to free enterprise tend to bog down the cooperative defense program.

The problem thus raised cannot be disposed of by saying that if industrialists fail to cooperate the Government will take over their plants. Of course, the Government must have, and does have, emergency powers to commandeer essential products and temporarily to operate private plants, if necessary. But that is a different issue.

Obviously the Government could not take over and operate all the thousands of factories whose products are needed in the defense program. An attempt to take possession of any major portion of these establishments would probably lead to a breakdown in the defense program. That circumstance alone should lead to hasty removal of the impediments to cooperative action.

The responsibility of Congress at present is to clear the way for effective production of weapons for defense. Those who are trying to use this emergency as a potential means of bringing vast industrial enterprises permanently into possession of the Government are rendering a grave disservice to the cause of national security.

Yardstick Needed

Representative Martin's complaint that President Roosevelt indulged in political comment at Chickamauga Dam, and his demand that Wendell Willkie be given equal free radio time, raises the question of when is a political speech not a political speech and vice versa.

Like the dispute between the people of Lilliput and Blefuscu over whether an egg should be broken at the big or the small end, it is a question that probably never will be settled satisfactorily to both sides. What may sound like an impartial presentation of facts to one set of ears may resound like a political harangue in others. The man at the dial can react to his own conclusion without a second thought. But to the radio networks, for whom time is money, and to the treasurers of the Republican and Democratic National Committees, the issue is not so simple.

The networks invested more than $500,000 in the Presidential campaigns by carrying the political conventions as sustaining features. They likewise cleared the ether of commercial programs for the acceptance addresses of the two Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates.

Some months ago, the broadcasters complain, spokesmen of both major parties talked vaguely—as politicians are wont to do—of $1,000,000 radio budgets. More recently the broadcasters have been informed that they will be lucky to get half this amount. The Democrats, in fact, have limited their radio fund to $250,000.

Now comes this new dilemma which is worse than the first, for it involves more than dollars and cents. The broadcasters naturally do not want to incur the ill will of either party, especially so long as the November election is in doubt.

They are in a position somewhat analogous to that of police called upon to decide whether or not a motorist somewhat on the unsteady side is legally drunk. But many yardsticks are at hand in cases of this sort. There is, for example, this old English yerse:

> Not drunk is he who from the floor
> Can rise alone and still drink more;
> But drunk is he who prostrate lies
> Without the power to drink or rise.

Why don't the broadcasters offer a prize to poets for a similar yardstick to measure the political content of Presidential speeches?

Rough House

In the course of the debate in the House of Representatives on Wednesday a member from Ohio returned to his seat after making a bitter speech against the conscription bill. A member from Kentucky, who had been occupying the adjoining seat, got up, remarking, "I don't want to sit beside a traitor."

At that the member from Ohio punched him in the nose. For several seconds thereafter the galleries were edified by the spectacle of two red-faced, puffing, middle-aged representatives of the sovereign people cuffing each other in dead though not deadly earnest.

In this instance the combatants were separated by their colleagues. (One of them afterward had the grace to apologize to the House for his conduct; the other declined to do so.) But with political passions inflamed only a little more than they are now, it would not be difficult to imagine the whole House involved in something like an old-fashioned Saturday night saloon brawl.

When incidents comparable to this one occur in the professional league baseball parks the offending players are promptly expelled from the field and fined, suspended or otherwise punished. Nothing, however, can be done to the Senator or Representative who chooses to abuse by word or deed his right to immunity. There is apparently no way of restoring decorum to the houses of Congress, except by the intervention of other members. The sergeant at arms, to be sure, is empowered to exhibit his mace, but not to employ it to any practical purpose.

The worst of it is that such episodes as Wednesday's, and even more outrageous ones, are by no means rare in Congressional history. In one of the earliest Congresses a disgraceful scene occurred when an honorable gentleman (Anti-Federalist, Vermont) spat in the face of another honorable gentleman (Federalist, Connecticut). Henry Clay and the razor-tongued John Randolph had at least the good manners to move their quarrel to a dueling ground outside the Capitol. In 1856 Senator Sumner was beaten very nearly to death in consequence of a speech he had filled with personal invective and abuse.

Only two weeks ago Senators Holt and Minton, in what purported to be a debate on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, were permitted to bandy a series of coarse personal insults, though when the occupants of the galleries became infected with the spirit of the occasion they were sternly rebuked.

Perhaps, then, this old American parliamentary tradition is too deeply rooted to be eradicated. But if certainly seems ironic that Senators and Representatives, when debating the value of military discipline for the youth of the Nation, should exercise so little discipline over their own tongues and fists. It is both ironic and ominous when their conduct tends to sustain the views of those who hold the democratic system of government in contempt.

The most subtle and effective way a man can flatter a woman is to treat her as if she were an equal.

Intricate Interrogative

From the Christian Science Monitor

Recently, the question mark has become the point in question in a New York court of law. And a very moot point it promises to be; namely, "When is a question not a question?"

At the moment, the answer seems to be, "When it appears in a municipal civil service examination for second-grade clerks." Candidates in such an examination were asked whether or not the following sentence calls for a question mark: "May I help you with your problem of reorganization of the personnel."

The candidates said "Yes." The examiners, "No." And the candidates who thereby were failed promptly sued.

But the outcome of the case is still in question. The examiners assert that the sentence is a simple statement of intention. It is phrased as a question solely for sweet courtesy's sake.

Delicacy of this nature is not a new device in English. In Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" of the fourteenth century, the Host, in asking the gentle Prioress to recount the next tale, heaps up in one sentence no less than six deprecatory subjunctives. Thus "curteisly" did he couch his query, a command in all but phrasing.

But Chaucer was spared the decision of whether or not such courteousness should be terminated by an interrogation point. The question mark had not yet reared its inquisitive head.

Campaign Issues

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In his column in The Post of September 2, Ernest Lindley calls attention to the lack of clear-cut issues in this election campaign. However, a single specific issue can be found by careful search among the glittering generalities of Mr. Willkie's acceptance key-note of August 17. This issue appears important enough to be mentioned, at least.

After stating his approval of various New Deal measures without condemning any specific measure of New Deal legislation, Mr. Willkie held up his hands in holy horror at the $60,000,000,000 of Government spending in seven or eight years—$8,000,000,000 a year in a $150,000,000,000 country—and said: "The New Deal stands for doing what has to be done by spending as much money as possible. I propose to do it by spending as little money as possible. This is one great issue in domestic policy and I propose to make it clear.

"I say that we must substitute for the philosophy of spending the philosophy of production. You cannot buy freedom. You must make freedom.

"This is a serious charge. It is not made lightly. And it cannot be lightly avoided by the opposition."

Here is one definite, specific issue raised by the candidate accepting the nomination in opposition to a third-term of the New Deal. The issue is clear-cut in its bearing upon an important New Deal principle. We may be confident that our democracy can face the issue and decide it.

Need Of Conscription

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are some members of Congress whose stupidity in failing to understand the international situation encourages them to argue like demons that there is no real danger not capable of being met by an army of volunteers. Voluntary enlistment in the face of a precarious situation, such as ours today, is more than noble, but is not, I believe, the way to meet this danger, as it will not provide adequate man power. It would be just as foolish to believe that all forms of taxes could be abolished and that this Government could be financed by voluntary contributions.

Defends National Guard

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently there have appeared in the local newspapers accounts of the First Army maneuvers held in New York State in which the District of Columbia National Guard participated which made this unit of the militia look like a herd of underfed Boy Scouts at a hunger rally.

That there was insubordination in the ranks is not only untrue but highly illogical. Any man, no matter how much of a rookie he is, knows very well that if he disobeys a noncommissioned officer the noncom can report him to any superior officer, whereupon the malcreant can be court-martialed with the utmost expediency. Some time ago I told a noncom to go to hell, and spent four days in the guardhouse without pay. I never did it again.

Some estimates of the number affected by dysentery and ptomaine poisoning were exaggerated. It is true that quite a number were afflicted, but not, by any means, to the degree reported. And those that were sick have nobody but themselves to blame. Every time the convoy stopped near an orchard, or whenever there were any fruit trees or bushes around, some of the men would sneak off—against orders—and gorge themselves with fruit. I saw a private come back to a truck with his pith helmet crammed with an assortment of berries. He consumed most of them, and the next morning he was at the medico's cursing Army food and complaining about an acute case of dysentery. I was present.

But the majority of the stomach-trouble cases were due to laziness and the sloppiness of the men who, in their hurry to get their food, neglected to sterilize their mess kits properly. They would dip their kits in the boiling soap kettle, shake vigorously and then hastily dip the soaped kits in the rinsing kettles, leaving films of soapy water adhering to the kits. "GI" soap, the Army issue, is as potent a soap as can be found. Mix a little of it in your food and you'll know full well what it is to be sick.

In criticizing the quality of the food, one writer neglected to say anything about the half chicken each man in the regiment got on one occasion. He also omitted the fact that for breakfast we usually had scrambled eggs and bacon (or ham), corn flakes or oatmeal, fresh fruit, jam, and all the bread and butter we wanted, besides coffee and fresh milk. When we did not have eggs we had creamed chipped beef and potatoes, French toast, or pork chops. He did not say that the cooks usually called the men back for second helpings. And when we were away from the base camp a truck would always drive up to the gun points at mess time with hot food and coffee as a substitute for the canned army rations we should have been given.

I have heard a lot of comments on what a waste of time camp was. I agree it was a waste of time, but only for those slackers whom the Army politely calls goldbrickers. I do not consider myself an outstanding soldier, yet when I came back from camp I could field-strip and reassemble a machine gun or a pistol with my eyes blindfolded. I knew enough about fire control to be able to execute orders intelligently. And I can say that prior to my enlistment, two months ago, I had never seen or been near a Browning machine gun.

It is true that the National Guard is ill-equipped. The one unit in the United States which is quartered in the District of Columbia and which is called upon to parade in front of the eyes of foreign diplomats and observers and which at times mounts guard on the shrines of the men who wrought the mold from which this country is cast should be fully—if not lavishly—equipped.

But this is not the fault of the National Guard Bureau, its officers or its men. The fault lies in that the National Guard is not a Federal branch of the service, but rather a unit supported by the individual States. In the case of the D. C. National Guard, the District, not having representation in Congress nor a State legislature, does not have anybody to put before the members of Congress the request for appropriations to purchase uniforms, material and ordnance for the Guard. It does not have Congressmen who, pressed by their constituents, will go through hell and high water in order to secure appropriations. It is needless to say that the District of Columbia, governed as it is, and with what may be considered greater obligations, cannot do anything about this condition which borders on the deplorable.

PRIVATE BILLIKEN,

McNary Vs. Coolidge

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read Senator McNary's acceptance speech from Salem, Oreg., and your editorial comment on it. You praise the Senator for much of his work, then close with this paragraph:

"Much less can be said for some of Mr. McNary's specific proposals for the benefit of agriculture. It is futile to denounce reciprocal trade agreements and to propose a two-price system for agriculture under present conditions."

That is exactly what President Coolidge thought 14 years ago. He was wrong then and you are wrong today. Present conditions are the direct result of Coolidge's theories, and cannot be changed till we find ways and means to adapt the two-price system to the present conditions.

I have planted and threshed as much wheat for foreign markets from my own land as you have, I have sold as much wheat for other farmers in the foreign trade as you have and I state that from my knowledge and experience we must ship our surplus wheat and cotton out of the Nation before we can have a fair price for wheat and cotton, corn and pork, milk, vegetables, fruit and eggs here in America. As we drive our prices up Europe will follow us until we are all prosperous again, on both sides of the pond.

Hitler rose to power because the German people were starving—and they still are! They were starving because the American Federal Farm Board bought up our export wheat and held it away from our customers over there, forcing prices down here, cut off American purchases over there and gave them our depression.

As my memory serves me our national trade with Russia fell off about one-third as a direct result of our trade agreement and I have not found a single instance where our sales increased in any foreign land by virtue of the Trade Agreement Act.

District Finances

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your "disclosure" of an unexpended balance of $73,879 in the direct relief funds of the Public Welfare Department of Washington, while hundreds of needy families have been seriously deprived, should be an "eye-opener" to the President, Congress, the citizens of the District, and the press.

If this were an isolated instance it would be bad enough, but if the inefficiency of the whole financial management of the District were known to the taxpayers there would be an emphatic demand for a thorough house-cleaning in the District Building. The following excerpt from the annual report of the Comptroller General for 1937 tells a part of the story. The excerpt is on page 7. "An examination of the revenue accounts of the District of Columbia discloses many forms of irregularity. Receipts are posted to the records which are not accounted for. Taxes have been abated and canceled apparently without authority; overdue taxes have not been advertised for as required by law; penalties have not been charged on taxes in arrears when paid; the payment records have never been balanced with the cash records . . . and generally the state of affairs is such that serious shortage may exist at any time without detection."

There is more where this comes from!

Park Scene

UNCLE WIDGE and Aunt Emma of Cypress Cove have just left after spending a week with us. Their visit had been long planned. Naturally we, too, had looked forward to it with enthusiasm. They were important people down yonder. Uncle Widge has been "mayor" of the little South Carolina hamlet 35 years.

We must entertain them. It would be a disgrace for the "mayor" and his lady to return to their bucolic bailiwick with anything but highest praise for the country boy and girl who came to the big city and made good. We lost hours of sleep thinking up plans that would fit our pocketbook and yet provide a grand show for the relatives. I decided to get six days' leave so we could "do the sights."

We read up on Washington lore. We made a study of other great world capitals to prate more fluently about the grandeur of our own Nation's Capital.

We began with the Zoo. The monkeys staged their finest show for the visiting royalty—but it went unnoticed. We went to the art galleries, museums, Washington's Monument, libraries, cathedrals and other interesting places. Results were the same. Then to the sight of all sights—Congress. And nary a ripple of interest.

Sunday morning, after everything had been "done" superlatively, we went to Franklin Park to rest and talk of the old days.

Uncle Widge's comment of the events of the week were not of what, but of whom he had seen. He said he thought the people were "friendly looking but just too busy seeing things to stop and talk."

Franklin Park on Sunday morning is peacefully serene. Coatless, tieless men, and women in summery frocks loll on the benches. Some talk, some read the newspapers, others are engaged in memories of another day. Children play in the shallow pool, others stand wistfully by.

"This is a mighty friendly looking place," said Uncle Widge, as he brushed off the bench.

A little group of men argued heatedly nearby. The conversation was based on politics. Two of them were wearing garish Willkie badges. Another arrival and then another. Both had an equally prominent Roosevelt emblem. The crowd grew. Uncle Widge got restless.

"Excuse me a minute," Uncle Widge said, as he got up. "I believe I'll step over and hear what they have to say."

In another minute the mayor of Cypress Cove was in the swim. He was talking rapidly. He told the boys just what his neck of the woods stood for in the matter of a Presidential candidate.

Then faraway Epiphany memorial chimes reverberated faintly on the still air. Conversation ceased. It was eerily quiet. Uncle Widge said, "We ought to go to church." But we didn't.

A group of Negroes appeared with the dying echoes of the church bells. One was a gray-haired old man, another a middle-aged fellow wearing a leather jacket on which was printed in blazing letters, "I am the Way—I am the Life and the Truth." He was the preacher. Accompanying them were a half dozen children comprising the "washtub band." The instruments were a discarded washtub for a drum, a washboard, two or three decrepit tambourines, a battered harmonica and several noisemakers of the bazooka type.

The band struck up. Older members of the troupe began a slow chant. The old graybeard spoke between the stanzas: "Yas, Lawd! Yas, Lawd! Now give us a blessin'! Yas, Lawd! Now show us yo's wid us."

The band cacaphoned into a finale. The preacher cleared his throat.

"Ah come hyah," he intoned, "to give yo' de message! Ah'm not takin' de text 'cause de text is hyah, where yo' can see it fo' yo'selfs," pointing to the glaring letters on the jacket. "Dis message is fo' white skin, de black skin, de red skin and de yaller skin peepul. De Lawd jes' says, 'I am de Way and de Life and de Trufe.' He don't say what kin' church yo' can go to and what kin' clothes yo' can wear. He jes' don't care as long as yo' goes His way and knows de trufe. If yo' knows de way, den yo' will sho'ly sarve de Lawd."

The collection plates were tambourines. The urchins passed through the crowds and along the walk. The preacher's eyes followed them. As they passed, Uncle Widge surreptitiously placed a five-dollar bill in the ragged tambourine. The youthful solicitors looked surprised and happy.

Some of the troupe saw the bill and recognized the "mayor" and his lady. Their eyes bulged.

The old patriarch took charge of the meeting. In a cracked, excited voice he began:

"De Lawd have blessed us! Ovah dere on dat park bench, Lawd, is Cunnel Widge Taylor an' his wife, Mis' Emmy. Dey come from Cypress Cove. Bless him and her too, Lawd. Give dem a blessin' to take to der home and de home of yo 'sarvant."

As the minstrels and preachers marched away in single file the old patriarch waved back.

Walker, Idealist

By Ernest Lindley

New Postal Chief

NO ONE COULD have a friend more devoted and self-effacing than the President has in the new Postmaster General, Frank Comerford Walker. For almost ten years Walker has been working for Franklin D. Roosevelt, expecting and receiving in return neither material reward nor honor; only the satisfaction of being close to a man he admires and in whose public policies he devoutly believes.

The special place which Walker holds in the President's eyes is signified by the fact that he and his wife have been invited every year to the President's dinner for the members of the Cabinet. He is the only non-Cabinet member who regularly has been accorded this honor.

A chunky, round-faced, rather retiring Irishman, Walker grew up in the mining camp of Butte. There, in 1920, he first met Franklin D. Roosevelt, when the latter stopped there to speak as the Democratic nominee for Vice President. When Roosevelt reentered public life as candidate for Governor of New York in 1928, Walker was practicing law in New York City. Walker supported Roosevelt for Governor in 1928 and 1930, but did not come in close contact with him. When Roosevelt began to loom up as a Presidential candidate, however, Walker was one of the first to offer his active did. He traveled the West, rounding up delegates, and he raised a good part of the slender purse from which the Roosevelt preconvention campaign of 1932 was financed. He worked so quietly that many others who were also working for Roosevelt's nomination hardly knew he existed until the Chicago Convention. There he canvassed delegations day and night, using his quiet persuasion on the waverers. He was one of the chief reasons Jim Farley knew in advance within half a dozen votes how much support he could muster in each of the critical tests at the convention.

IN THE 1932 CAMPAIGN, and again in 1936, Walker shouldered the difficult and thankless task of raising campaign funds for a candidate who was anathema to most people with money. After the 1932 election, Walker was one of the quartet—the others were Farley, Ed Flynn and Louis Howe—who sat down with Roosevelt to allot the political rewards among the early and faithful.

To Walker, Roosevelt offered his choice of any position within his power of appointment outside the Cabinet. (The New York quota for the Cabinet already was more than filled, and two of the original Cabinet selections were, like Walker, Catholics.) Walker said he wanted no office, and he persisted in this attitude when the President suggested various posts in which he thought Walker could be extremely helpful. In the summer of 1933 he finally responded to the President's urgent plea for help in straightening out the tangle of new agencies of Government. He came temporarily to Washington as coordinator for the President. Although he was able to give only part time to it he did a first-rate piece of painstaking work.

Again in 1935 the President drafted Walker; this time to help him set up the new work-relief program. Walker sat as a kind of arbiter between Harold L. Ickes and Harry Hopkins until the program had been launched. It was then expected that Jim Farley would resign from the Cabinet before the 1936 campaign. His resignation was pushed ahead until immediately after the campaign, and then again and again until it finally came a few days ago. It was well understood in the inner circle of the Administration that the President would ask Walker to take Farley's place. Walker invariably insisted to his friends that he wanted no office and could not leave his business affairs to take one. (He had fallen heir to the active management of the string of motion-picture theaters built up by his uncle.

DESPITE THE PRESIDENT'S pleas, Walker probably would not have accepted the Postmastership Generalship, even now, if his friends had not told him that he owed it to his children to include a Cabinet title in his record. Having taken the job, however, Walker will work at it conscientiously.

Walker is a man of the high integrity and sturdy idealism of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who was his mentor and first hero in politics. He is imbued with the high principles of social justice set forth in the great papal encyclicals "Rerum Novarum" and "Quadragesimo Anno."

Walker has another valuable asset: a personality which acts as a solvent. He gets along well with almost everybody.

More than a year ago this column wrote that the President needed Frank Walker in Washington to assuage the bitter intramural conflicts of his Administration. For that task, Walker has been called in a little too late. But he will add a big measure of fine idealism mingled with good sense to the Cabinet in this time of crisis.

Fair Enough

Marriage 'Bonds'

A PEOPLE who persist in honoring a tradition which they have found to be unsound and naive only handicap themselves, and, with this fact in mind, I urge that de dispel, by some positive act or declaration, preferably by Congress, the archaic superstition that marriage is a sacred contract. There may have been a time when this was so, but that time obviously is not now, when about one-sixth of these contracts are revoked—and in some families the rate of repudiation runs as high as 60 per cent—all with the consent of the laws and popular opinion of the country.

It is not enough that leading personalities flout the superstition, although, by their brave example, others are emboldened to challenge an outworn restraint. Deep in the character of the people there still exists a formless fear that a simple remedy for unpleasant conditions may be applied only at the cost of embarrassment and loss of reputation. The law or policy of the Nation should not merely tolerate but should indorse this remedy, inasmuch as the law and custom already hold it to be permissible.

PERMISSIBILITY is not enough. Divorce should be advised in view of the fact that laws are not advisory but obligatory. Probably the declaration on the subject should take the form of the Monroe Doctrine, which is not a law but certainly is a respected policy of the Nation. As matters stand, the people are given to understand that they may avail themselves of this legal right but that if they do they may be thought the less of. Such inhibitions cause nervousness.

The fact should be recognized that in actual practice the marriage contract is the least sacred of all the agreements that people live by except, perhaps, contracts or treaties between nations. I am not prepared to say that even international treaties are less durable, on the average, because, while certain shocking and notorious violations have been to the fore of late, countless other treaties, great and small, carry on. Moreover, these treaties all contain provisions for their own termination at the pleasure of either party, so the comparison is not good, and nations, whatever our opinions of them, seem, on the average, more loyal to their undertakings than men and women who marry.

AS TO THE RELIGIOUS complication, I am too prudent to speak at all, preferring to deal only with the facts, practice and the law. In practice we are much more insistent on the observance of business contracts; and if the repudiation rate in business ran as high as 16 per cent, business would be demoralized.

The law takes a very serious view of contract violation in matters of trade, and the courts will protect the victim of repudiation no matter what inconvenience, loss or unhappiness the offender may plead in justification. The fact that the offended party called him a damn fool, read a newspaper while he was relating the gossip of the day or criticized his relatives or friends is not a good defense for a man who has contracted to deliver 2,000 gross of something at a certain price and has tried to jump the price or just failed to make good.

The defaulter will be ordered to make the other whole and will be put down in the confidential books as a no-good, whereas the one who keeps his word in business is respected though he may have terminated two, three or half a dozen marriages by divorce.

HERE I MAY SEEM to contradict myself by arguing that we should go to the trouble of dispelling a prejudice which does not exist. That sometimes happens; but in this case I am consistent, for the fact remains that although divorce is a highly respectable legal remedy a lot of people don't realize the fact. They need to be assured that they will not be thought the less of, and a superstition which could be extinguished by the Government still is permitted to plague the minds of honest citizens and deter them from having their rights.

Marriage may be terminated for the most trivial reasons, and it is dishonest and bad for the morals of the Nation to pretend to believe that so casual a relationship is sacred.

It were sacrilegious to say that election bets are sacred, but I dare suggest that the repudiation rate in November will be trifling by comparison with the steady, annual rate of repudiation of the bonds of matrimony.

Officials Confer To Avert Threat Of Celanese Strike

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 5 (AP).—State and Federal labor conciliators conferred today with officials of the Celanese Corporation of America in an attempt to avert a threatened strike of union workers.

The conciliators—John Pohlhaus, State Commissioner of Labor and Statistics, and James Hurley and J. W. Post, United States Department of Labor—declined to disclose the outcome of the conference.

Members of local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, have threatened to stop work if a new contract was not signed when the present one expires at midnight.

Partial Text Of Churchill's Talk

'Danger of Invasion Is Not Past'

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 5.—Following is a partial text of Prime Minister Churchill's speech in Commons today:

Those memorable transactions between Great Britain and the United States which I foreshadowed when I last addressed the House have now been completed.

So far as I can make out they have been completed to the general satisfaction of the British and American peoples and to the encouragement of our friends all over the world.

It would be a mistake to try to read into the official notes which have passed more than the documents bear on their faces. The exchanges which have taken place are simply measures of mutual assistance rendered to one another by two friendly nations in a spirit of confidence, sympathy and good will.

These measures are linked together in formal agreement. They must be accepted or rejected. Only very ignorant persons would suggest that the transfer of the American destroyers to the British flag constitutes the slightest violation of international law or affects in the smallest degree the nonbelligerency of the United States.

Strong Enough for Work in Hand

No doubt Herr Hitler will not like this transference of destroyers. I have no doubt he will pay the United States out if ever he gets the chance (laughter). That is why I am very glad that the armed air and naval frontiers of the United States have been advanced along a wide arc into the Atlantic Ocean and that this will enable them to take danger by the throat while it is still hundreds of miles away from their homeland.

The admiralty tell us also they are very glad to have these 50 destroyers and they will come in most convenient to bridge the gap which inevitably intervenes before our considerable wartime program of new construction comes into service.

I suppose the House realizes that we are going to be a good deal stronger next year at sea than we are now, though that is quite strong enough for the work in hand.

There will be no delay in bringing the American destroyers into active service—in fact, British crews are already meeting them at various ports where they are being delivered.

That is a case of what one might call the long arm of coincidence.

Rumanian Cession Mentioned

The House will have observed that Rumania has undergone a severe territorial mutilation. Personally I have always thought that the southern part of Dobruja ought to be restored to Bulgaria and I have never been too happy about the way Hungary was treated after the last war.

We have not at any time adopted, since this war broke, the line that nothing could be changed in the territorial structure of various countries. On the other hand, we do not propose to recognize any territorial changes which take place during the war unless they take place with the free consent and good will of the parties concerned.

No one can say how far Herr Hitler's empire will extend before this war is over. But I have no doubt it will pass away as swiftly—perhaps more swiftly—than did Napoleon's army, although, of course, without any of its glitter or glory.

The general air battle of which I spoke last time we met together continues. In July there was a great deal of air activity, but August has been a real fighting month. Neither side has put out its full strength.

Attacks Proved Costly

The Germans have made a very substantial and important effort to gain the mastery and they have certainly put forth a larger proportion of their total air strength than we have found it necessary up to the present to employ against them. Their attempts to dominate the Royal Air Force and our antiaircraft defenses by daily attacks have proved very costly to them.

The broad figures of three to one in machines and of six to one in pilots and crews of which we are assured do not by any means represent the total injury inflicted upon the enemy.

We must be prepared for heavier fighting in this month of September. The need of the enemy to obtain a decision is very great, and if he has the numbers with which we have hitherto credited him, he should be able to magnify and multiply his attacks during September.

Firm confidence is felt by all responsible officers of the R. A. F. in our ability to withstand this largely increased scale of attack and we have no doubt that our peoples will take the example from our airmen and be proud to share their dangers with them and to stand up to these attacks.

Temper of the Nation

The men and women in our factories have a chance to show their metal and to be worthy of our boys in the air and not to make their task longer and harder by the slightest flinching.

That is the temper of the nation. Even if the average attack is doubled or trebled, which last is most unlikely, we can stand it, however long, and we shall emerge from it actually and relatively stronger in the air than we were before.

Our air force today is more numerous and better equipped than it was at the outbreak of war or even in July. And we are far nearer the German total of numerical strength than we expected to be at this early period of the war.

I asked that the German claims of British aircraft destroyed during the month of July and August should be added up.

I was curious to see the total. They make the surprising figure of 1,921 British aircraft destroyed.

It is rather like figures we have heard about our fleet which has had many ships sunk many times over.

Losses Not Severe

The actual figures of British losses, which we have published daily for these two months, amount to 658. Our loss in pilots is, of course, happily very much less. I do not know whether Herr Hitler believes the truth of his own published figures. (Laughter.) I hope he does.

It is always good to see the enemy sunk in error and self-deception. How very differently this air attack has turned out from what we imagined it would be before the war. More than 150,000 beds have stood open in our war hospitals for more than a year.

When the British people make up their minds to go to war they expect to receive terrible injuries. That is why they try to remain at peace as long as possible. So far as the air attack is concerned, we have found it to be up to the present far less severe than what we have prepared ourselves to endure and what we are still ready to endure.

One thousand and seventy-five civilians were killed during August in Great Britain and a slightly greater number have been seriously injured. Our sympathy goes out to the wounded and to those who are bereaved, but no one can pretend that out of 45,000,000 people these are losses which, if they are multiplied two or three times, as they may be, would be serious compared to the majestic world issues which are at stake.

Further Examination

Apart from minor or repairable injuries, about 800 houses have been destroyed or damaged beyond repair. This is out of a total in this island of 13,000,000 houses.

(At this point, the prime minister discussed financial arrangements to pay for property damage suffered in air raids.

(He also referred to coast towns which had been declared to be evacuated areas for the purpose of the defense regulations.

(On this subject he said a number of members had made representations to the government as it was their duty to do.)

The government would not refuse to consider extending to the county council some measure of assistance. We must expect for some time to come to have to carry on our work under these strange conditions but they are conditions to which the fortitude and adaptiveness of the British people will not be found unequal.

If there is to be, as is suggested in a recent oration (laughter), a contest of nerves and will power and endurance in which the whole British and German people are to engage, be it sharp or be it long, we shall not shrink from it.

Banshee Howlings

We believe that the spirit and temperament bred under institutions of freedom will prove more enduring and resilient than anything that can be got out of the most efficiently imposed mechanical discipline (cheers).

In the light of what we have learned so far we have come to the conclusion that the arrangements for air raid warnings and what is to be done when they are given require very considerable changes.

There is really no use, no good sense, in having these prolonged banshee howlings (laughter and cheers) of the sirens two or three times a day over wide areas simply because hostile aircraft are flying to or from some target which no one can possibly know or even guess. All our precautionary regulations have hitherto been based on this siren call and I must say I admire the ingenuity of those who devised it as a means of spreading alarm.

Indeed, most people now see how very wise Ulysses was when he stopped the ears of his sailors to siren songs, but had himself tied firmly to the mast for duty (laughter). Now that we are settling down to the job we must have different arrangements from those devised before the war. It is right that everyone should know that the raid warning is more in the nature of a general alert than of the imminence of danger to any particular locality.

In many cases it is physically impossible to give the alarm before the attack. Incessant alarms would come to very much the same thing as no alarms, but while they give protection a very great number of people take no notice of them, and they exercise a disturbing influence on necessary war work.

In our own case today, it was felt that the raid warning should be taken merely as an alert but if special circumstances indicated the proximity of danger the conditions of alarm should supervene and that is exactly what we did on receiving information that there was danger of a particular kind in the vicinity. When that special condition departed we immediately resumed our work under conditions of alert until the all-clear which has just now sounded and has restored us to normal.

All our regulations require to be shaped on the new basis which is being established by actual contact with events.

Proceed by Trial and Error

In this matter one must expect to proceed by trial and error, and also to carry public opinion along with us but what we want is the greatest measure of real warning that is compatible with what all our people are resolved upon, namely the active maintenance of war production.

There is one other point I should like to mention and that is the lighting of streets in the centers of the cities of our country. Winter is coming on and I hope we are not going through all that gloomy business we went through last year.

I have asked a committee of responsible people versed in this matter to meet together to see how we can make lighting to cheer the people during the winter months and at the same time observe the purposes of the alert and alarm.

It is not impossible and I trust I shall be able to produce some proposals which will necessarily be of a highly detailed character. No one must suppose that the danger of invasion is past. The secretary for war is absolutely right in enjoining the strictest vigilance upon the great and growing armies which are now entrusted in this country to the command of Sir Alan Brooke.

I do not agree with those who assume that after the 15th of September or whatever is Herr Hitler's latest date (laughter) we should be free from the menace of deadly attacks from overseas. Winter with its storms, its fogs and its darkness may alter the conditions but some of the conditions cut both ways. There must not, however, be any relaxation of effort or wise precaution, both of which are needed to save our lives and save our cause.

I shall not be giving away any military secrets if I say we are very much better off than we were a few months ago and if the problem of invading Great Britain was a difficult one in June it has become a far more difficult and far larger problem in September. While all these preparations for home defense have been going forward on a gigantic scale we have not hesitated to send a continuous stream of convoys with reinforcements to the Middle East.

In particular a few days ago we found it possible almost to double the effective strength of our fleet in the eastern Mediterranean by sending out some of our most powerful vessels to reinforce the flag of Sir Andrew Cunningham, the admiral in the eastern Mediterranean. This movement, plainly visible to the Italians, was not molested by them (laughter).

We have every intention of maintaining our positions there with our utmost strength and of increasing our sea power and the control which follows from sea power throughout the Mediterranean not only in the Eastern Basin but in the Western Basin. In this way, both at home and abroad, we shall persevere along our course, however the winds may blow (cheers).

South American Press Nervous Over U. S.-British Ship Deal

Buenos Aires, Sept. 5.—South American public opinion as expressed editorially in leading newspapers looks upon the naval base agreement between the United States and Great Britain as a military alliance likely to have far-reaching effects on all the American republics.

Some editors even express a certain apprehension as to the nature of these effects. El Mundo, of Buenos Aires, refers to the agreement as the Washington-London axis. La Prensa says it has all the characteristics of a mutual assistance pact. La Nacion says it is practically an alliance.

La Manana, of Montevideo, calls the agreement a close understanding between the two Anglo-Saxon powers which enables the United States to strengthen the weakest point in the defense structure of this hemisphere.

El Tiempo, of Bogota, the property of President Eduardo Santos, says the United States took this action in the defense of the Western Hemisphere, "but it is impossible to hide the influence which the action of the United States is certain to have on the foreign policy of all the American republics."

La Prensa, of Buenos Aires, says the United States with this agreement has greatly enlarged its power, both from the political and military viewpoints.

La Prensa emphasizes that the protection which the United States has now assumed over the other nations of North and South America, as expressed in President Roosevelt's message to Congress, is strictly a unilateral act on the part of the United States.

"While Roosevelt undoubtedly felt himself morally supported by the agreements recently reached among the 21 American nations at Havana, he neither invoked these agreements nor referred to them. His silence on this point is of great importance because it clearly defines the unilateral nature of his action. Consequently the other American nations are in no way bound or obligated by his action. Roosevelt has placed himself in a unilateral position similar to that of Monroe when he pronounced his famous doctrine.

"This agreement for leasing British colonial territories to the United States fully justifies the reservations Argentina made at Panama and Havana, regarding the Falkland Islands. While it is not probable that either the United States or Britain has considered extending the agreement to embrace the Falklands, we can congratulate ourselves that such a probability is made impossible by the reservations incorporated into the documents signed by the 21 republics at the two historic consultative assemblies."

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

On Country Editors

BOOKS, LIKE FISH, run in schools, and a book reviewer, like a fisherman, tends to tire of the run before the customers are satiated, because he takes the diet in greater concentration. "All Quiet on the Western Front" set the fashion for a long run of anti-war novels; Pearl Buck popularized China; Vincent Sheean turned the whole tribe of foreign correspondents into intraverted autobiographers; and following the success of Dr. Hertzler's "Horse and Buggy Doctor" came a whole parade of country doctors, country lawyers, country parsons, country schoolmasters, country editors. (The only type the publishers seem to have neglected is the honest countryman. Why doesn't some one dig up the autobiography of an American farmer?)

Only 27 days ago I was writing with enthusiasm of Henry Beetle Hough's "Country Editor," which is about the Vineyard Gazette of Edgartown, Mass. Seeing on the shelf Joshua K. Bolles' "Father Was an Editor" (Norton, $2.50), which is about the New Milford, Conn., Gazette, I thought to myself: "I don't think I can read it; one country-editor book will be just like another." I was wrong.

I ought to have known better. I had been wrong enough in reviewing Mr. Hough's "Country Editor." I said then that most country newspapers were edited, as a sideline to job-printing shops, by native sons who still hoped to make good and get away. I was promptly rebuked in the Darien (Conn.) Review and also by Simon W. Cooper, its contributing editor, who challenged me: "Just try and buy any weekly newspaper within a radius of 150 miles of New York. You will not, I think, find one owner who is anxious to get out and make good in a larger field . . . I was for a half century on the staff of the Brooklyn Eagle and have been a country editor, too. I think I know of what I am writing."

Joshua K. Bolles' father, also named Joshua Bolles, was an editor who loved his job, and if he sometimes stamped about the sanctum, denouncing Mr. Hearst's New York Journal and roaring out what he would do if he owned a city paper, he at least knew well that he would never become any city publisher's hireling. He was, in fact, singularly and lovably like Clarence Day's immortal father—though a gentler and more reasonable man.

A truckman at the New Milford depot used to say that Mr. Bolles' stomach must be chockful of splinters, swallowed while chewing pencils. Nature attracted him, his son says, as a load of hay attracts boys, but he wasn't soft about it. He regarded nature as "a great place to bounce around, a gymnasium to be used profusely for breathing, walking and bicycle riding." He loved New Milford, hard cider, snow shoveling and independent journalism. He distrusted the New Milford Water Co., regarded State aid for hard roads as the thin edge of corrupting socialism, and was regarded in Litchfield County as a tolerable atheist. He himself explained that he wasn't an atheist but an agnostic, but his wife put it otherwise. "Father just likes to argue," she said. "He believes in God, but he doesn't want God to find it out!"

Two Speeches

By Barnet Nover

Churchill's Reply To Hitler

THERE IS a revealing contrast between the address made by Adolf Hitler in the Berlin Sportspalast, Wednesday, and that delivered by Winston Churchill in the House of Commons the following day.

Hitler was speaking as the leader of a nation which in less than ten months had overrun Poland, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and France; Churchill as the government head of a beleaguered country which since last June has been facing invasion and since August 8 has been subjected to almost daily attack by large numbers of enemy planes.

Under the circumstances, one might assume that Hitler would have no need of his accustomed tricks of oratory to hammer home his points; that Churchill, on the other hand, would perforce have to call again upon his great reservoir of eloquence to rouse the fighting spirit of his people. Actually it was Hitler who lashed himself into a state of fury; Churchill's speech was as matter-of-fact as a treasurer's interim report. It was a far cry from his fight-on-the-beaches address of June 4.

AT THAT TIME the French army was in its penultimate stage of disintegration and the invasion of England appeared to be a matter of days. Yet, in the succeeding two months the situation has miraculously altered.

It would be rash to assume that Great Britain is out of danger. She is not, nor did Winston Churchill suggest that she is. "The secretary of war," he said, "is absolutely right in enjoining the strictest vigilance upon the great and growing armies which are now intrusted in this country to the command of Sir Alan Brooke." He also warned his countrymen that the fury of the German aerial assault on the British Isles might be doubled and even redoubled. Yet the tone of his address was one of utmost confidence in the capacity of Great Britain to weather the storm now raging about her.

CHURCHILL wasted very little time on the past and took the future for granted. The accounting he gave Parliament was of the situation in which Great Britain finds herself today—the casualties and the damage produced by the German raids; the measures which have and are being taken for the relief of the victims of those raids; the strength of the nation on land, in the air and at sea.

Hitler, for his part, tried to pass over the present as an unimportant interlude between one triumph and another. By emphasizing the long succession of British defeats, in Norway, in the Low Countries, in France he sought to give the impression that the enemy which the Third Reich still faces is decidedly vulnerable. But his emphasis on Germany's invincibility left the impression of a man who finds it necessary to reassure himself and his listeners.

In the course of his remarks Hitler made a threat that the German air force would "erase" British cities, unless the R. A. F. stopped its night bombing in Germany. This threat suggests two things. The first is that the British aerial activity against the Reich has not been without real effect. The second is that Hitler found it necessary to explain to his people why the assault on Great Britain to date has not been sufficient to knock out Germany's remaining enemy.

The reason for this failure, Hitler would have them believe, is that he has hitherto fought the war along humanitarian lines and only now chose to abandon that course. But the most revealing of the Fuehrer's statements was that in which he suggested the possibility that the war might last another four years.

THERE ARE VAST gaps in the information one needs for a complete picture of the present war situation. The total air strength of Germany, as the total air strength of Great Britain, is a carefully guarded mystery. But it is apparent from the events of the last month that Germany's admitted numerical superiority in the air has not been sufficient, up to now, to secure for her that unquestioned mastery she has sought to achieve.

Churchill told Parliament that the Germans have lost three planes for every one lost by the British while the losses in pilots and crews have been six to one. He also insists that the damage which has been done by German bombing has thus far been far from crippling. In this he has the backing of a host of American observers who have had occasion recently to make unguided visits to the Midlands, the ports of southeastern England and other heavily bombed areas in Great Britain.

In the meantime, the transfer of the 50 old-age destroyers has helped strengthen both Britain's sea power and her morale. Nor will this concrete evidence of American readiness to help Great Britain by measures short of war be lost on the German and the Italian people. No wonder, then, that immediately after the epoch-making Anglo-American deal Hitler found it necessary to reassure his people as to the ultimate outcome of the struggle with Great Britain even while warning them to curb their impatience.

A gambler who has made enormous gains at every turn of the wheel, the Fuehrer now finds it necessary to assure himself and those whose fate he holds in his hands that despite his lack of gains during the past two months his luck still holds.

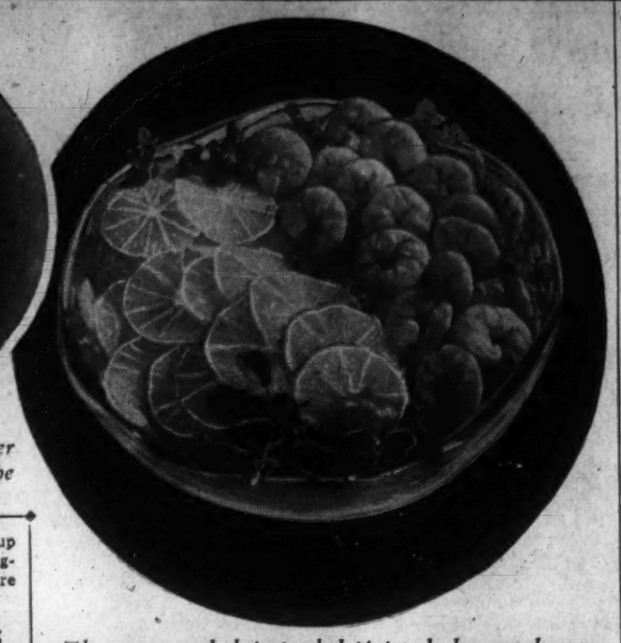
ORANGES ON PARADE

Mrs. Ralph Egan, winner of first prize, Post Recipe Contest.



The orange and shrimp salad pictured above makes an attractive service because of the pronounced flavor contrast and the blending of the color of the oranges, shrimp and watercress.

Unusual Recipes Are Submitted In Post Contest

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

FASHIONS in foods are as appealing as the latest modes in bonnets, shoe, jewelry or household decorations. Oranges form the base of many popular and wholesome desserts, ranging from the simple and quickly prepared orange juice for breakfast, through wholesome salads, to the more elaborate dishes, such as delicious baked and frozen desserts.

The Post recipe contestants deserve applause for the distinctive suggestions they give for making this all-important citrus fruit into the diet in so many delectable dishes. Following are the winners:

Orange Icebox Cake

Mrs. Ralph M. Egan,
Boulevard Apartments,
Alexandria, Va.

Recipe: Place in the top of double boiler, 1 cup orange juice, ½-cup lemon juice, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 3 beaten egg yolks and ½-cup sugar. Cook over boiling water until thick. Pour this mixture over 3 beaten egg whites. While this mixture is still hot, cut two 9-inch layers of sponge cake so as to have four layers. Spread the orange filling on these layers and pile up in cake form. Cover the top and sides with one cup whipped cream. Place in refrigerator three or four hours before serving. Yield: eight servings.

Orange Crumb Pudding

Mrs. Ruth Swisher,
61 West Washington street,
Hagerstown, Md.

Recipe: Pour 1½ cups buttermilk and 3 tablespoons melted butter over 4 cups soft bread crumbs. Let stand for 10 minutes. Stir in ¾-teaspoon salt, ½-cup sugar, ½-cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons grated orange rind, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½-teaspoon vanilla and 1 well-beaten egg. Pour into a buttered flat baking dish and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 45 to 50 minutes or until set. Serve while hot. Serves six.

Orange Fritters

Miss Gere Dell Sale,
1428 Whittier street northwest

Recipe: Mix 1 cupful flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ¾-teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons sugar and 2 tablespoons cornstarch in order given and sift three times. Beat yolk of 1 egg very lightly and add to ¼-cupful milk. Add slowly to flour mixture, then add 1 tablespoon olive oil and ¼-cup more of milk and beat gently until smooth. Finally fold in 1 stiffly beaten egg white. Drop by spoonfuls into deep hot fat. Fry until golden brown. Remove with skimmer and place for a few moments on a piece of absorbent paper. Split with sharp fruit knife leaving one side closed if possible. Insert orange sections into the split, that have been seeded, and sugared in a warm solution of sugar for at least 15 minutes before being added to the fritters. Roll in powdered sugar. Makes 12 to 14 fritters.

Stuffed Baked Oranges

Mrs. Eugenia D'Camera,
1843 Burke street southeast

Recipe: Pour boiling water over 6 oranges. Allow to stand for 10 minutes, turning frequently, then drain. Cut slice from top of oranges and scoop out the pulp. Chop 18 pitted dates and mix with the orange pulp that has been scooped out. Add 2 tablespoons coconut and 1 cup chopped walnut kernels. Refill oranges with mixture and top each orange with a marshmallow. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees until oranges are thoroughly heated and ingredients are blended—about 30 minutes. Decorate each with a walnut half. Serves six.

Orange Waffle Shortcake

Mrs. Sara Lee Orange,
1424 Chapin street northwest

Recipe: Mix 1 teaspoon sugar and 2 tablespoons melted butter together. Add 2 eggs and beat thoroughly. Add 2 cups sweet milk and 2 tablespoons cornmeal, ½-teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder and 2 cups flour. Cook in well-greased waffle iron. For an electric iron—which is not greased—use 5 to 6 tablespoons butter in the batter. Use two waffles for a shortcake. Fill and top with Orange Shortcake Filling, made as follows: Peel 6 oranges, removing all membrane. Separate into segments. Sweeten with powdered sugar, and spread between layers and on top of waffle. Serve with whipped cream or orange juice made with the juice of 2 oranges and ¾-cup sugar. Recipe makes 8 to 12 servings.

Hunters' Steak on Rolls

Allow 1 cube steak for each roll. Arrange on old-fashioned double wire toaster; grill 1 minute on each side over hot embers of campfire. Dust with salt and pepper. Place in split, buttered hamburger roll (toasted first, if desired), and top with thin slice Bermuda onion. If you haven't a toaster, use a frying pan; when it's hot, add a bit of fat, and brown steaks quickly, 1 minute on each side.

Vitamin B Claimed For Pork Chops

Meat Company Expert Gives Recipe for Cooking

A PORK CHOP a day, say the modern scientists, keeps Vitamin B deficiency away. Of course, we don't mean to prescribe any one food as a daily diet, but it is good news for those who like thick, juicy pork chops, well-browned and tender.

Martha Logan, widely known food authority, who is director of the home economics department of Swift & Co., gives the following suggestions concerning pork chops:

"The added nutritional value of Vitamin B in pork makes this meat one of the health foods. And recent findings show that pan frying preserves the Vitamin B in pork more than if it were cooked in water.

Have Chops Cut Thick

"The only fault we have to find with some cooked pork chops is that they have been cut too thin, which leaves too little of the white, juicy meat between the top and bottom well-browned coatings. Much of the flavor of pork is in the fat and pan browning brings out this flavor to perfection. Often thin chops are dried out and hard and do not do justice to the full goodness of this meat.

"Rib, loin or shoulder pork chops should be cut about one-half inch thick for pan frying or at least one inch for baking. All pork must be thoroughly cooked without one bit of pink showing. To get this result the secret is simple: cook slowly. We seldom broil pork chops, nor is it best to bread or flour coat the chops. Just place the chops in a heavy fry pan and heat slowly. Turn once when well browned, to brown the other side. Allow about 15 to 20 minutes for best results. Through slow cooking the fat melts enough to prevent sticking, so that the chops fry in their own fat.

Stuffings Suggested

"Thick rib chops may be slit like a pocket ond stuffed with chopped apples, a slice of orange or a well-seasoned dressing. Bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes or longer, until well browned and thoroughly cooked. For variety, use a pitted, plump, cooked prune or two or three halves of apricots in the chop.

For a supper in one dish, lay pork chops cut half an inch thick on top of a baking dish of baked beans, creamed potatoes, cooked lima beans or Spanish rice. Then bake in a moderate oven about 45 minutes.

Delicious 'Quickies' From Canned Shrimp

Put "oomph" in your omelette, and turn it into a main course for lunch or supper. Just open up a can of shrimp and add its contents (1 cup) right to the batter. A little minced parsley tucks in a touch you'll like, too.

Bright idea for your next party: Impale tender canned shrimp on toothpicks and pass a big bowl of salad dressing (Russian—made by adding chili sauce to mayonnaise is especially good). Let each guest dunk his own. Pass crisp crackers and have plenty of shrimp ready.

Treasure of the sea and harvest of the tree go together like freckles and red hair—when it's shrimp and fruit you're talking about. Add canned shrimp to your next fruit cup, pass salad dressing, wait for compliments! Celery, seedless grapes and canned pineapple take kindly to this shrimp treatment.

Canned shrimp contains vitamins A and D. In addition, they are rich in protein, contain iodine and other important minerals, such as calcium, iron, copper and others. This American product is one of the most economical ways to get your vitamins—and, oh, boy, what a swell taste!

Soup Additions Enhance Flavor

If you want to serve sherry in clear soup, this is the way: Place a teaspoon of sherry in the bottom of each hot soup cup or dish, and then fill with hot soup and serve immediately. Served this way, the sherry flavors the soup clear through.

A dash of catsup, lemon juice and minced parsley gives extra pep to jellied soups. Put in place just when served. It adds brightness and enhances the flavor.

R.A.F. Bombs Reply To Hitler's Threats

Berlin Power Plant, Oil Factory Near Stettin Are Struck

By James MacDonald.

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), Sept. 6.—Ignoring Chancellor Hitler's threat of "reprisals" for British raids on the Berlin area, Royal Air Force bomber crews visited the German capital again this morning and late last night, releasing their bombs on that city's west power station and one aircraft factory.

Also British raiders battered for the first time a synthetic oil plant near Stettin and continued firing woods of the Black Forest and the Oberharz Mountains west of Halle and Thuringia, east of Weimar where Nazi munitions stores and factories are known to be concealed.

The night attacs embraced numerous objectives, including German air force bases in occupied France, whence Marshal Hermann Goering's fliers jump off on their attacks of Britain. Among the latter were the airfields of Deguines, near Calais, St. Omer, Dunkirk, Antwerp, Abbeville, Luneville and Chartres.

Channel Guns Pounded

The Royal Air Force which must maintain constant viligance over German positions on the other side of the English Channel, appeared to be busy tonight bombing various points between Calais and Boulogne where long-range gun emplacements as well as airfields are located. Clusters of searchlights and cascades of flames along that stretch of French coast lit up both sides of the Channel soon after dusk. Shortly before the display began waves of British bombers were heard flying in the direction of France.

Two R. A. F. bombers failed to return from last night's raids and a third crashed on landing on home soil, the air ministry admitted.

The British raid on Berlin was the sixth in ten days. Air officials said only two targets were bombed there. One was a power station at Charlottenburg, which was visited for the second night in succession. The other was an airplane factory in the Spandau district.

R. A. F. bombers hummed over the Charlottenburg plant from shortly before midnight until 12:45 a. m. Pilots declared bombs fell straight on the target but added that resulting fires and big flashes made a check of the damage difficult. Whether any harm was done to the Spandau Aircraft Works was not stated.

Higher officers of the R. A. F. laid particular stress on a raid on Politz, pointing out that it was the farthest east British fliers have traveled over Germany. It involved a 1,200-mile flight during one stretch of which the raiders defied the challenge of heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Pass Through Heavy Fire

Over Politz itself the Nazis' ground fire was at first light and inaccurate; but en route there it had been violent, the R. A. F. pilots said.

Ground fire around Stettin was very heavy, and as other waves of British raiders approached anti-aircraft batteries on the opposite side of the river Oder joined in the barrage.

One pilot told his superior officers on his return that he saw many flares dropped between Brunsbuttel and Stettin and he thought they were released by German fighter planes, none of which, however, had engaged him.

The first salvo of explosives was sent down on the Politz oil factory soon after 11 o'clock last night. The attack lasted for two hours, the air ministry said.

Making a low dive attack at 350 miles an hour, one pilot related, he saw his stick of bombs falling in a string across the plant, knocking over two of its six tall smokestacks and starting fires, one of which was seen by home-going R. A. F. crews, 70 miles distant.

Schools Held Source of Radicals

By Howard W. Blakeslee,

Associated Press Science Writer.

State College, Pa., Sept. 5.—The principal source of America's economic radicals is prolonged schooling—not unemployment—the American Psychological Association was told today.

Summarizing a study of thousands of America's employed and unemployed, Dr. Goodwin Watson, of Columbia University, said "it is all but universally assumed that the experience of being unable to find jobs leads men and women to rebel against unjust economic order."

But facts show, he declared, that the influence of unemployment is negligible. Persons without jobs for two years were just as unaffected toward radicalism as those jobless for three months or less.

One of the main factors causing economic radicalism appeared to be schooling, particularly in going to high school and college, the study showed.

"Those who carried on into graduate study," said Dr. Watson, include ten times as large a proportion of radicals as those who have barely finished the eighth grade.

The most radical group found was classed as professional and subprofessional people, and the most conservative factory workers. Engineers and scientists were high in both radicals and conservatives with fewer neutrals.

Radicalism dropped rapidly with increasing age.

Opposites Don't Attract to Wedding

Engaged couples at the time of marriage seem to be almost as much alike as brothers and sisters, Dr. E. Lowell Kelly, of Purdue University, reported to the association.

This similarity, showing the opposites do not attract for marriage, is based on 100 tests for physical and personality traits among 300 couples.

For getting engaged, it seems there need be no similarity in such things as blood types, health adjustment, school marks, neurotic tendencies, introversion and extroversion, and masculinity or femininity, Dr. Kelly said.

But engaged couples are likely to resemble each other in things like age, church membership, amount and type of education, social-economic status and to a lesser extent in intelligence, height, hair, color, eye color and the age at which they had their first date.

Mrs. Martin's Rites Today; D. C. Singer

Contralto Active In Music Here For Half Century

Funeral services will held tday for Mrs. Margaret Nolan Martin, well-known contralto, whose voice was heard in many Washington churches and who was actively connected with the Capital's musical life over half a century.

Mrs. Martin died suddenly in her home yesterday at the Portner Apartments. She had been in ill health for some time.

Born in Washington July 4, 1870, Mrs. Martin began her musical career at the age of 17 when she became contralto soloist at the old St. Matthew's Church, then located at Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

Fame Spread

Her fame spread and soon her musical services were requested at other churches here as well as in national opera. Reluctantly Mrs. Martin turned down an offer to appear with the Bostonians, well-known touring opera company some years ago, because she did not wish to leave her family.

The concert-opera offer was made by Barnaby and McDonald, owners and managers of the Bostonians, when their star, Jessie Bartlett Davis, had suddenly resigned. The musical impressarios had heard Mrs. Martin's captivating voice and sought vainly for a week to induce her to accept. Her refusal was partly decided because she had become the mother of a daughter, the present Mrs. Mildred Martin Paddock, wife of Commander Hubert E. Paddock, U. S. N.

Other churches at which Mrs. Martni sang included the Washington Hebrew Congregation, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, St. Aloysius Church, and the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, where she once directed the choir.

Two Brothers Prominent

Two brothers also became prominent musically. The late John H. Nolan was a bass soloist in the choir where Mrs. Martin began her career. James J. Nolan has been a barytone soloist at St. Patrick's Church until the past year.

Services will be at 9 a. m. from St. Paul's Catholic Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, under the Rev. Cornelius J. Dacey, pastor. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Besides her daughter and her husband, Edward A. Martin, employe of the Capitol Transit Co., she leaves a granddaughter, Miss Mildred Elizabeth Paddock.

D. C. Business, Civic Leaders Plan 1943 Exposition

Two score Washington civic and business leaders last night indorsed plans for an "All-American Exposition" here during 1943 to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the laying of the cornerstone of the Capitol.

The proposal calls for the collection of exhibits from all Western Hemisphere countries in a building to be constructed on a tract of Government land in the District. The exposition would be a powerful stimulant to local building, hotel and transportation businesses because of the contemplated great influx of tourists, it was pointed out by speakers including Sparrel A. Wood, president of the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, national director, National Federation of Women's Clubs; Arthur Clarendon Smith, founder of the Federation of Businessmen's Associations; James F. Duhamel, chairman of celebrations committees of the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants.

Chairman of the executive committee for the exposition is Henry U. Milne, of the Golden Gate International Exposition Committee.

OYEZ! OYEZ! METRONOME OPENS. Resplendent with new luxury touches and Grant Thompson's shining harmonies, the Wardman Park Hotel's Metronome Room opens tonight on the stroke of 10. Stars of the Thompson Orchestra include Madge Marley, notable radio and recording vocalist; Dee Orr, double-tempo drummer; clowning "Prof." Shingle. Wardman's Manager George Johnson selected the Grant Thompson Band after weeks of auditioning New York's finest. New and handsome lighting effects and furnishings will make the favorite Metronome Room more charmful than ever.

Famed theatrical headliners, stunts galore, new ideas in merry-making, all figure in the program now being arranged for the Rainbow Room's "fall opening party." It will take place during the last half of the week of September 23.

PRIZE PARTIES. Lounge Riviera, Patricia Prochnik, lovely daughter of the former Austrian Ambassador, gave onlookers a big thrill by stepping on the bandstand and warbling "I'll Never Smile Again" ever so prettily. Her party included Peggy Townsend, Hugh Ford and James Davis, jr., son of Senator James J. Davis.

Del Rio. Everyone in Prince George County seemed to be on hand for the dinner party of the Police Boys Club of Prince George County. The Washington delegation included James Colliflower, former president of the Washington Police Boys Club and Maj. Ernest Brown, head of the Police Department.

JOE COCHRAN, son of Showman Steve Cochran, and his orchestra are making sweet music on the S. S. Potomac; will be there until the last "moonlight" on September 10.

TREMENDOUS TROIKA PROSPECTS. A superb international revue will grace the Troika opening on September 12. There'll be Tenor Candido Botelho (known as the "Voice of Brazil") direct from the Brazilian Pavilion at the World's Fair; Lina de Acosta, the Mexican prima donna; Marusia Sava, gypsy contralto; also a gypsy choir, Latin-American dancers and a Ukrainian singer. Owner Helen Hamilton, who has been auditioning in New York all summer, arranged for a series of Troika presentations that promise to eclipse its previous dazzling record.

The Harrington Tavern's went and gone and done it! Jack Dalton, the "Singing Cowboy," has just arrived and will warble all of the fine old Western songs desired by Harrington patrons.

JACK KERR, who's just returned to Cafe Caprice after being away too long, is fresh from Rio de Janeiro where he delighted Norte Americanos with Broadway songs in the Capacabana. He will go to the Casino-on-the-Park of New York's Essex House when he leaves Caprice on September 25. That gives you-all just about three weeks to enjoy Jack's snickersnee songs.

PATRIOTIC RHYTHM. Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, is composing some splendidly thrilling music for a patriotic song written by Mrs. M. L. Barth, of Nashville, Tenn., now visiting her Washington daughter, Miss Marguerite Barth. Here's hoping it's another "God Bless America."

CASINO ROYAL WEEK-ENDS. Jack Schaeffer's contagious "jive" is making the Casino Royal the Sunday night headquarters for Washington bandsmen, most critical of music listeners. Last Sunday night we saw most of Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band and sizable delegations from other orchestras. The "Saturday matinee show" is another pop week-end feature at Casino Royal.

Tonight and tomorrow give you your last chances to step to Paul Kain's music at Glen Echo—this season. Paul will probably be back at Glen Echo next year, but you don't want to wait that long! . . . This reminds that you'd better not pass up any chances to dine at O'Donnell's Farms, either. Summer's drawing to its close.

HITHER AND THITHER DEPARTMENT. Remember Dee Tracy, the Mayflower's pretty cigarette girl who was graduated as a singer in Dick Garner's "Hotcha Club" last summer? Chances are she'll be canarying in a downtown spot in a couple of days . . . "Mr. America," who's doing such astonishing stunts at the Lotus, is the same "Mr. America" whose pictures you've seen in the national magazines . . . Sidney Boyd, Maryland Gardens' singing emcee, can also tell fortunates at cards—fascinatingly . . . Joe Totts, who used to trumpet with Bill Downer's Band, has just joined Rodd Raffell's Nightingale Orchestra . . . Greeter Martin and Maestro Carr are back at the Madrillon after vacationing . . . "Mousey" Garner, of the Mayfair, is making plans to return to Hollywood. He has the Hollywood virus, also some interesting prospects . . . A flash from Maestro Al Oddone says that there'll be another big week-end at the Gay Nineties with bright floor shows tonight and tomorrow.

HI HAT'S CAVALIERS are making a cavalier-like effort to get out of their current contract so that they can remain at Hi Hat. Otherwise they'll have to leave Washington the last of this month. The Hi Hat management and customers are all hoping that the Cavaliers can stay.

MELODY SPECIALS. The Neptune Room's Three Stars are going off the deep end symphonically and successfully in "Kammenoi Ostrow" . . . Al Shea's Rustic Cabin Orchestra specializes in tunes with girls' names as their titles. It's a nice way to compliment your girl friend . . . You'll hear no lovelier strolling music than that of Eddie Whitesel and Jane Marlow at the New Bavarian.

The Shoreham's super-dancers, St. Clair and Day, plan something really new next week, a Viennese waltz without whirls, lifts or stunts. It's just to be a pure study in la danse.

Girl, 17, Faces Trial in Slaying Of Her Brother

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 5 (AP).—Petite, dark-haired Mary Wolf, 17, recent high school honor graduate, pleaded innocent today to first-degree murder in the fatal shooting of her brother, Frederick, 9, as he slept last night.

The child cried softly during her arraignment in city court. An assistant district attorney said she had made a statement admitting she fired a .22-caliber rifle bullet into her brother's head on a "sudden impulse" to "see what it would be like."

Her counsel, William L. Salacuse, asserted he would seek a court order to have the girl examined by alienists.

Return Empty Box Cars, Association Orders

The car service division of the Association of American Railroads directed all railroads yesterday to return to the Grand Trunk Western Railroad, without waiting for reloading, all of its 50-foot end-door freight cars.

The order, the association said, was made necessary by exceptionally heavy Government truck orders requiring cars of this type for loading and the order becomes effective September 10.

Arnold Table Talk Distilled Into Book

Trust-Buster Finds Time Between Parties And Prosecutions to Print His Views On 'Bottlenecks of Business,' Out Today

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TIME AND AGAIN in recent years Capital dinner table talk has been enlivened with Thurman Arnold's spirited comments on, and tirades against, trade barriers in this country. As Assistant Attorney General, heading up Government action against monopolies, the United States' No. 1 trust-buster has had plenty to talk about. He can, and he has. Furthermore, for the benefit of a lot of us who haven't always been able to follow him in the social give and take over the dinner table, he has put his ideas down in black and white; in other words, he has written a book "The Bottlenecks of Business," published today.

Described on the jacket as "a shrewd and informed commentary on our whole economic system, its weakness, and its strength," this tome is sure to be widely read in Washington and throughout the country. Persons who read Mr. Arnold's "The Folklore of Capitalism" probably will run, not walk, to the nearest bookstore for a copy of the later book. While the two, incidentally, touch on many of the same topics, they are entirely different in treatment. Capitalistic society in general was neatly dressed down in "Folklore," while "Bottlenecks" is a discerning argument against all obstructions to the free flow of trade.

Arnold Parties Make Social History

I don't know anybody in Washington besides Thurman Arnold who could engage in a series of dramatic prosecutions on monopolies, write a book, and do a moderate amount of social circling—all in the same period of time. Last winter, when the antitrust drive was full speed ahead, and "Bottlenecks" was well on its way, the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Arnold were here, there, and everywhere as much as ever. Mr. Arnold managed not to drop out of the social scene under pressure of work because he had his program planned down to the split second. Most of his book was written, I understand, in the early morning hours—beginning around 5 o'clock and going on until office time.

Meanwhile the Government fight against one monopoly after another was hitting the headlines regularly; and—what's even more noteworthy so far as this column is concerned—the Arnolds were regularly gathering in stimulating groups of guests to sample a grade A brand of Arnold hospitality.

Perhaps a good deal of credit for the latter should go to Mrs. Arnold, who, at the slightest provocation, can party you a party that'll measure up to any you ever attended. She knows how to pick her guests so that each one sets off the other; and if conversation doesn't roll along merrily under its own steam, she can pick up the ball and toss it out with a story told in a way you'll never forget. Sometimes the man of the house fills in with a poem or two, and after that the professionals give over to the amateurs and nobody ever wants to go home. I've seen the stiffest shirts collapse to normalcy under the spell of Frances Arnold's wit and wisdom.

Two Sons Leaving for Yale Soon

Like his associates in the Antitrust Division, Mr. Arnold has stayed on at his desk during the past summer, while many Capital officials took off to beach and mountain resorts. He and Mrs. Arnold have limited their vacation to week-end trips up to Piping Rock, down to Myrtle Beach, and over to Hot Springs. Meawhile, Thurman Arnold, jr., has been working on a newspaper in Cheyenne, Wyo., and their younger son, George Longan Arnold, has been visiting a cousin in San Angelo.

Young Thurman is expected back next week, while George returned home several days ago. The two will be off to Yale the end of the month—George, to start his college career, and Thurman, jr., to enter senior year. Incidentally, as a writer he may follow in his father's footsteps. He's already a columnist on the Yale News.

Hendersons Off To See Son Wed

Col. Paul Henderson, former Assistant Postmaster General, and Mrs. Henderson left yesterday for Bronxville, N. Y., where they will attend the marriage of their son, Clark Henderson, and Miss Hilde Seelbach today.

The marriage ceremony will take place in Christ Church with Canon Albert Lucas, headmaster of St. Albans School for Boys, officiating. The Misses Josephine and Florence Henderson, twin sisters of the bridegroom, left earlier in the week to attend preliminary festivities. They will be among the bridesmaids.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

WASHINGTON IS beginning to fill up in preparation for the fall season and informal parties to compare notes on summer vacations are the order of the day. The alway original Mrs. "Chip" Robert invited friends for cocktails the other day to celebrate her husband's birthday.

"Chip's not here, you know," she said when issuing invitations. "He's in Atlanta."

Whether the guest of honor enjoyed his party by absent treatment is not known, but the friends who gathered to drink a toast to him enjoyed it on his behalf. Among them were Mrs. George Pettengill, Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, Senator Radcliffe, of Maryland, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John H. Towers, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waldrop.

Mrs. Lionel Atwill was there and was wondering how she could fit into her new Georgetown house a recently completed portrait of herself, dressed in a red dress and white coat, and painted against a green background. Mrs. Harold Walker was on hand to drink a toast to her son-in-law on his birthday, and was accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Aldace Walker. Others present were Fulton Lewis and Gladstone Williams.

The Minister of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann have been staying at Jamestown, R. I., as guests of Mme. de Kauffmann's mother, Mrs. Dougal MacDougall. Also staying with Mrs. MacDougall were another daughter, Mrs. Mason Sears, of Boston, and Mr. Sears, and the Minister's brother, Axel de Kauffmann, with his extremely beautiful wife.

Count and Countess Matchek Obersdorff—she is the former Kate Thomas—have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Howard Homans on Long Island. Countess Obersdorff's sister, Rosamund, is married to a brother of Count Obersdorff. This latter gallant lady ran a hospital ship at Dunkerque during the evacuation.

MRS. NORTHAM GRIGGS has taken the house on O street in Georgetown which was occupied by the very popular Harold Tittmanns before the State Department sent them to Geneva. Mrs. Griggs and her two children will keep the home fires burning in Washington while Mr. Griggs is in London on duty with the Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., have returned from a trip to Mexico where they visited Count and Countess Roberti.

Mrs. Anthony Rumbold has arrived in Washington after spending the summer on Cape Cod. The Rumbolds, much to the regret of their neighbors in Georgetown, have given up their house on Thirty-fourth street and have taken a larger house on Massachusetts avenue. The change was made in order to have room for the two small children of Mrs. Rumbold's sister, Mrs. John Chetwoode. Mrs. Chetwoode is a Red Cross nurse in England and her husband is in the British Navy.

Also back from Marion on Cape Cod is Mrs. Anthony Coleby. She reports that her children are thriving and are still on the Cape, but that she will go up in a few days to fetch them back to Washington.

Commander James A. Campbell has arrived from Rehoboth and entered the Naval Hospital. He has many friends in Washington who will be sorry that his trip to the Capital was not made for a gayer reason.

EVERY DOG has his day. The same may be said of man's second best friend the horse, and so it was proved at the recent kent County Horse Show at Chestertown, Md. It seems that Wilbur Hubbard, local M. F. H. and horseman, owns an old grat cart and plough horse which he rents out to a farmer. What was his surprise and dismay at the horse show to hear this horse announced in the jumping class as "owned by Wilbur Hubbard" and ridden by the man who rents him.

Sure enough, here came the old, gray steed as best he could, taking the jumps in his stride, or knocking the rails off if they were too high for his taste. I wish this tale could end like a fairy story with the neglected nag winning all the prizes but, to be factual, all that resulted was a moment of pride for the horse and rider and a moment of amused embarrassment for Mr. Hubbard.

Edith Pearson To Join Family At Summer Home

Miss Edith Fry Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Pearson, who returned to town early this week from her family's summer home at Bay Head, N. J., left yesterday for Philadelphia.

Last evening she was one of the assistants at the debut dance given in honor of Miss Winkie Van Lennup at the Philadelphia Country Club.

Miss Pearson will go from there to Bay Head to join her family for the remainder of this month. She came to Washington to attend the wedding of a former Mount Vernon Seminary classmate, Miss Louise Luebben, and Harold Palmer.

Anne Sperry Hostess At Nantucket Island

Miss Anne Sperry, postdebutante daughter of Marcy L. Sperry, has as her guest at Nantucet Island, Miss Rosyln Sherwood, of Long Island.

The Sperry sisters, Anne, Margaret and Edith, have been at the popular Massachusetts resort since June. They are not expected to return to Washington until the middle of October.

Biddles Return From W.Va. Resort; Now at Carlton

Anthony J. Biddle, United States envoy to Poland, and Mrs. Biddle have returned from a stay at White Sulphur Springs and are at the Carlton for a day or two. The news that Mr. Biddle recently leased a large house in Philadelphia gives credence to the report that he will not return to the Polish government, which after the war moved to Angers, France.

Mrs. Biddle's son-in-law and daughter, Prince and Princess Alexander Hohenlohe, are remaining at the West Virginia resort for a while.

Also at the Carlton is George Gordon, Minister to the Netherlands, who has been in New York.

Walsh Mansion To House Theater

The Walsh mansion on Massachusetts avenue is about to house another local institution. The Washington Theater will move in there today, having leased the top floor, where the ballroom was the scene of many a gay party when the original owners lived there.

The Red Cross and the Finnish Relief Society also have headquarters at the mansion, which is owned by Mrs. Edward Beale McLean.

Mr. Humphrey, Miss Kingsley Wed in Study

Major's Daughter Married to Chief Of Billard School

The wedding of Miss Meta Elizabeth Kingsley, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Joseph T. Kingsley, of Falls Church, Va., to Evan Harris Humphrey, jr., son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs Evan H. Humphrey, of San Antonio, Tex., took place yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson officiating. The ceremony was performed in the rector's study of the First Congregational Church.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a brown ensemble trimmed with fox, brown accessories and a corsage of two white orchids tipped in lavender. Miss Billee Tumlin was maid of honor, attired in soldier blue, topped off with a corsage of gardenias. Lieut. Joseph T. Kingsley, jr., of Langley Field, Va., was best man.

A luncheon at the Mayflower followed the ceremony. Present, besides the bridal party, were Mrs. Hazel Minnix, Lieut. Worthington Williams, A. C. Minnix, jr., and Mr. Humphrey's uncle and aunt, Col. and Mrs. M. B. Humphrey.

Later the couple left for New York. After September 15 they will be at home at 725 Ocean avenue, New London, Conn.

The bride attended Arlington Hall and her husband was a member of the class of 1940 at West Point. He is commandant of the Admiral Billard Preparatory School for Coast Guard and Navy at New London, Conn.

Dr. Anderson Guest of Hulls At Luncheon

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull entertained at a small luncheon yesterday in honor of Dr. Luis Anderson, former Foreign Minister of Costa Rica. The party was an informal one for a few friends and took place in the hosts' apartment at the Carlton. Secretary and Mrs. Hull met Dr. Anderson at the Havana Conference, to which he was a delegate.

During his Washington stay the distinguished Latin American was also feted at a small dinner given by the Assistant Secretary of State, A. A. Berle.

Colorful Hollywood Touch Marks Van Dykes' Party

Novel Decorations Compete With Delicious Cuisine and Cocktails at Shoreham Affair; Mrs. Willebrandt Honor Guest

By Elizabeth Henney

In typical Hollywood fashion, and setting, Maj. and Mrs. W. S. "Woody" Van Dyke, threw a party last evening to honor their hostess of the evening before, Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt. The event, given on the terrace of the Shoreham Hotel, began at 7 in the evening with cocktails and continued far, far into the night with buffet supper and dancing later on.

Arriving guests found that their hosts had taken over one whole section of the terrace for the evening and converted it into a private garden, screened off by a row of hedges in tubs with a vine-covered trellis archway for an entrance. Strings of gaily colored lights trimmed the hedges and wall and a covered pavilion on one side was strung with bright Japanese paper lanterns.

Just inside the arch stood Mrs. Van Dyke to welcome the guests. Her stunning gown of black chiffon was fashioned with a fitted waist and flowing skirt, and bordered at the neckline with chiffon of flesh shade. From her throat hung a tear-drop diamond pendant, swung on a chain of platinum. With her was the guest of honor, Mrs. Willebrandt, who had chosen a white frock of faille for the occasion. Fashioned with tight bodice, flowing skirt, square neckline and short puffeed sleeves, it was trimmed at neck, sleeves and waist with a narraw piping of patriotic red and blue. The host, in white, circulated among the guests with gay greetings.

From Scotch To Orange Juice

Along one side of the garden setting was a long table from which were served all manner of drinks from champagne to scotch and soda and orange juice for those "on the wagon." To balance the picture, at the other end of the "garden" was another equally long table, this one loaded to the groaning point with viands. Centering the table was a huge fish of salmon mousse, with a green olive eye that glared balefully at the guests; while at either end of the table was a large, elaborately lighted Marine Corps eagle, fashioned entirely of ice.

The Marine Corps touch (Director Van Dyke is a major in the Marine Corps Reserve) was further emphasized in the floral decorations, centering the buffets and the small tables which were scattered about for the guests.

The Commandant of the Marine Corps, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, and Mrs. Holcomb were among the early arrivals at the party, as were several other Marine couples. The Holcombs, who have just returned from a trip to the Coast, were most enthusiastic about the West, and Gen. Holcomb remarked that though they both came from a line of Easterners, they had fallen so in love with California that they planned to make their home there "when we retire from active service."

Other early arrivals included the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, the latter smartly gowned in black with a small flowered pancake hat of soft, dusky blue; Senator Henry F. Ashurst and Representatives John Costello and Bertrand W. Gearhart, of California.

Fegans Among Those Present

Col. Joseph Fegan, of the Marines, and Mrs. Fegan were there, the latter wearing a smart black dinner gown; and Commander and Mrs. Edwin A. Eddlegorde, of the Navy, she wearing a long-sleeved dinner frock of deep purple crepe. Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., was casually chic in a buff colored suit with a white frothy shirtwaist.

The Marine Corps was further represented by Maj. and Mrs. Orin H. Wheeler (the latter in blue chiffon) and Maj. and Mrs. William B. Only, while from the movie world were Phil Regan, who has been headlining at the Capitol Theater this week, and Mrs. Regan, who was trimly turned out in black. Representative and Mrs. L. F. Ford, Carter Barron, Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Berger, were others noted in the many who made up the list of official, service and filmland guests at this memorable party.

Charles McLaughlins Have House Guests

The Assistant Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Miller and their son, Thomas, of Omaha, Nebr.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller will go from here to New York, where the former will attend as a delegate the National Tax Association convention.

Barbara Harris And Don Marrs Are Married

Bride Is Daughter Of the Rector of Foundry Church

Mr. and Mrs. Don Franklin Marrs, who were married on Wednesday in New York, will make their home in Detroit after a wedding trip. The former Miss Barbara Louise Harris was wed at the John Street Methodist Church, where, 26 years before, her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. Frederick Brown Harris, of Washington, had exchanged their vows, and of which her grandfather was rector.

Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, of this city, performed the ceremony in the presence of the couple's relatives and close friends. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white frock of point d'esprit lace made with a sweetheart neckline, puffed sleeves, a full skirt and train. Her fingertip veil fell from a d'Medici cap and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

Miss Connie Harris was maid of honor for her sister, and wore blue mousseline de soie with a faille tulle hat to match and carried pink roses and delphinium. Hervey Thirloway, of Montana, was best man.

A supper at the Hotel St. George, in Brooklyn, followed the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from Mount Vernon Seminary and the School of Speech of Northwestern University. She also studied at the Bulgakof School of Dramatics, in New York, and at the Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Mass. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. Her father has been rector of the Foundry Methodist Church in Washington for 16 years.

Mr. Marrs is a graduate of Montana University and studied at the University of Washington and Georgetown University. He is now with the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the Treasury Department.

Miss Goodhand Is Married

Two prominent Maryland families were united yesterday afternoon when Miss Elizabeth Annette Goodhand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Luther Goodhand, of Chester, Md., became the bride of Andrew Gwynn Bowie, of Upper Marlboro, Md.

The ceremony took place in the rectory of the Baltimore Cathedral. Mr. Bowie's uncle, the Rev. Andrew Keene Gwynn, of Greenville, S. C., officiated, assisted by the Rev. Francis J. Loughran, rector of St. Mary's Church, Upper Marlboro. Only the immediate families and a few close friends were present, but the reception at the Belvedere Hotel later was attended by several hundred.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin fashioned with inserts of Chantilly lace, a sweetheart neckline and leg o' mutton sleeves. Her tulle veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and she carried a shower of bride's roses, gypsophelia and valley lilies.

Her only attendant was her sister-in-law, Mrs. Charles Luther Goodhand, jr., of Parkersburg, W. Va. She wore a taffeta frock in three tones ranging from lavender to deep purple and carried an old-fashioned banquet.

Dr. Andrew Keene Bowie, of Washington, was best man for his brother, and the ushers were another brother, Henry Addison Bowie, and J. Page Bowie, of Annapolis.

Mrs. Goodhand was attired in Delft blue lace with matching hat and a corsage of gardenias, and the bridegroom's mother chose black Chantilly lace and marquisette with a small black velvet hat, with uncurled ostrich trim. A single orchid completed her ensemble.

After a honeymoon in the West Indies the couple will make their home at Beechwood, near Upper Marlboro. When she left after the reception the bride wore a dressy black wool suit and black velvet hat with a gardenia corsage.

Mrs. North Gives Linen Shower For Miss Charlotte Graddick

Guest of Honor Will Be Married, September 14, to Richard A. Duvall; Two Daughters and Anne Garey Aid Hostess

Mrs. Roy M. North, wife of the Deputy Third Assistant Postmaster General, entertained at a linen shower yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Charlotte Graddick, who will be married to Richard Alan Duvall on September 14.

Assisting the hostess were her two daughters, Romona Ruth and Janis, and Anne Garey. Many beautiful gifts were presented to the guest of honor.

The party took place in Mrs. North's apartment at 2501 Calvert street. Guests included Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, Mrs. Hugh Peterson, Mrs. W. W. Howes, Mrs. Smith W. Purdum, Mrs. Ramsey S. Black, Mrs. Vincent Miles, Mrs. William Slattery, Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, Mrs. Harold Ambrose, Mrs. William Bray.

WASHINGTON

Legal Aid Bureau Hears Wives Mostly Mondays and Maids on Thursdays

ON MONDAY afternoons from 2 to 4, the Legal Aid Bureau's office at 1409 L street northwest resembles a cross between a sewing circle and a day nursery. The explanation, according to Director Beatrice A. Clephane, is that most family squabbles occur Sunday, when the man of the house is home. By Monday the wives decide they want a divorce, so they get the children together and go to the bureau. The same hours on Thursday find the office crowded with maids using their day off to take wage grievances to Miss Clephane and her 12 staff attorneys.

Miss Clephane

The rest of the week brings every other conceivable kind of complaint. About 2,500 clients were helped last year. The bureau, a Community Chest agency, takes cases only after investigation shows the client cannot afford a fee. Nearly half of the applicants for legal aid receive a word of friendly advice and go on their way; only 5 per cent of the cases taken cannot be settled amicably and reach the courts.

SIGNS OF LIFE—2700 block of Fourteenth street northwest: "Pat Your Hairdresser" . . . Connecticut avenue drive-in: "Parking for Frozen Custard Customers Only" . . . F street restaurant: "Big-hearted Nick gives you mustard free with every 5-cent sandwich."

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Walz take their music seriously, so they've used the lyre motif in decorating their H street apartment. On the door knocker, the draperies, a French Empire piano chair—the more closely you look, the more lyres you see. Any household could select a similarly appropriate motif to replace the omnipresent monogram, Mrs. Walz believes. The Prince of Wales feathers would do for a Welsh family, a scroll for a literary couple. Then there are wheat sheaves, playing card designs, arrows, eagles, the Napoleonic bee. The trick is to use the symbol subtly, she warns; give your guests the fun of finding it in unexpected places.

TIPS ON MARKETING

From the D. C. Department of Weights and Measures.

About 250,000 loaves of bread are consumed per day in Washington. Loaves must be of standard weights—1 pound, a pound and a half or an even number of pounds. Each loaf must bear a label showing the weight. Before the present weight law was passed, any baker could select any weight he pleased, and customers never knew how much they received for their money. There was also much cut-throat competition among bakeries. Now competition is fair, and consumers know what they pay per pound.

What to Wear

Proper Attire for Informal Autumn Wedding Is Question of the Day With 'Draft' Brides

Dorothea Buettner, in real life a recent bride, poses in two versions of the fall bridal outfit. At left—A distinguished creamy taffeta brocade with fine hand detailing for traditional weddings. At right—A distinguished suit for the informal wedding and quick honeymoon get-away of Benedictine brown wool and tawny leopard

Accessories Also Present Problem At This Event

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

What to wear and when to wear it—this is a major problem of social life for Washington women. The following is the first of a series on good form in dress.

"I'm going to get married next week. What shall I wear for an informal afternoon wedding?"

"For an 8 o'clock wedding is it necessary to wear a hat, or shall I wear a short veil with my dinner dress?"

MARSHALL ADAMS

These are typical questions being asked now that "draft brides" and their hurry-up weddings are becoming more frequent. The most urgent query relates to clothes for the informal 4 o'clock wedding.

Authoritative Suggestions

Tall, blonde Dorothea Buettner seemed a logical one to decree the proper attire for a not-too-formal September wedding. She is not only fresh from several years of successful New York fashion modeling, but has just acquired a similar position at a Washington store—as well as a Washington husband decidedly not a "draft" one.

Dorothea's clothes judgment tends towards expensive conservatism, but her suggestions can be interpreted at any price. She advises a plain dressmaker frock with a matching wool coat or jacket for the girl who decides against the traditional white.

Fur trimming is optional, dependent on budgets and the weather, but it goes without saying that the bride who wears a daytime traveling suit should not try a Hedy Lamarr with lavish trimmings. The newest costume suits are accented with leopard, beaver or mink tails and are in heady Benedictine brown, winter blue, olive or evergreen tones.

Strictly-Tailored

The plum or chocolate-colored velveteen dress with a scarf or cape of martens (cheaper kolinskys look almost as good) is also suitable for an informal wedding, and, if matched with a lightweight topcoat, can be used as well as the costume for dashing from the ceremony to the plane or boat.

A feminine blonde like Dorothea can afford to be strictly tailored even at her own wedding, as her own choice of a gray tailleur with white silk blouse proved. Her accessories were chic and appropriate—a "milk shake" colored hat an accessories and a single perfect green orchid for her suit lapel. Brown or winter blue accessories are not only soignee for fall but avoid that touch of black, tabooed even in small doses by the bride.

Hat Should Not Detract

As to the informal bride-to-be—she does not remove her hat during the informal home, parsonage or church wedding, and the hat (we hope) would not be one of this fall's more foolish variety designed to distract attention from the bride and groom themselves. A shoulder length veil can be added, if custom dictates, but usually veils pinned to informal street headgear look too much like an after-thought. However, in Orthodox Jewish weddings, the bride is always veiled by the prospective groom until she has drunk from the nuptial goblet after which she is free to uncover her face.

A veil is optional at other informal weddings. Gloves and flowers although not required are more often than not used. Since in some ceremonies the bride's right hand is clasped by the groom and her left hand receives the ring, it is simpler for her to tuck her gloves into her handbag flap ahead of time rather than nervously toy with them. The widow or divorcee must forego the charms of a bridal veil along with orange blossoms and white. But Wallis Simpson, when she became the uDchess of Windsor, cleverly got around this tradition by wearing a suspicion of a milliner's veil deftly done in the pinks and blues permitted a divorcee.

Frozen Desert

If you have an automatic refrigerator here is an especially delicious summer dessert: Spread a jelly role with ice cream, sprinkle with fresh berries or sliced peaches (slightly sweetened). Roll, wrap in waxed paper and fit into a freezing tray. In 2 or 3 hours (you know the freezing ability of your refrigerator) unmold and cut into slices.

Egoism Rules Film Fashions. . Head to Toe

Hollywood, Calif.—Fashion proves that she is definitely egotistical this summer by letting several things go to her head. If it isn't a hat that attracts attention, it's a feminine conceit of some kind among the girls on the Warner Studio lot.

Ida Lupino has been wearing narrow chiffon scarves around her hair. She ties them in a flat bow on the very top of her head. Ida likes a blue bow with her crepe breakfast pajamas, a red one with a white sweater and skirt, and a dusky pink bow with a black linen frock.

Lucille Fairbanks continues with her original idea of wearing plumes like a laurel wreath, the fluffy ends not quite meeting over her brow. Lucille recently chose light blue plumes with little wisps of the same edging her white chiffon formal gloves. The gown was also in white chiffon.

Being an extreme brunette, Mildred Coles, likes a colorful contrast in vivid hair bows. She came in for her drama lesson last week wearing two Kelly green suede bows fastened on each side of a middle hair part.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Should Divorced Father Attend Hostile Son's Wedding to Please Devoted Young Daughter?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several years ago, I separated from my wife, who, in conspiracy with our eldest son, had abused me and worked against me behind my back. Prior to that, I was in the hospital for several weeks, and neither my wife nor my son came to see me during that time. I could recite enough of their unfriendly actions to fill a book; but I will say, only, that after we were divorced, the court decided that I didn't have to contribute a cent to my wife's support.

After we separated, I had a run of bad luck, financially, and was down-and-out for a while. But now that times are improving, I have another little business that is making a profit, and it is my wife and son who are having tough sledding. However, that isn't the problem.

The situation is this: My son is about to be married and my youngest daughter (his sister), whom I love devotedly, has begged me to come to the wedding. If I go, I should have to see and talk with my wife and son. Since I am not a two-faced man, and since I would have to be pleasant to them if I went to the wedding, I feel that I should stay away.

I have nothing against them. I forgave them long ago, but I cannot forget their ugly attitude. Please advise me at once. Respectfully yours, T. R. B.

Best to Stay Away, All Things Considered

DEAR T. R. B.: In urging you to come to the wedding, no doubt your daughter is inspired by the kindliest motives; but I think you should obey your first impulse, which is, to stay away. Supposing you went, to please her, you would be cast in an embarrassing role, from start to finish, so far as your own performance was concerned—and you might even get high-hatted by your wife and son, to make matters worse.

Since they feel so unkindly toward you, and since you cannot be sincerely civil to them, that makes two good reasons for staying away. Even under the happiest circumstances, the bridegroom's father is likely to be the principal "forgotten man" at a wedding; so if you fail to go, it is fairly certain you won't be missed. But if you do go, and stand around stiffly like a specter at the feast, you will be the butt of much gossipy comment and something of a dead-weight on your loving daughter's hands, besides.

If it were to be her wedding, that would be something else again. In that case, I would advise you to go, chin up, determined to be polite to your wife and son, for her sake, no matter how gruelling and distasteful the effort might be. M. H.

Who Writes First, Man or Girl?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Suppose a girl meets a man (for the first time) on Saturday evening at a private party at a friend's home; then sees him again the next afternoon (in company of others) when he shows her some attention but doesn't ask her for a date before leaving town (which he does that evening). Is it proper for the girl to write him first? Or should she wait until he writes?

Also, in other instances, if a girl has had a few dates with a boy, and he goes out of town (to school, or to work, or for an extended vacation) is it proper for the girl to write first? WILMA.

Polite Social Usage Puts Burden on Man

DEAR WILMA: So far as I know, etiquette authorities haven't promulgated any rules covering your particular question. But polite social usage has developed an "unwritten rule," I think, which puts the burden upon the man to initiate a sentimental correspondence with a woman, if such an exchange seems mutually desirable. No matter how interested the man may seem, nor how eagerly he may insist upon "hearing from you"—it is both good form and sauve technique for you to let him drop the first letter in the mail. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Barbecue Table Decorations

A barbecue supper for 30 was quite a challenge for a fastidious hostess who'd never agree to paper napkins, even outdoors. But she made a gala occasion out of it by buying yards of bright plaid gingham for a tablecloth, setting each place with white plates, tin cups, navy blue napkins made of percale and pinked around the edges, oil lanters, and a garland of real fruit on grape leaves down the center of the table, decoration which provided dessert.

Rah-Rah Motif Rules Student Rooms No More

Modern Collegians Demand Comfortable, Pleasant Surroundings

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

IN OUR day, a couple of pennants an. a tennis racquet were about all the interior decoration a college student indulged in. Occasionally a spread and a laundry bag were thrown in for good luck; but the whole effect was supposed to match up with flopping galoshes and the wind-blown bob.

College life makes more sense these days. Not only do students dress more neatly and realize their responsibilities more seriously, but they live with lots more dignity. The "rah-rah" motif is as "out" as bell-bottom trousers. Instead, students are taking pride in furnishing rooms that are comfortable, workable, pleasant.

Since few colleges supply dormitory rooms with much more than a skeleton list of furnishings, there is plenty of leeway for the student to achieve quite an individual effect without sacrificing anything in the way of practicality.

Schools Stint on Furnishings

Most schools furnish a chest of drawers, a table, bedstead and springs—and that's about all. These are seldom much for looks and so there is an increasing tendency among students to replace them with simple, better-looking, basic pieces. This isn't as extravagant as it sounds, the idea being that this furniture will be a nucleus for that little apartment that will come with the first job after graduation.

Modern sectional furniture is a first choice here with desk, drawer units, shelf units; this is the furniture that makes the best use of space in a small room. Next choice is maple—a chest with separate mirror, a desk or study table, and book cases.

A comfortable chair, a coffee table, good lamps, a studio couch—these complete the basic furnishings of the average college room, all of which may or may not be furnished by the student.

Police Asked To Help Fill Defense Jobs

Civil Service Chiefs Here; Seek to Speed 'Recruiting' of Workers

By Edward Ryan

The "Cop on the Beat" in scores of cities is being called upon to help the Civil Service Commission get civilian workers for the War and Navy plants, officials said yesterday.

This and other new plans for recruiting were discussed yesterday by managers of the 13 Civil Service districts who were called to Washington for a three-day conference on faster methods of getting 100,000 skilled workers for the Navy and 50,000 for the Army.

The district managers met with officials of the commission and representatives of defense agencies. They will continue their talks in a 12-hour session today, and a shorter meeting tomorrow afternoon.

Police help for the recruiting drive already has been furnished in some cities, officials said, and will be sought in others, including Washington.

Aids to Recruiting

Other recruiting aids, developed during the World War, are being used again by the commission and its branch offices, including special advertisements, posters and public lectures about the needs for defense workers. To these have been added radio campaigns to tell about defense jobs, and the "cop on the beat" idea, to take the word of defense labor needs from door to door.

Main ideas in calling in the police to help were, first, that the recruiting drive had to move faster, and, second, that the average policeman is likely to know personally any number of individuals who might fit into a job at a navy yard or an army arsenal.

Claude R. Wickard, new Secretary of Agriculture, and Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary, yesterday started work on their new assignments with this lineup of inner office aides:

James L. McCamy will continue as assistant to the Secretary and liaison officer between the Agriculture Department and the defense agencies. His assistant for the defense work will be Don Parel, formerly in the office of Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa.

Carl Hamilton, who has been assistant to Wickard in the Undersecretary's office, will move up in the same role to the Secretary's office.

Parisius Gets Job

Herbert Parisius, Wisconsin State director for the Farm Security Administration, will be detailed to Wickard's office as an assistant.

Leon O. Wolcott will continue as an assistant to the Secretary, although he is understood to be in line for an appointment either to the Defense Commission or to an executive job in the department.

James D. LeCron, former assistant to the Secretary, has left to campaign with Wallace. Ralph Olmstead has been transferred from the Agriculture personnel office to be assistant to Undersecretary Appleby.

Nearly 450 employes of the Civil Service Commission are spending this week on a payless furlough, it was learned yesterday.

The employes are assigned to set up the new central punch card index of more than 750,000 Government employes; their vacation was attributed to the failure of Federal workers throughout the Government to turn in their experience record sheets which furnish the information for the punch card file.

350,000 Now "Coded"

So far about 350,000 employe records have been coded and are ready to be translated into punch cards. More than half of the employes, most of them in field offices, have not returned information about their education, training, and working experience, officials said.

About 40,000 returns are expected to come in this week, enough to keep the furloughed workers busy next week. Meanwhile, managers of the project are continuing their month-old drive to have the Government agencies speed their employe information sheets to the Civil Service Commission.

N. Y. Publicity Man Named Secretary Of D. C. Cathedral

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, yesterday announced appointment of Alfred Gordon Stoughton, of New York City, as executive secretary of the Washington Cathedral and editor of the Cathedral Age. He will succeed Edwin N. Lewis, resigned.

Pennsylvania - born, Stoughton was for 12 years alumni secretary of Bucknell University, Lewisburg, Pa., following his graduation there, and since 1936 has been engaged in public relations work in New York City. Among his accounts have been the Y. M. C. A. of New York; the National Baseball Centennial Commission, the Publishers Weekly and others.

As Cathedral executive secretary, he will direct activities of the National Cathedral Association, a Nation-wide organization of supporters of work of the Washington Cathedral; supervise promotional programs, and edit the Cathedral Age, an international magazine dealing with world cathedrals.

Norse Seamen Warned of Nazi Plot on Shipping

The Norwegian Legation yesterday issued a warning to captains of Norwegian ships which escaped German seizure that the Nazis are making a new attempt to take them over through false orders.

Orders directing the vessels to neutral harbors are being issued by the shipowners under pressure of the Nazis, according to the legation, and recorded on phonograph records probably to be broadcast.

The legation pointed out that the Norwegian merchant marine has been requisitioned by royal decree and must take orders only from the countryless "free and independent" Norwegian government, or its agents in London, Montreal and New York.

Getting Ahead

I used to sit home and on mouse-traps toil,
Expecting to gain a life of ease,
But I got nowhere at all till I put on my glad rags,
And went out to make "contacts" at cocktails and teas.

But now that I'm further along the road,
And I find that practice a market glut,
I've discovered (if honor's no handicap)
That judicious gold-digging is the best short-cut.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Roswell Clymer, husband of one of Truthtown's leading socialites among the newcomers, has just filed proceedings in bankruptcy. Mrs. Clymer, who with her two daughters has just returned from Barbecue Beach, has been outfitting Miss Jacqueline (Jinks) Clymer for Hi-de-Ho College and Miss Geraldine (Ducky-Wucky) Clymer for Miss Snoot's finishing school.

Mrs. Montmarte Sinbad-Smythe, who fled Paris when that city capitulated to the Nazis, says that she greatly misses the cosmopolitan atmosphere of the Continent, and is thinking of going either to New York or New Orleans for the winter. Mrs. Lucius Gilderlyly, with whom Mrs. Sinbad-Smythe has been staying, is thinking of starting a movement to help prominent war refugees adjust themselves to American life.

In the Crystal Ball

Truthtown society is agog over the revelations made by a fortune teller at the recent garden party given by the Wynkoop Bigwiggers.

Prophecy of a "sudden change" in her affairs has greatly excited Mrs. Casimer Chives, former wife of Philander Plunkette, Stuveysant Spatt, Aubrey Doolittle and Harrington Husk.

Mrs. Thornberry Flitt, who will leave soon on a South American cruise, is delightfully agitated over the seeress' warning of the "dishonorable advances" of a tall, dark man she would soon meet.

Mrs. Caeser DeBilk, who is reported to be leaving for Reno next week, has been telling friends that the fortune teller saw a large sum of money coming to her in the near future.

Mrs. Badminton Bellwether, Truthtown's ranking dowager and commander of the Ladies Parachute Patrol, is greatly upset according to her friends, by a prediction that her name would figure soon in the newspaper headlines.

Narcissus Nottbright, glamour deb, and her mother, Mrs. Eustace Nottbright, are said to be greatly alarmed over the soothsayer's "vision" of Miss Nottbright in a bathing suit pose on a magazine cover.

Mrs. Mike McPace and Mrs. Whiffington Whiffle, whose husbands are away on a fishing trip, are said to be genuinely perturbed over the prophecy that a military man would come into the life of each soon. Mrs. McPace and Mrs. Whiffle will leave soon on a motor tour to inspect the Nation's defenses.

A Lovely Luncheon

Leading canine socialites were guests yesterday at the birthday luncheon given by Mrs. Artemus Bingle in honor of her pet Pekingese Mitzi. The luncheon was spread on the Bingle lawn on sheets of scalloped pink and green waxed paper and was served in fiesta wear which was decorated with likenesses of cats and squirrels.

The menu included triple ground hamburger fried in butter, a cottage cheese salad, vitamin D milk, rum bisque ice cream and demitasse. The flowers, which the canine guests enjoyed sniffing and nibbling, carried out the green and pink motif. Favors were catnip mice.

Usual after-party comment was occasioned by the fact that Rudolph, Mrs. Gilbert Plush's dachshund, was not among the guests.

More Honors

Carrington Stepp, noted polo player, chairman of the Silver Lake Regatta, collector of mustache cups and former husband of Cophronia Luker, the Countess Spermacelli, Tootsie Larkin, night club singer, and Suzanne Plush, noodle heiress, has just been elected president of the Emerald Acres Country Club.

Supple Figure More Attractive And Healthier Than Padded One

Venus Would Have Profited in Looks By Daily Dozen

By Ida Jean Kain

Lithe Jane Wyman, screen lovely, knows there's no easy road to figure perfection. Her daily dozen to keep trim consists of a dance routine

VENUS would have had a trimmer figure for a daily dozen—not that there was anything wrong with the divinity's proportions! But she looked soft, even in stone.

It takes a bit of exercise to give a gal that well-knit, supple look. The active figure is not only more attractive, but healthier—even the medical profession unbends to say so. Unless you get enough exercise, the circulation slows up, the muscles go soft and the figure is marred by hollows or fat pads.

Unfortunately, the popular notion that exercise will reduce in spots is not exactly true. For instance, when you swing your legs to slim your hips, there is no guarantee that the extra calories used will come right off the hips! It doesn't work quite that directly. Nor does it operate like a sculptor's chisel to shift weight from one portion of the figure to a more desirable site.

Exercise Will Tell

Nevertheless, exercise appears to do just that. If your chest and shoulders are scrawny, the contours can be improved by developing the muscle tissue. And if the waist is too well padded, you can wring off some of the surplus. And rolling the hips smack against the floor will definitely smooth the contours. But all this magic reapportioning is achieved through stimulus to muscle tone, and the consequent tightening or developing of the musculature. This also makes for a better functioning and healthier body.

The thin girl on a gaining program should exercise to develop her figure. The fat girl on a low calorie diet should exercise to tone down her curves.

Moderate exercise is a health as well as beauty measure and is only contraindicated in cases of high blood pressure and where excessive weight has placed a strain on the heart.

Diet May Be Advisable

It is sometimes advisable for part of the weight to be dieted off before exercise is undertaken. With any such complication, the entire program should be under the supervision of a doctor.

Where the figure is concerned, specific exercise is far more effective than general. Specifically, the exercises which help to fill out the chest and straighten the shoulders are those which use the arms.

The movements which slim the waist are stretching, twisting and bending. Those which flatten the tummy contract or retract the abdominal wall. And to slim the hips, rolling, leg swinging and walking up-grade are prescribed.

The next article tells you how to get the most out of your exercise.

Count Calories To Reduce

LAUGHTER at Miss Plump's expense! Cruel, but people will make jokes about excess poundage. And that's only one of the penalties you suffer for being fat and suffer unnecessarily.

For on a low-calory diet you can lose as much as two pounds a week, say good-bye to embarrassing jokes, to wearing matron sizes, to looking older than you are.

A good start for your low-calory regime is the three-day liquid diet, made up chiefly of fruit juices. By taking liquids every few hours and resting often you cleanse your system, have a healthy appetite when you go on a three-meals-a-day schedule again.

And how the fat melts away when those meals add up to only 1,200 calories. Yet you can have all the protective foods—eggs, butter, milk, fruit and vegetables—and such tempting dinners as this one: Sardine canape, 2 stalks celery, lean roast beef, ½ browned potato, cup string beans, ½ cup squash, 1 teaspoon butter and ½ cup fruit ice cream—only 642 calories.

With a calory chart to guide you, simple to steer away from high-calory fat-makers, keep to low-calory slenderizing foods. You choose a serving of apple and carrot salad (100 calories) instead of banana nut salad (300), ½ cup lemon milk sherbet (200), a cup of popcorn (66) instead of shelled peanuts (663).

A joy to watch your weight go down, to see your real figure emerge—slim and lovely. Our 40-page booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," has 42 low-calory menus, all based on protective foods. Gives complete three-day liquid diet, a calory chart, recipes for delicious low-calory desserts. Also has menus for gaining.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Change Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Jelly Crystals

Crystals sometimes form on grape jelly after it has stood a while. They are harmless cream of tartar crystals, but they do mar the appearance. To help prevent this, let the juice stand over night in a jar. Carefully dip the juice out in the morning—the crystals will remain on the sides and bottom of the jar.

Beauty Secrets

New Fall Make-up Colors

FASHION points to an American Indian trend for autumn. The fall color card shows tones which might have been lifted from a squaw's beaded, woven or leather handiwork. There are earthy browns, vivid and muted blues, purple, orange, tawny shades and Indian reds.

In harmony with this bright array of colors are a new assortment of cosmetics and nail polishes. These complement the Indian styles forecast for the coming season.

Among the new shades of nail polish offered by one firm are:

ARROW RED—a tawny, golden-tinged red to accent gray, beige, soft blues, color-flecked tweeds, fruity reds and copper tones.

CHIEFTAIN—a vivid, triumphant red to dramatize bark brown and cocoa shades, orange, black, night-flight blues and autumn greens.

One cosmetic manufacturer who specializes in climatized rouge and lipstick has borrowed Indian names, as well as colors, for his new fall offerings. This climatized rouge and lipstick, especially designed to ward off the ill effects of cold, wind and sun, gives a sparkling accent to black and many vivid tones. The newest shades in this line include the following:

NAVAJO—a true, vivid red highlights beige, black, pine-greens, dark blue and night-flight blue.

POW-WOW—a very deep red that accentuates the new purples, black, deep blue and bark browns.

INDIAN SAGE—a rich, burnished tone that spices the smart rose and plum shades, purple and benedictine brown.

INDIAN PAINTBRUSH—a light flame red. It complements the new coppery and Indian pottery tones and bark browns.

Frozen Peach Pie Appealing Dessert

While peaches are plentiful, it is time to make them into many a delightful dessert. Mrs. Pauline T. Crow, 1910 T street southeast, is always one to have a suggestion for making appealing food. The following is her recipe for Frozen Peach Nut Pie.

Frozen Peach Nut Pie

Cut 10 marshmallows in quarters and add ¼ cup orange juice. Allow to stand while baking pie shell. A crumb crust is particularly good with this recipe. When shell is cool, fill with 2 cups sliced peaches which have been mixed with 1-3 cup powered sugar. Whip ½ pint cream stiff and then fold in the marshmallow-orange mixture, ¼ cup candied cherries and ½ cup nuts. Pour over peaches and chill several hours before serving.

Hobble-Skirt Gets Style Show Cheers In New York

New York (AP).—A 1940 model split hobble skirt with a black lace petticoat peeping through won the applause at the start of a spectacular series of style shows along upper Fifth avenue.

The spotlight is on the series because America at this moment is the style center of the world, with its great dressmaking establishments for the first time turning out originals without the leadership of Paris, whose couture is in virtual eclipse because of the war.

The hobble skirt—called the "sultan silhouette"—was a highlight of Jay Thorpe's original collection, produced by its American design staff under the supervision of Charles Oppenheim, jr.

The skirt appeared on dinner dresses whose draped front fullness narrowed and split at the hem.

Roast Chicken Tang

Try this new flavor fling to baked or roasted chicken: When the fowl is half done, very lightly sprinkle it with powdered nutmeg—go light, remember—then baste twice. You can also add just a suggestion of basil, if you like. Subtle seasonings make a hit.

Breaking the Big News

By Nina Parnell

SO YOU are in a dither about how to announce your engagement—especially since you have always been such a stickler for correctness. But sometimes in your eagerness to be socially precise you do get a little stiff or mixed up.

For example, all your worry about the extra expense of sending out engraved announcements is needless. Engraved engagement announcements are incorrect. Even if they were socially correct, to send them would be the same as adding frosting to a properly iced cake.

The announcement should be made by your parents. It may be done intimately by note, verbally to friends individually or collectively, or through the newspapers. On the evening before the day of the announcement, your mother should either telephone the daily papers or send in a written announcement with your photograph (if you want to use one). Some newspapers require a signed statement of announcements as a protection against false reports that could result in libel suits.

Before you announce your engagement, tell all your close friends and relatives. Even if they suspect the news, they will appreciate your telling them.

Should you decide to make the announcement at a party, either you or your mother tell the guests as they arrive (with your fiancee at your side). And if you decide on a dinner announcement, get your father to do the honors during the salad or dessert course. He can do this by proposing a toast to you and his future son-in-law.

Lucite Lamp Bases

The new lucite lamp bases are really sensationally handsome, for the light flows through and outlines the edges delicately. Another charming new type of lamp base is that of hand-carved or hand-whittled wood in natural light grain. An important tidbit of lamp news is the increasing use of the lower floor lamp, available this year in many new and more attractive finishes, some modern, others Regency.

G. O. P. Women Told America Is in Peril

Invasion Is Not Imminent but Groundwork Is Being Laid by Fifth Column And Propaganda, Lecturer Declares

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Lydia Van Hagen Van Zandt, noted lecturer, was guest speaker yesterday afternoon when the series of summer open house teas was resumed by the League of Republican Women, under the chairmanship of Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers, of the summer activities committee. The affair was at the clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street northwest.

Discussing "Hitler's Blitzkriegs," Mrs. Van Zandt declared that "the time has come when Americans must act. There may be a difference of opinion as to the methods, but they can no longer be indifferent as to the outcome in Europe."

Blitzkriegs are long in the making although lightning in execution, she said, and propaganda and fifth columns pave the way for them. In the United States, she believes there is no immediate danger of a military invasion, although the pre-blitzkrieg preparation of fifth column and propaganda has already been begun.

Pointing out the dangers of these, she quoted Hitler's non-aggression promises" which have been broken from Czecho-Slovakia to France."

Taking issue with Col. Lindbergh's statement in a recent radio speech that "in the past we have dealt with a Europe dominated by England and France—in the future we may have to deal with a Europe dominated by Germany" she asserted it was imperative to remember that in the past we have dealt with 26 different nations. Each has had its own economy, customs and trade regulations.

"Can Col. Lindbergh or anyone contemplate without apprehension dealing with a Europe dominated by Germany under one huge economic bloc, probably under a single customs union?" she asked.

The tea yesterday was preceded by cards. Playing began at 2 and several members entertained guests. The largest party was that of Mrs. Edward A. Keyes, who had as guests of honor Mrs. Van Zandt.

Among her other guests were Mrs. Russell B. Harrison, Mrs. Gilbert H. Grovesnor, Mrs. Frank Crowder, Mrs. Eugene E. Stevens, Miss Julia Young, Mrs. Ulysses S. Geyer, Mrs. Joseph A. Herbert, jr., Mrs. Jesse B. Savage, Mrs. Glenn A. Smith, Mrs. Phillip A. Walker, Mrs. Golden W. Ruggles, Mrs. Elliott Hague, Mrs. John Hyde, Mrs. Carl Trayham, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Everett Wilson, jr.

Others who entertained were Mrs. Warren Hanes, Mrs. Francis Pope and Mrs. Elizabeth Northrop.

Mrs. William E. Borah and Mrs. James A. Watson presided at the tea table.

The series of summer meetings at the league's headquarters was held during July and part of August, but was discontinued during the period of extreme heat. Mrs. Albers, who spent a vacation in Florida, returned only last week. She is being assisted in arrangements for the teas by Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, first vice president of the club; Miss Grace Burton and Mrs. Louis Weller.

U. D. C. Heads Talk Plans For Convention

Plans for the convention of the Confederate Veterans here October 8 to 11, were discussed last night at a joint meeting of the officers of the ten local chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy held at the Confederate Memorial Association Building, 1322 Vermont avenue.

The president general, Mrs. Charles E. Bolling, of Richmond, will be present as guest of honor at the convention, as will the historian general, Mrs. William C. Flournoy, of Lexington, Va.

Mrs. Livingston Vann, president of the District division, U. D. C., presided at the meeting last night which followed the first fall meeting of the Robert E. Lee Chapter. The chapter presidents include Mrs. Oscar McWhorter, of the Robert E. Lee; Mrs. John Milligan, of Williams; Miss Laura Ruff, of Dixie; Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Herbert; Mrs. Mason Smith, Jeff Davis; Miss Carolyn Rogers, Stonewall Jackson; Miss Oba Gibson, Ewell; Mrs. Martha Carter, Southern Cross; Mrs. Walter Phares, J. E. B. Stuart, and Miss Agnes Rouche, Confederate Flag.

MEMBERS of the committee planning the first of a series of campaign meetings to be sponsored weekly until election at the Woman's National Democratic Club, are just recovering from "program jitters."

Mrs. Robert Kirkpatrick Noble, the chairman, had arrangements all completed to present as the "star" of the first meeting Mrs. J. Borden Harriman—Mrs. Harriman has not only just returned from her post as American Minister to Norway, but also has the distinction of being Democratic national committeewoman for the District—Then came a letter from Mrs. Harriman saying she was afraid she could not be here on September 10. But before Mrs. Noble had time to decide what to do under the circumstances, Mrs. Borden telephoned from New York that she could make it after all.

The committee is now going ahead with preparations and has announced on the program, in addition to Mrs. Harriman, Russell Balderson, chairman of the D. C. Democratic central committee, and Malcolm McConihe, national committeeman.

RECEPTION TODAY—The Washington Alumnae of Pi Beta Phi this afternoon are entertaining with a reception at the home of Mrs. Ralph Hudson, on Daniel road, for the girls who are leaving soon to enter college. About 200 will attend.

Mrs. Samuel Spruce, newly elected province president, will head the receiving line. There will be an exhibition of the craft work done by the Tennessee mountain children in the Pi Phi settlement school in Gatlinsburg.

BRITISH BENEFIT TODAY—This afternoon from 4 to 7, the garden fete sponsored by the District Federation of Women's Clubs will be given at the British Embassy for the benefit of British war relief.

It is open not only to members of the federation and their guests, but also to the public. Among those who will attend will be a buildings on the place will likewise be white. Remodeling is also being done inside Governor's House, say the Rev. and Mrs. Howard, and during the process the duke and duchess are guests at the Seacrist estate. Mr. Sea- group of members of the Women's Welsh Club. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, director to the General Federation, heads the list of past presidents assisting in arrangements.

OPEN SEASON—The Ward-Belmont Club of Washington will meet at the home of Mrs. Cecil B. Dickson, 6 Worthington drive, Westmoreland Hills, Md., at 3 p. m. Tuesday. The new board members will serve tea.

Rule Change In ABC Code Favored

150 Attend Hearing On Proposed D. C. 22-Point Liquor Program for D. C.

Leslie Garnett, former United States Attorney for the District, yesterday accused Milton S. Kronheim of keeping the local liquor industry "under his thumb" at a turbulent public hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board on 22 proposed changes in the liquor code.

Representing Clark's, Inc., a downtown liquor retailer, Garnett hurled charge after charge at Kronheim, a local wholesaler, and stated the wholesaler had inspired the proposed regulations to ban the use of prices in liquor ads as well as to empower the Commissioners with price-fixing regulations.

Climax of yesterday's six-hour session, which brought more than 150 persons to the A. B. C. B. rooms in the District Building, was the accusation by Henry J. Halam, of Miglioretti Brothers, a wholesaler, that three retailers threatened a boycott of his firm after he had spoken in opposition to the two regulations regarding prices in ads and price fixing.

Warns Against "Czar"

Interrupting the testimony of a witness, Halam jumped to his feet and said he demanded the attention of the board.

"I feel I must tell you now of the kind of thing to expect when we have a czar in our industry," he said. He referred to Kronheim, who organized the Beverage Industry Committee, which yesterday indorsed the entire 22-point program, with the backing of 366 holders of class "A" liquor licenses, which permit the sale of package liquor.

Halam pointed to three men in the room, who, he said, had told him "you'll be sorry for what you said today."

Although Halam did not mention any names, one man, Morris Stearman, operator of a liquor store at 1400 Irving street northwest, immediately took the stand and denied he had made any statement to Halam. Stearman pointed to Manuel Lipsky, president of Clark's, and said he was the one that inspired Halam to make the accusation.

Lipsky, indignant, denied he had inspired Halam's remarks and said "this type of thing has prevented many wholesalers from appearing here today in fear they would be boycotted by the retailer."

Only Kronheim There

Of 21 wholesalers listed among those licensed by the board, only Kronheim appeared, with a counsel and public relations man, to indorse the program.

F. Joseph Donohue, counsel for Kronheim, demanded that Garnett introduce evidence that his client had written the proposed regulations.

Max Kossow, holder of a class "A" license at 1232 Fifth street northeast, spoke in favor of prices in liquor advertisements, stating this type of ad was "clean and dignified" when compared with "blazing" handbills.

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District of Columbia Congress of Parents and Teachers, wrote to the board stating her complete approval of the 22-point program, as suggested by the liquor industry and the Eberharter Liquor Investigating Committee in Congress.

Called 'Fine Beginning'

Daniel B. Lloyd, president of the Manor Park Citizens Association, also wrote in approving the proposed regulations. He said the regulations "although conservative" are a "very fine beginning."

Demands that package stores be obliged to close at 8 p. m., instead of 10 p. m., as proposed in the new regulations, were voiced by H. E. Spitzberger, president of the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

Spitzberger also recommended the liquor board not issue licenses to grocery stores.

A lengthy statement was introduced in the morning procedure by Harry S. Wender, first vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations. Wender said the federation was in favor of most of the 22 changes, but he was personally opposed to the regulation to ban the use of prices in advertisements.

Rufus S. Lusk, speaking as an individual, told of his fight for repeal and that he "hoped the industry" would curtail present abuses, "or we will have prohibition again." He spoke in favor of the proposal to permit drinking while standing at the bar.

No Opposition

Not a single person appeared in opposition to this proposal.

Dr. James M. Doran, former Federal prohibition commissioner, appeared on behalf of the newly formed Beverage Counsel, in opposition of Kronheim's Beverage Industry Committee.

When the board chairman called upon Garnett to speak the former district attorney said he would like to hear first what Kronheim and his "cohorts" had to say since "they are the ones who originated the controversial proposals."

"I don't want to fight the air," he declared. "I want to know the reasons for the proposals and since Mr. Kronheim is presenting the regulations I would like to know why he wants them," he added.

Lodge told Garnett that the proposals had been discussed by the Eberharter subcommittee and that the statement Kronheim had proposed them "is without basis."

Following the completion of yesterday's hearings, Lodge announced he would wait two weeks for the filing of briefs by interested parties and would take another week to work on the final draft of the proposals before submitting them to the Commissioners.

Relief in Washington

Bigger Staff Would Help Ease Distress

This is the fifth in a series of articles on relief needs in Washington.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Hand in hand with actual relief needs in the District goes the need for additional personnel for administration of relief, according to Robert E. Bondy, director of Public Welfare.

At present the average case load per social worker is 177. If "cases" could be kept in the files and handled like factory orders, the number might not be a capacity load. But relief "cases" live in houses, many of them in miserable homes without heat or electricity, with no toilet facilities or running water. There are aged persons, ill persons and little children. They are cold, hungry, harassed by poverty and anxiety.

The case worker interviews some of them in her office in the morning. She makes telephone calls, trying to adjust complications that have arisen with landlords, to locate possible jobs, check up on information that must be verified; arrange appointments at clinics—as part of her job of trying to relieve distress for persons whose privation may have killed their initiative.

Acts as Adviser

In the afternoon, she makes visits "in the field." There she sees conditions as they are. She learns whether things have improved for a family so relief may be discontinued or whether they have gotten worse and more aid is needed. She listens patiently to relief clients' stories as a friend and adviser. She explains why more relief cannot be granted, makes suggestions as to where work might be found, where to go for medical aid, where to apply for clothing when the children enter school, how to plan more carefully the spending of the meager allowance now being received.

For the period of her conference, the social worker enters into the family problem in an effort to try to help solve it, and when she leaves she takes the burden of it with her. At the best she cannot average more than four families a day in her calls. Then the records must be written and kept up to date.

At this rate she could only make the rounds once a month, working six days a week, with a case load of 100 families. With 170, if she maks a visit every other month she is doing well, for there are many special visits that must be made and calls from clients at her office that take time.

34 Added to Staff

Under a provision of $49,000 for additional personnel to certify persons eligible for work relief and surplus commodities, 34 were added to the staff this year. This has lightened the burden somewhat, freeing some workers for field service who had been required to spend their time in the office previously. Further reorganization is expected to reduce the case load to 150.

In the appropriation of $1,210,000 requested for 1942, 37,200 of the $310,000 increase over the 1941 appropriation would be for personnel. It would provide 30 new positions, 15 in the social work field, 7 for clerical and custodial service and 8 for the food-stamp plan.

This addition to the staff would make it possible to cut the number of cases per worker so as to increase the efficiency status of relief clients at regular intervals, taking off the rolls promptly those who had become self-sustaining within the month.

It would afford her time to help clients find employment, better living quarters at no additional cost, advise a better diet for the family, and so forth.

Efficiency Hampered

Efficiency is hampered by an inadequate staff.

During the past year many adjustments have been made in the Department of Public Welfare, Bondy says, to assure maximum efficiency in the staff workers' division of time. Only narrative records of the cases are made, as these are considered to give a more accurate picture of each family's situation.

As a result of the addition of 34 to the staff this year, it has been possible to set up a central application bureau at 476 C street northwest, which is a clearing house for all applications. Interviewers are there to see applicants for all types of assistance, whereas they formerly went to different offices for aid of different classifications.

Before this change was made, applicants for relief were served in a dark and crowded basement room, cold in winter and oppressive in summer. Some of the interviews were not given until six weeks after application for relief was made. Handling of applications has now been made current and procedure has been simplified.

New Receiving Home Favored By J. R. Young

Commissioner Backs Devoting Training School to Colored

A new Receiving Home for Children will be recommended again by the District Commissioners at the budget hearings on appropriations for the Board of Public Welfare, Commissioner J. Russell Young said yesterday.

Commissioner Young also favored devoting the present National Training School for Girls, where 88 per cent of those committed are colored, entirely to colored girls, putting it under a colored staff and providing sufficient funds to give them training in cooking, sewing and other work for which there is equipment. A separate institution should be maintained for the white girls, he believes.

He considers as feasible a suggestion that a large tract on the outskirts of the city be purchased for the location of all of the public institutions of the District—the National Training School for Girls, training schools for boys, both colored and white, and the Home for the Aged.

This would effect a saving in costs of operation, he says, with central lightning and heating, and a central warehouse for supplies. Each institution would be separate and the accommodations for the aged probably of a cottage type. He believes it would be economy to build new quarters for the aged rather than to spend money for repairs on the present unsuitable buildings at Blue Plains.

The property on Conduit road, where the National Training School for Girls now stands, is valuable and probably would bring the District about $90,000 if it were sold, he says. It would also come back on the tax rolls. The sale of the other properties would bring additional revenue.

British Envoy Visits Children

shire, that the children have all been eating well and sleeping well—all, that is, except one.

Jeremy Lord, aged 2, has been waking up in the middle of the night and crying out in terror. The nightmares, in the opinion of the school owners, are a reaction from six weeks of bombing raids on the industrial town in which Jeremy lived, six weeks in which he was frequently snatched from his bed and carried to an air raid shelter.

Thunder Like Guns

During luncheon one day last week, a thunderstorm broke over the Warrenton area.

"Is that the guns?" several of the children asked. When their school was located in Sussex, not far from the Channel, they often heard the guns booming over on the French coast.

Besides Lord Lothian, there were three other visitors yesterday to Clovercroft—where the children are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer—Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Dr. William H. Stauffer, commissioner of public welfare of Virginia, and W. L. Painter, director of the children's bureau of the Virginia department of public welfare.

All three agreed that the arrangement at Clovercroft appeared to be ideal, particularly so because the children were banded together as they have been in the past and were under the care of the same adults they knew in England.

The adults, by the way, have not yet quite adjusted themselves to the serenity of old Virginia. They were driving through Warrenton the other day when the blast of a whistle rent the air.

"We jumped," Miss Ravenscroft said, "and I had a horrible feeling in my stomach. We soon found out that it was only a factory whistle, blowing for the lunch hour."

Capital News in Brief:

Red Cross 'Aquafete' Concludes Tonight

The final performance of the Red Cross "Aquafete" will be presented at Takoma Pool, Fifth and Van Buren streets northwest, at 8:30 tonight.

Designed to dramatize the water preparedness program of the District Red Cross chapter and the Welfare and Recreation Association, cosponsors of the event, the "Aquafete" attracted a large audience last night.

A committee of the Junior Board of Commerce members under the leadership of Geoffrey Creyke, jr., worked with Robert H. Duncan and Elmer Hipsley to produce the revue.

Worker Hurt in 40-Foot Fall From D. C. Bridge

Albert H. Cobb, 26, of Fairfax, Va., a carpenter at the new Massachusetts avenue bridge, was injured seriously yesterday when he fell 40 feet from a construction platform. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for a possible fractured spine and internal injuries.

Employed by the Potts & Callahan Construction Co., Cobb was working on forms into which concrete is poured when he apparently lost his balance and plunged to the ground in Rock Creek Park.

Smith Is Sworn In As Assistant Prosecutor

John Lewis Smith, jr., 28, yesterday was sworn in as an assistant district attorney. The oath was administered in the office of District Attorney Edward M. Curran by Harry M. Hull, assistant clerk of the District Court.

Over 40s to Meet

Americans Over Forty will consider the questions of policy involved in the Government's defense program tonight at its regular meeting in the Epiphany Church parish house, 1317 G street northwest. The meeting is open to the public and will start at 8 p. m.

Pastor Resigns D. C. Pulpit For N. Y. Post

Rev. S. H. Kornmann To Become Lutheran Mission Director

The Rev. Sam H. Kornmann, pastor and founder of St. Stephen's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Woodridge, has resigned to accept an appointment as director of Lutheran inner mission work in Brooklyn, N. Y., effective September 15.

Rev. Kornmann

The clergyman, former president of the Washington Lutheran Inner Mission Society and active worker in other citywide Lutheran activities, launched St. Stephen's mission on Brentwood road in 1924 with a nucleus of nine members.

During his pastorate the membership has increased to 250, a new church edifice was erected in 1927, and other progress made. He was for four years student pastor at the University of Maryland, and is chaplain of Dawson Lodge of Masons.

A Williamsport (Pa.) native, he was educated at Susquenhanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa., later serving in the United States Army during the World War, after which he did "Y" work in New York City. He served as pastor of a Lutheran Church in Bloomfield, N. J., from 1922 to 1924.

"While Dr. Kornmann's leaving is regretted by all the members of his church," commented Elmer T. Irey, one of the congregation's leaders, yesterday, "yet we are pleased that he is being advanced in his profession and is going into a line of work where the scope of his usefulness will be greatly increased."

Group Urges Door-to-Door Mail Delivery

The Washington Highland Citizens Association voted last night to request Postmaster Vincent Burke that door-to-door mail service be effected throughout the section.

The group claimed a similar request made some months ago had brought the reply from Postmaster Burke that sidewalks in the area were not properly situated to warrant the service. The group decided to make a second appeal.

Action of the Commissioners in joining First street southeast from Halley place to Upsel street also was requested in a resolution. The Commissioners will be asked to complete the street so as to prevent heavy accumulation of water on the street during rains. A committee of five was selected to draw up the request.

The group, which met at the home of W. Earl Nair, secretary, at 3919 First street southeast, expressed regret over the recent defeat of Senator William H. King.

The resolution cited King as a "great friend of the District."

McCarran Asks Senate CAB Probe

Resolution Comes On Eve of Inquiry By Agency Into Airliner Crash

On the eve of an investigation by the Civil Aeronautics Board today into the crash of a Pennsylvania-Central airliner August 31 with the loss of 25 lives, a resolution introduced yesterday in the Senate proposed investigation of the board itself.

Introduced by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who bitterly opposed transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Commerce Department under executive order, the resolution demanded a "full and complete investigation" of the crash. The investigation which would be made by the Senate Commerce Committee with $20,000 of Senate funds, would cover also other accidents and the "efficiency" of the CAB.

Today's investigation of the crash by the board, set for 10 a. m. in the departmental auditorium at Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue, will involve testimony by 62 witnesses. Of these, 31 are laymen, all of Lovettsville, Va., near where the crash occurred; 14 are officials of the airline and 17 are experts who visited the scene and examined the badly shattered wreckage.

Among the latter witnesses are experts on radio, lightning, aircraft engines, weather and propellers. Calling a propeller expert, CAB spokesmen said, was "routine" in an effort to determine if propeller failure might have contributed to the accident and to learn, if possible, from internal evidence if the engines were delivering full power.

In offering his resolution to the Senate, McCarran declared that commercial airlines had flown 400,000,000 passenger miles without a fatality under the Civil Aeronautics Act when "for some reason no one explained to Congress an Executive order transformed the CAA internally."

Nothing, pointed out Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, suggests any casual connection between the Executive order reorganizing the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Lovettsville accident. Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, Senate majority leader, said he would support McCarran's resolution if any suspicion arose that the investigating board was neglecting its duty.

One Redeeming Feature Of Missing a Premiere

By Richard L. Coe,

Substituting for Nelson B. Bell

I NEVER DID LIKE to get up at 8:30 anyway.

Only two days ago this reporter was bemoaning earlier commitments (commonly known as deadlines) which kept him away from Richmond and the premiere of "The Howards of Virginia." While even now Columbia's special train is disgorging columnists, commentators et al. along the Eastern seaboard, this reviewer is fresh as a gin daisy from a proper morning's sleep and blandly looking forward to seeing the highly touted film in comfort when it hits the Earle screen a week from today.

Not that the previewers didn't see "The Howards of Virginia" in comfort (matter of fact the comedown to the grim realities of everyday living must be something horrible) but their view of it came after 12 hours of unrestrained greeting, sightseeing and proper celebration. They were up bright and early with Mayor Ambler of Richmond to greet Star Martha Scott and Director Frank Floyd at 8:30 a. m. and what with yacht trips, a stop at the grave of Col. William Byrd (founder of the city of Richmond), an official call on Gov. Price and a public reception at Byrd Park, where Miss Scott presented a swan to the city, their day must have had the contingent wondering what a bed looked like. Remember what Shakespeare said about "Sleep, that knits up the ravelled sleave of care . . . Chief nourisher in life's feast"?

Right off the front pages is the new "March of Time." Usually the M. of T. boys anticipate something that will be news in some months, as in the releases on the Maginot Line, the Mediterranean Defenses and the Dutch East Indies. But their new item opening at Keith's today couldn't be hotter. "Gateways to Panama" is its title and the 20-minute feature seeks to show steps being taken to strengthen Canal defenses against attack and sabotage. Jamaica, Martinique, Trinidad, Curacao and Guantanamo Bay all play as important a part in the film as they do in today's international discussions. It's a safe bet that if you can't find your Congressman in his office (or don't you have one?) he'll be checking up on what the M. of T. people have discovered.

Speaking of premieres, as we were in involved ratio in our first three paragraphs, one of these zany things that happen only in Hollywood took place this week There was a "Battle of Premieres" between two rival companies. Universal had reserved September 3 for the first showing of its new Rosalind Russell comedy, "Hired Wife." Warner's had already set September 4 for the premiere of "No Time for Comedy," also with Miss Russell. Then Warner's switched to the previous evening, claiming there had been a mix-up in dates. Each company insinuated that the other was afraid of unfavorable comparisons.

So what happens? Both the openings went off as scheduled, rival spotlights from the nearby theaters lighting the paths of rejoicing autograph hounds. Net result of this epic struggle was the same amount of space in the trade papers, a similar degree of praise for both light, sophisticated comedies. With the wisdom of a woman, Miss Russell was vacationing in Connecticut!

Beginning today there will be some new faces in the Capitol orchestra pit: Trumpeter Sparty Donato, who co-composed (nice word!) "Democracy's Awake" with Gene Ford for last week's finale, has had much theater and band experience. Carl Gunther, at the saxophone, will very likely do some work with the clarinet and flute as well. Lee Hardesty, saxophone-clarinet, is a Peabody graduate and has been called a "musician's musician." Victor Olmsted, saxophone-cellist, is a former member of the Army Band. Jack Schafer, trumpet, is known for his arrangements. You've heard Walter Salb over WJSV at the organ. Warfield Eller, string bass and tuba, was with the Baltimore Symphony. Lloyd Tyler, has just resigned as trombonist-arranger for Woody Herman's band, to live in his home town.

PEOPLE AND THINGS: There will be five stage shows each weekday during Sammy Kaye's "Swing and Sway" engagement at the Earle . . . Doors open at 9:15 with the first feature at 9:45 . . . Sammy, by the way, will be feted Saturday evening at the Dodge Garden House by the Ohio University Alumni Chapter of Washington . . . Father Gilbert V. Hartke, head of the speech and drama department of Catholic University, has returned with Walter Kerr and Leo Brady from California, where the film moguls have been expressing keen—and concrete—interest in the fine work his excellent department is doing . . . In honor of "The Biscuit Eater," swell film, "Uncle Dave" Ginsburg, manager of the Hyattsville Theater, will stage a free dog show on the grounds Saturday morning at 10 o'clock . . . The Roxyettes have a week off . . . Lee Mason of "Pins and Needles" is in town, an early lap on a 40-week tour . . . It's Johnny Graham's orchestra that will play for the opening dance at Steve Cochran's Olney Barn dances tomorrow evening.

After Shock and Amnesia, 'I Love You Again'

Louella O. Parsons' Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 5 (INS).—Carmen Miranda, the gal whose turbans and song, "South American Way," became popular from Keokuk to Modesta, is headed for Hollywood. That's news, my friends, for although Carmen did "Down Argentine Way" for Darryl Zanuck, the shots were made while she was working in a night club by a crew who went to New York to photograph her. When the picture was sneaked everyone did a rave over Carmen, so now she's been signed to star in "They Met in Rio." Miranda, who was the singing idol of South America before she became the toast of Broadway, reaches here November 1 with her own Brazilian band which will play accompaniments for her in "They Met in Rio."

PARSONS

While on the coast Carmen will do a play at the Ambassador Theater. Don Ameche will costar with her in the picture, "They Met in Rio." You can see what this picture will do in South America, where she is so well known and loved.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The blond, good-looking son of Joe E. Brown, Joe Leroy Brown, will wed Virginia Lee Newport September 24 at the Westwood Community Church. Invitations were received today; Ann Sheridan and George Brent will marry sooner than anyone expects; Herbie Kay, once the husband of Dorothy Lamour, is marrying a Texas gal and a nonprofessional, before Christmas; Don Beery and Peggy Stewart will take their vows at the Little Church of the Flowers on Saturday; Tamara and Donald Briggs, Virginia Bruce's brother, doing the night spots together; Olympe Bradna and Roy Newbert, son of Nellie and Roy Newbert, a cute twosome at the El Capitain; Eddie Norris and Simone Simon a devoted twosome at the Hollywood Tropics; although Dolly Haas and John Brahm are talking divorce, he may put her in a picture in the fall.

Helen Gilbert has been asked to play a symphony in her home town; Jackie Coogan back in town after making the trip from Joplin, Mo., in 36 hours, la congaing with Virginia Langden.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Metropolitan

In "They Drive By Night" Warners have at last found a convincing way of getting some of their more riotous players out of prison. It's an enormous step up into the world of the truck drivers for George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, Ann Sheridan and Ida Lupino. So after an interesting week at the Earle, this film reopens today at the Metropolitan.

One of the things that made this such a thriller while it was on Thirteenth street was its dialogue. It is definitely adult fare, so don't be too shocked by what you hear from the screen.

Raft and Bogart play brothers in the trucking business. They have several vehicles, but the living they make from them only manages to keep them from the snares of the repossessors. Enter Miss Lupino who falls in love with Truckster Raft. She sees he's blue and discouraged about the whole business and influences her husband, played by bushy Alan Hale, to give him a job in his thriving business. After which she forces herself on the unwilling Raft.

Unwilling, for he's about to wed "Cassie," played by Ann Sheridan. Ann doesn't like Ida and the feeling's mutual. So the volatile Ida trumps up a confession of the murder of her husband at the instigation of Raft. It's a slim outlook for suave George until she collapses on the witness stand.

Others in the large cast are Roscoe Karns, John Litel, George Tobias, Charles Halton, Paul Hurst, John Ridgely, Joyce Compton, Joe Devlin and William Haade. The screen play by Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay is from a novel by A. I. Bezzerides. Raoul Walsh directed.

Gridiron Picture Changes U. Name

The University of California at Los Angeles became Pacific Coast Univeristy, as Paramount's "Touchdown" picture company, complete with professors, students and football coach, moved onto its Westwood campus for exterior scenes.

The players' call sheet for the first day on location shooting required the presence of such principals as Wayne Morris, in his dual role as star quarterback and Phi Beta Kappa student; Virginia Dale, as the campus flirt; William Frawley as the coach, and Rod Cameron as the ace fullback.

Palace Holds 'Boom Town' Second Week

Gable, Spencer Tracy, Claudette Colbert and Hedy Lamarr Costarred

Having blown on its dice in the form of casting Gable, Tracy, Colbert and Lamarr in one (1) film, M-G-M has rolled them magnificently in "Boom Town." This vehicle, tailored to four individual talents, enters its second week at the Palace this morning.

"Boom Town" details the ups and downs of oil men, those two-fisted dynamos who have developed our oil industry until it has encircled the globe, and if you're a Missourian who doubts that they had their ups and downs, you ought to see "Boom Town" just to be shown. It's a parade of success and failure such as one only imagines in a day dream.

Miss Colbert deserts her sophisticated self to play a sweet, simple lass over whom Clark Gable and Spencer Tracy battle. There's never any question about who's top man, but Tracy softens his usual ill-luck by making himself her guardian angel. No matter who might be in the money at any given moment, it's Tracy who upholds the simpler life. For the latter quarter of the story and to give a proper background to the elusive Hedy Lamarr, New York replaces the 1930 frontier as "Boom Town." Since the film is two hours long, this last portion tends to become a bit tiresome, but before the foursome fade away, three of them are back in the open spaces and one feels confident that there will be more ups and downs, more Hedy Lamarrs to divert Gable from the paths of righteousness.

If you have the idea that nothing much happens except rises and falls, you are being misled. There is more slam-bang action in these two hours than you'll find in any current adventure. There are fights, oil explosions, trips to the Caribbean, loose ladies, 1930 exhilaration, sleek clothes, an attractive child, some marvelously juicy lines and at least two Tracy ad lib remarks about the Gable ears.

Frank Morgan shares star billing with the celebrated foursome and his admirers will be pleased to hear that he has a role which has nothing to do with the theatrical profession. He's a sharp trader in this one and better than he's been in many reels. Lionel Atwill, Minna Gombell, Marian Martin and Chill Wills are others in the cast. Jack Conway, an expert at this sort of action-jammed endurance contest, directed skillfully and with a couple of bright ears to the dialogue. John Lee Mahin wrote the screen play and former Postmaster General Will Hays gave an indulgent smile to some of the wisecracks.

Pete Smith's third in his series of quizes, "Please Answer," and a color cartoon, "Romeo in Rhythm," also continue and this morning a new "News of the Day" enters the bill.—R. L. C.

Columbia

Word-of-mouth, they say, is the best possible praise a film can get. And from the word-of-mouth praise "I Love You Again" has received, it's scarcely a surprise to find this riotous comedy back on F street. It reopens this morning at the Columbia.

William Powell and Myrna Loy might well be embarking on another series as likable as their "Thin Man" ventures in this "different" tale of a man who's lost his memory and a wife who is not quite sure just what sort of a fellow she married. He used to be quite a boy ranger chap, all for the good, clean life—a life which the film hints is laudable but bitterly dull.

Having been really a "con" man who got konked on the head after doing an evil deed, Powell has spent some years at the top of his pottery profession. Now he's been battered again for a good deed and his personality is reversed. It's all quite confusing and best seen from the word go, so check with the film table before you confuse yourself utterly.

In as refreshing a role as he has had in a long time, Frank McHugh is completely likable as a befuddled assistant to Powell. The two stars have taken a new lease on their bemused humor and Edmund Lowe appears as a resourceful racketeer. W. S. Van Dyke 2d, director of the "Thin Man" series, also megaphoned "I Love You Again" and inserted some daft passages that will have you smiling for weeks. R. L. C.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 5.

WAR: The European battlefronts spread last week to the quiet halls of the Hotel Fairmount in San Francisco—where Noel Coward suddenly was confronted by young Prince Hohenlohe. The prince's mother, who has found a refuge in this country, had been a confidante of Hitler and left England after a notorious lawsuit there . . . Coward, employed in a mission of state, tried to avoid the embarrassment of speaking to an acquaintance who is a citizen of an enemy country. But the prince, with unrefreshing naivete, persisted in greeting Noel and informing: "I shall be returning home soon. I feel it is my duty to go back to Germany and fight" . . . "My dear young man," said Noel, coldly, before rushing away, "this should be as good a time as any—to kick you right in the teeth."

Mrs. Roosevelt

COMPLAINT: Elsa Maxwell, who is heading a Wilkie-for-President committee, has issued her first campaign attack—directed against Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt . . . Elsa, of all people, complains: "Eleanor is an exhibitionist."

RELIEF: Carl Sandburg concluded his long lecture tour recently and bade farewell to the lecture platform without any regrets. He then went to see the Fair at Treasure Island, where the escorting officials, pointing to the crowds, said: "Isn't this wonderful?" . . . "Yes, it's wonderful," Sandburg agreed. "It's wonderful to see so many women and realize that I don't have to speak to any groups of them."

SUCCESS: William Saroyan last week refused $35,000 from RKO for the screen rights to "Time of Your Life." He insists upon a wholesale deal to include his other two plays, "My Heart's in the Highlands" and "Love's Old Sweet Song." Saroyan also demands that he be assigned the job of producing and directing the latter two plays . . . Only a few years ago Saroyan was haunting the film studios, seeking work. Stanley Rose, who owned a bookshop here, assured Saroyan that he had faith in his talents and agreed to act as his agent. "Come on, Bill," Stanley told him a few days later, "we have a date with a producer. You carry this bag" . . . "Okay," the writer agreed, "but what's in this bag?" . . . "Books," explained his new agent. "They'll think you're my assistant, carrying the books. In that way I'll get you inside to see producers."

DEDUCTION: When Robert Benchley had his income-tax statement examined by a representative of the collector of internal revenue, Benchley hesitatingly asked one question. "Under this deduction marked 'Contributions,'" said Benchley, "would that be the proper place to put down Contributing to the Delinquency of Minors?"

CHATTER: Ben Hecht and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., are planning an independent production-unit . . . Lewis Milestone, who directed the John Steinbeck movie, "Of Mice and Men," is arranging a deal whereby he will direct another Steinbeck story, "Red Pony" . . . Artie Shaw will work for Walt Disney . . . Sophie Tucker is completing her autobiography, "Life of a Red Hot Momma" . . . Moss Hart phoned Fannie Brice for the starring role in the new Kaufman Hart comedy, but Fannie pleaded that she is too busy. "I can't go to New York," said Fannie, "and just drop my job of decorating Ira Gershwin's new house" . . . Oscar Levant told the author of a satirical movie which flopped: "You wrote with your tongue—but not in your cheek."

In Hollywood

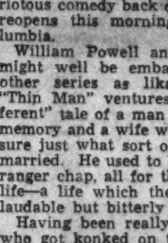
Hollywood, Sept. 5.

One reason those colossal biographical pictures don't pull in more audiences is, I think, the title situation. Warners are beginning to catch on. The new Eddie Robinson picture, which started as "The Man Reuter," is being released as "A Dispatch from Reuter's," which title was suggested by William Dieterle. Dieterle believes that ordinary biographical titles are not intriguing enough.



HOPPER

What movie-goer would brave the formidable "Juarez," "Geronimo," or "Dr. Ehrlich," when "Love Is News," "Torrid Zone," or "It's a Date" can be seen just across the street? Life stories are just as entertaining as any other type of picture, but some of those dull labels keep the public away in droves. What do you think?

Bette Davis told me she enjoyed playing the role of a murderess in "The Letter," but she was petrified about firing the gun that killed Herbert Marshall, because once when she had to do this on the Broadway stage, she was so nervous she fired half a minute too soon—and "killed" the man before he could say the words that made her shoot! Well, at least, that can't happen in pictures. Scene can always be shot over, and so can the victim!

The late Granville Bates, who was so good in "My Favorite Wife," once told me that in the four-a-day vaudeville days when he was playing leading man in a dramatic sketch, he wanted to take a vacation, so brought to the company manager a young fellow he considered a likely prospect as substitute. The young man read for the manager, who turned him down cold, saying, "Take him away—the guy can't read—and besides, he's got laryngitis." The "guy" was Spencer Tracy.

Boris Karloff, who is a horticulturist by avocation, has developed an orchid which he is sending to the National Botanical Association for public exhibition.

Wallace Reid, jr., who was in "Northwest Mounted" and is in Republic's "King of the Royal Mounted," is supported by two players who used to support his dad during senior's heyday. They are Herbert Rawlinson and Bryant Washburn.

The only screen actor I know who was pronounced dead, then continued with the same picture 72 hours later, was Tom London, who's been on the screen 33 years. He's a cowboy, and was riding in a Western behind the camera car when he discovered the saddle was about to fall off. He decided to throw himself off the horse, but his foot caught in the stirrup, and he was dragged, and before they could get an ambulance, he was pronounced dead, taken to the morgue, where he woke up two hours later, screaming for help. At least, that's the story he told me on the George O'Brien set when they were making "Stage to Chino."

Bing Crosby's friends are surprised that he's no longer wearing the old sweat shirt, and the story behind it is that some months ago Bud Watson read a crack about Bing's sloppy attire, clipped it, sent it to Bing with a note. A few days later, Bing ordered a whole new wardrobe. Now he's giving Adolphe Menjou a run for his money. Wouldn't it be a scream if they started calling Bing "the best dressed crooner?"

Before filming of "Love Thy Neighbor," studio called Fred Allen for a screen test one day, and when somebody asked why Jack Benny wasn't there, too, Allen said, "They don't give him a test. He gets a blood transfusion."

Guy Kibbee has such a small foot he has to buy shoes in the boys' department, and he's so ashamed of it! Walter Pidgeon is ashamed that he wears men's size No. 12, so there you are—no pleasing anyone!

Al Rogell, speaking of a certain Hollywood couple, said, "The ideal Hollywood couple—they even think alike. Of course, she always gets first think."

2 Ex-Students To Drill Corps At Maryland U.

Lieuts. Robert Jones And Harold Kelly Assigned to R. O. T. C.

Two former students have been assigned to duty at the University of Maryland as R. O. T. C. instructors, it was announced yesterday by Lieut. Col. Robert E. Wysor, professor of military science and tactics. They are reserve officers placed on indefinite active duty by the War Department to fill in for regular Army officers needed for the conscript training.

Lieut. Robert W. Jones, son of a former head of the military department of the university, is one of the new instructors. The other is Lieut. Harold Kelly, commanding officer of the regiment while in school.

Lieut. Col. Wysor, who is scheduled to report for duty with the Ninth Regiment at Fort Bragg, Ga., in November, said that the applications for the advanced course in military instruction were about the same as in previous years. There will be approximately 1,400 students in the regiment this year, 150 in the advanced course.

Boys' Club Funds Drive Shows Gain

The Prince Georges County Police Boys' Club has realized more than one-tenth of its $10,000 goal in its third annual funds drive during the first two days of the month, solicitation period.

Nearly $1,500 has been collected by the county and town officers and members of the board of governors of the club, it was announced yesterday by Superintendent Arthur W. Hepburn, of the Prince Georges County Police. Herbert Sachs, chairman of the drive, said he was very pleased with the results to date and asserted that every effort would be made to continue the progress toward the goal.

Fenwick to Head Va. Study Body On Truck Taxes

Richmond, Va., Sept. 5 (AP).—A commission created by the 1940 General Assembly to study taxes on trucks and motor carriers named Delegate Charles L. Fenwick, of Arlington, chairman today and called another meeting for September 26 for a discussion of the subject of reciprocity in road taxes.

Fenwick, patron of house joint resolution No. 50 providing for the commission, said that a series of public hearings probably would be scheduled later at which truckers, the railways and the public would be heard on various phases of the motor carrier tax question. The commission's field of investigation includes all types of taxes except the gasoline tax.

The reciprocity discussion probably will include the situation in respect to Maryland, which has complained to the State corporation commission against the 2 per cent road tax imposed on its carriers operating over Virginia highways and which has threatened to require Virginia trucks operating through Maryland to buy Maryland license tags if the Virginia requirement were not waived. Maryland does not impose such a tax on Virginia operators going into Maryland.

Water Engineers Open Va. Parley

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 5 (AP).—The Virginia section of the American Water Works Association opened its annual meeting here today with about 75 engineers present to hear several technical addresses.

E. R. Sharpe, assistant Henrico County engineer, discussed the problems encountered in the operation of small waterworks, and R. C. Baldwin, superintendent of water supplies of the C. & O. Railway at Richmond, talked on the uses of hexametaphosphate for control of corrosion and prevention of scale formation in distribution systems.

Knotts Doesn't Want Chief Judge's Position

Denton, Md., Sept. 5 (AP).—Judge J. Owen Knotts, of Denton, has removed himself as a candidate for chief justice of the Second Judicial Circuit.

In a letter to Fred R. Owens, acting president of the Caroline County Bar Association, which adopted a resolution urging his appointment, Judge Knotts said he did not want to be considered for the post.

He is now associate judge of the circuit, being elected in 1934 to a 15-year term. The chief judgeship was left vacant by the death of Judge William Mason, of Easton.

City Votes to Boost Flood Wall Height

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Sept. 5.—The mayor and board of aldermen last night voted to increase height of a stone retaining wall along Carroll Creek in an effort to prevent a flood similar to that which inundated the downtown section of the city last Saturday.

USHA Refuses to Intervene In St. John's College Land Row

The United States Housing Authority has no legal right to intervene in the controversy between the Annapolis (Maryland) Housing Authority and St. John's College over disposition of a strip of land owned by the school, Nathan Straus, Administrator of the USHA, said yesterday.

Mr. Straus said he had urged the Annapolis Housing Authority to "resolve and settle the difficulty," which arose when the local agency chose a site for a slum-clearance project, including land owned by the college. When the school's board of governors declined an offer for the land, the Annapolis Housing Authority instituted condemnation proceedings, which are now pending.

Explaining the USHA's stand on the matter, Mr. Straus said:

"The relationship of the United States Housing Authority to the Annapolis Housing Authority, and all other housing authorities, is that of technical adviser and banker. We must insist, under the law, that projects be wisely designed and economically built. There is nothing in the United States Housing Act which authorizes the USHA to dictate to a local housing authority either that a particular site should be used, or that a particular site should not be used for a housing project."

Mr. Straus expressed regret that his personal efforts to settle the controversy have thus far proved unsuccessful.

Gas Tax Receipts Jump $701,942 In Old Dominion

Richmond, Va., Sept. 5 (AP).—Gas tax collections in Virginia have shown a $701,942 increase for the year through July as compared with the same period in 1939.

Col. Marion S. Battle, director of the division of motor vehicles, said that the increased collections mean increased consumption and this means increased traffic.

This has been borne out by a 22.5 rise in traffic arrests by State police in the past 60 days, he stated, adding that this "shows that the police are striving for and are obtaining more uniform enforcement. These efforts at uniform enforcement must of necessity eventually produce safer highways."

Gas tax receipts for July were $1,881,248, a drop of $34,180 from the June total. This was due, Col. Battle explained, to a heavy late June sale of gas before the half-cent national defense tax became effective.

Md. Pilot Registers For Canadian Service

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Sept. 5.—F. F. Lee, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip F. Lee, sr., of Urbana, near here, has left for Montreal, where he has signed up for service with the Canadian government. Lee will pilot warplanes from Canada to Great Britain. Lee said he will be paid $500 for each plane he ferries across the ocean.

Va. Garden Club Plans 86 Classes In Rose Exhibit

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 5 (AP).—The Garden Club of Virginia is arranging a schedule of 86 different classes for its ninth annual rose show to be held at the Farmington Country Club, Tuesday, October 8.

With one or two exceptions, all the classes will be open to amateur gardeners and flower lovers.

The 76 classes for specimens and collections of all types of roses and the ten divisions for arrangements will provide, said a spokesman for the Rivanna Garden Club, "ample scope for every interested exhibitor to give evidence of his or her skill as a gardener or as an artist in arranging flowers."

Among the prizes will be the five annual cup awards, the silver bowl, and the medals awarded by the American Rose Society.

400 Allegany Students 'Strike,' Protest School Consolidations

By the Associated Press

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 5.—More than 400 Allegany County children refused to heed the school bell's summons today and their parents, protesting a consolidation of schools, awaited word from Gov. O'Conor on the situation.

Today's end of the summer vacation found scores of pupils reporting to the former schools although the board of education had closed them and ordered the students transferred to Frostburg. Many others reported to no school, awaiting clarification of the protests to the transfer.

Parents in the Mildlothian and Carlos districts said they would wait until tomorrow for a reply to a letter sent the Governor, and if none came they would go to the Allegany County commissioners.

Other schools affected by the "stay-away strike" were at Midland, Mount Savage, Lord, Ocean, Gilmore, Zihiman and Borden Shaft.

Supt. of Schools Charles L. KKopp said a preliminary report on the situation had been received but that the board had not decided what would be done.

Asiatic Invader in Potomac 17 Years Faces Siege of Five Years

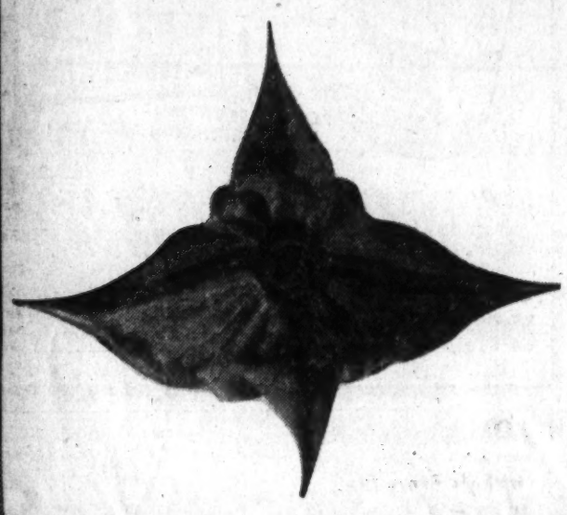
A VAST GROWTH—What looks like a front lawn for a country mansion is a vast sweep of water chestnuts blocking the mouth of Dogue Creek, near Fort Belvoir. The creek was once a good fishing ground, but now only the herons (note white spots to rear of center) drop around



FOUR-PRONGED SHELL OF WATER CHESTNUT

If you think pulling chestnuts out of the fire is a neat trick, try pulling them out of the water. Especially when the water happens to be the Potomac, and 9,000 acres of the stuff is clogging up the river's tributaries and coves for 45 miles downstream from the District.

Down South they're having trouble with the water hyacinth which propagates at a terrific rate, choking streams and canals. But at least the hyacinth is pretty to look at, if you feel like looking.

Up here on the Potomac, though, the water chestnut is downright ugly. No one seems to have a good word to say for it. The dern thing smothers the growth of wild rice and celery, driving off the bass and wild ducks. It snags motor craft and prohibits swimming. It catches refuse, spreads pollution, breeds malarial mosquitoes.

The plant became such a pest that two years ago the Army decided that it was a menace to navigation, undertook to destroy it, and gave the task to Col. Robert S. Thomas, District director of river and harbor opeations for the Engineer Corps.

Some job they gave Col. Thomas; The water chestnut, with root-stems running up to 16 feet, surface rosettes stretching to 18 inches in diamter, and seeds protected by a four-daggered nut, virtually thrived in poison sprays and kerosene fire. After a year's experiment an underwater cutting machine was devised which surely—though slowly—killed the plants faster than they grew.

This year with three cutters operating during the two-month period in which it is possible to destroy the still unfertilized chestnut, the pest was practically eradicted in the Washington Airport basin and the District water front down as far as Alexandria. Infestation was partially cleaned out in Oxon Run, Hunting Creek, Belmont and Occoquan bays, Gunston Cove.

With representatives of The Post, he cruised the river yesterday, pointing out how the water chestnut covered shoals, muddy-bottomed sections of the river and its tributaries, exiling bass from such fishing holes as Gunston Cove, Dogue and Mattawoman creeks.

"Naturally, despite our efforts to hedge in the loose plants we cut," Col. Thomas said, "some of it gets away and drifts downstream onto waterfronts of fishing and boating clubs. Inspection affirms our belief, however, that most of the drifting chestnut has been loosened by rough water or wind."

The colonel feels, and rightly so, that a good start has been made. He estimated that the invader—an Asiatic native which got into the Potomac somehow 17 years ago—could be wiped out in about five years at a cost of between $250,000 and $500,000. He got by with $10,000 appropriations the past two years.

"We'll need $75,000 next summer to do the job as it should be done," he said.

Motorman Injured in Car Crash

FRONT OF DAMAGED CAR

A street car motorman was crushed at the controls yesterday when his car crashed against the rear of another at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest He was towing a car at the time.

The injured man, Richard A. Jordan, 23, of 1821 Eighteenth street northeast, suffered a possible fracture of the skull and back. His condition last night was serious.

Police said Jordan's car was towing another northbound on Fourteenth street, down hill. His car crashed into the rear of a streamliner which had stopped to discharge passengers at the corner.

The streamliner was knocked more than 50 feet by the force of the impact. Passengers on the new car escaped injury. The other cars were "special" cars and contained no passengers.

Kings Mountain Battle Portrayed by Artists

RUTH DEGGES AND FRANK BUFFMIRE

Two young artists journey to a recently set-up studio at Fort Hunt CCC Camp daily to help bring to life a historic battle that happened 160 years ago. Ruth B. Degges and Frank E. Buffmire have started making maps, charts and other exhibits for the museum to be built in the Kings Mountain National Military Park in South Carolina, to commemorate the Revolutionary battle in which American backwoodsmen routed British troops on October 7, 1780.

When they started work last week, the two artists first had to rout an army of mosquitoes from the room set aside for their studio in a frame building at the camp. Mrs. Degges, 3525 Davenport street northwest, and Buffmire, of Alexandria, are doing the work at that location because the appropriation is for "field work."

Meanwhile, the Battle of Kings Mountain is raging (in miniature) in a studio in the Ford's Theater Building here in Washington, where Artist Richard Flesch is making a diorama. In the National Parks laboratory there he is constructing the tiny lifelike figures for the battle scene.

RICHARD FLESCH RECONSTRUCTS BATTLE

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The Great Secret is out and when Henry Armstrong defends his welterweight championship at Griffith Stadium come September 23, the party of the second part will be Phil Furr. The choice of Furr is a staggering surprise, like the sun rising in the East.

POVICH

When Promoter Joe Turner announced ten days ago that Armstrong would fight here in a Variety Club benefit against an opponent to be named later, the only speculation concerned the date on which it would be disclosed that Furr was the other guy. A big gate affair in Washington without Furr, especially in the welterweight division, was about as unthinkable as the Indians winning the pennant.

Furr is that negotiable asset of every promoter, the Local Boy, to toss in against the champion. He is, moreover, the tough local boy, short on class but long on crowd appeal. There never was any doubt that Philip would be in there against Armstrong.

Another reason why it is Furr is that he suits Armstrong. There would be no objection from the champion's corner. Armstrong's title is too valuable to be bandied about in rings where it might be exposed to a great risk. When Armstrong finally goes in there with somebody who might lick him, it will be in a New York setting where the chance will at least be worth the risk.

It's a swell kind of fight for Washington, however, and the Variety Club is lucky to come up with it. It wouldn't happen here except for peculiar circumstances that directed the bout to Washington. Up in Pittsburgh, Armstrong was offered a $25,000 guarantee to fight Local Boy Fritzie Zivic this month, and his manager was prepared to run out on the Washington fight.

Uncle Mike Jacobs saved the fight for Washington, strangely enough. At least he stepped in and shooed Armstrong out of the Pittsburgh match. Jacobs could do that because he had prior rights to Armstrong's services. He had, moreover, a $2,500 forfeit from Armstrong to clinch it. When the Pittsburgh fight was announced, Jacobs cracked down.

Armstrong couldn't fight in Pittsburgh, Jacobs said, but Washington was something else again. Of course Armstrong could fight in Washington. Jacobs wouldn't think of depriving the Nation's Capital of an attractive boxing match. Mr. Jacobs is a very nice man.

Of course it could be noted that Mike Jacobs is very anxious to please certain Washington folks in any event. On Capitol Hill there are still rumblings of an investigation of Uncle Mike's fight title monopoly and he is anxious to make friends in Washington. Any little thing he can do to please certain people here Mr. Jacobs is eager to do, especially at this time, and especially when there is so little risk for his man Armstrong.

Fighting for the welterweight title won't be any new experience for Furr in Washington. Back in 1936, he was in a Griffith Stadium ring against Champion Barney Ross. They drew $37,000 through the gate that summer night. Furr against anybody is an attraction in Washington.

He won't lick Armstrong of course—who will? But Philip is just tough enough, just rugged enough to put the more imaginative customers on the scent of an upset. There will be times during the fight when he will commit a few indignities on the person of the champion, and the customers will be rewarded.

Furr is our champion, anyway. He ought to be the champion of every guy who by some imagination could picture himself in the ring, a bit tired, getting older, and not in such hot shape, and having a tough time keeping swinging. He'll be representative of most of the folks at the ringside who are not as young as they used to be but still think they might do all right.

Furr knows his limits, but he sort of likes the idea of fighting Armstrong. He thinks he can show to best advantage against Armstrong's type of fighting, and the chances are he will. Before his match with Cocoa Kid, which he lost, he was dubious about the whole thing. He said frankly:

"I'm not much account against these clever boxers. They bother the hell out of me, and I can' fight my fight. Give me these fellows who will come to me. That's my meat. I knew I could knock out Steve Mamakos. The fellow I'd like to fight is Armstrong. That may sound crazy, but I'd still like to fight him. I've got a chance to lick anybody who comes to me, and that's the only way Armstrong knows how to fight."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 5.—You might as well resign yourself to the fact that the industry which will take the severest jolt when conscription comes along is the industry of sport, pro, amateur and all the neuter intermediaries, like tennis.

CONSIDINE

The 21-to-31 year age group covers about 98 per cent of all the men whose names make the headlines in baseball, boxing, football, golf, tennis, polo, basketball, swimming and all the other muscle bending endeavors. There will be few physical delinquents among them, for they are in their primes. And Jack Dempsey, who took a fearful amount of abuse for years, is among those who will advise the boys to sign up and shut up in a hurry.

Some sort of law probably will be passed promising conscripted men that they will get back their old jobs at the same pay when their duty is done. By and large, this will be possible in the case of all professions. But not in sports. Some special arrangement must be worked out in the case of pro athletes. A ball player or fighter or pro gridman of 30 is rapidly approaching the end of his earning power. His year in camp might mean his end. War of any length, of course, would end his playing days and his earning power, for few would come back from it in condition to recapture their old skill, and thus their old dough.

Even though the athletic world, as a whole, trampled no one underfoot in an effort to join the colors when America entered the World War, a good crop of stars was in there at the end via the draft, and some did not return.

Ty Cobb, a greater figure in baseball then than Bobby Feller and Joe DiMaggio combined, Grover Cleveland Alexander, George Sisler, Christy Mathewson, Sam Rice, Hank Gowdy, Eddie Grant, Pancho Snyder, George Kelly, Jess Barnes, Urban Shocker, Rabbit Maranville, Benny Kauff and others of note were under arms. Grant was killed in the Argonne and Matty always dated his lung trouble to his service in France. Hobie Baker, the Princeton football star, was killed in the air service. Johnny Poe, another Princeton football great, also was killed. Moon Harris, the ball player, came back patched up with wire, but played some good ball as late as 1925. Bill Tilden was a private in the Medical Corps, and the tennis champ of that era, Bill Johnston, was in the Navy. A number of fighters went in, but a lot managed to stay out because their managers refused to accept 33 1-3 per cent of a doughboy's pay. Now there won't be any choice.

War or not, there will be few if any athletes who are not tapped for bones under conscription. A random sample of a conscription roundup would read something like this:

BASEBALL—DiMaggio (married), Feller (single), Walters (married), Pee Wee Reese (single), Syd Hudson (single), Rowe and Dean (married), Newsom (married), Greenberg (single), Keller (married), Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis (single), Rowell (single), Frank McCormick (married), Johnny Mize (married), Mel Ott (married), Boudreau and Mack (single), Trosky (married), Ted Williams (single), Rucker (single), Higby (single), Medwick (married), Radcliff (married), and countless others.

PRO FOOTBALL—Everybody from Hein, Baugh, Parker, White, Hall, Farkas, Danowski, Leemans down, all of them married except Hall, Parker and White.

BOXING—Joe Louis, Billy Conn, Ken Overlin, Tony Zale, Henry Armstrong, Lew Jenkins, the Baers, Comiskey, Nova, Montgomery, Apostoli, Hostak, most of them married, with Conn the outstanding bachelor.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL—Take your pick. The call-up of the National Guard already has threatened the extinction of many college teams, particularly in the South and Southwest. Unless arrangements are made Texas A. and M. is expected to lose ten outstanding players when the Guardsmen report this month.

TENNIS AND GOLF—Budge, Riggs, Nelson, Snead, Ward, Chapman, Vines, Stoefen, Hogan, Little, Metz, Guldahl, the Hunts, Parker, and so on, many of them single.

Conscription will fall upon the sports world with the impartiality of rain. This, as we say, must be faced. And if that prospect is dreary it isn't one-millionth as dreary as the thought of a soft country that would be a pushover for an aggressor.

Yankees Beat Nats Twice, Gain on Indians

Yanks Win 2 as Nats Go Askew on Bases

Leonard, Masterson Victims as Champions Triumph, 2-1, 8-1, to Take Second Place And Cut Cleveland's Lead to Two Games

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats provided the opposition, but not much, yesterday as the Yankees won a double-header at Griffith Stadium and moved ominously toward the league-leading Indians.

Amid the mutterings of 17,000 fans who gazed disconsolately at stupid base running by the Nats in both games, the Yankees won a 2-to-1 duel from Dutch Leonard and then slapped down Washington in the second game, 8 to 1.

The Yanks' double victory took a game-and-a-half bite out of the lead of the backsliding Indians, who were losing their fourth straight game in the West. Despite the Tigers' victory over Cleveland, the Yanks moved back into second place, only two games removed from the lead.

Leonard Is Victim

That first game yesterday was another of the brutal beatings inflicted on Dutch Leonard by his own pals. It was the eighth game this season he has lost by one run. The Nats could stir up only one run against the pitching of Rookie Ernie Bonham, of the Yanks, but they lost the game actually on the base lines.

The first of the two Yankee runs off Leonard spawned directly from a shoddy piece of work in the second inning by Rick Ferrell, who chased a runner back to third base—and to safety. After Charley Keller opened the inning with a walk and stole second, Bill Dickey moved him to third with an infield out. Dahlgren gorunded to Leonard, who threw to Ferrell, who chased Keller back toward third. He chased him too long, and the upshot was that Keller was safe when Travis dropped Ferrell's throw on what would have been a close play.

Eddie Smith's 4-Hit Hurling Beats Browns

Chicago Wins Night Game, 4-2; Joe Kuhel, Harland Clift Homer

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 5.—Behind Eddie Smith's four-hit pitching, the Chicago White Sox defeated the St. Louis Browns, 4 to 2, tonight before 14,749 in the closing night game of the season here. Joe Kuhel hit his twenty-second homer and a double for the Sox. Harold Clift homered for the Browns.

The homers accounted for the first two runs of the game. The Sox went ahead in the third inning when Smith singled and scored on Jimmy Webb's double but Rip Radcliff's double in the fourth helped the Browns tie up the game again.

Smith was invincible thereafter, allowing the Browns just one hit in the last five innings. Meantime, Kuhel's double in the sixth scored Webb, who had singled to give the Sox the lead. They added their fourth run in the eighth on Johnny Berardino's error, a base on balls and a passed ball.

It was the twelfth triumph for Smith, who scored both of Chicago's two victories in its seven-game night schedule at home.

Chase vs. Ruffing Schedule Today in Ladies' Day Game

Ken Chase will attempt to bring the Nats an even break in the four-game series when he goes to the mound against the Yankees today.

The game is a Ladies' Day contest, the last of that kind before the Nats entrain next week for an extended road trip.

Chase, who won his last start, against the Red Sox, will be opposed by Red Ruffing who beat the Nats, 3-2, in a duel with Dutch Leonard last week.

Bears Come From Behind, Beat Eagles

Chicago Pro Gridders Win, 27-21, in Last Quarter; 35,000 Watch

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—The Chicago Bears turned an Eagle fourth-period touchdown threat into a touchdown drive of their own to defeat the Philadelphia National Professional Football League team, 27-21, in a nonleague charity game before 35,000 fans at Temple Stadium tonight.

An interception by George McAfee turned the tide of battle as the Eagles threatened late in the final period. The Bears tallied on their vaunted power to hammer home the winning touchdown.

Sparked by Little Davey O'Brien, the Eagles drove down to the Bears' 30, where the former Duke halfback intercepted a pass and returned it deep into Eagle territory. In four plays the Chicagoans drove to the Eagles' 3 and Masterson carried the ball over for the winning touchdown.

Davey Completes 21

It was a hard, bruising battle between the forward passing of O'Brien, who completed 21 out of 28 aerials, and the running attack of the Bears. The Eagles started strong when O'Brien tossed touchdown passes to Carter and Murray in the first period. Murray made both extra points to give the Eagles a 14-0 lead.

The Bears came back in the second with a 94-yard power march, culminated when Swisher went over from the 15. Manders made the point to cut the margin and the count was tied in the third when Famiglietti climaxed an 80-yard march with a 15-yard touchdown plunge. Again Manders made the placement.

The Bears took the lead late in the third, when O'Brien fumbled on the Eagles' 21 and Chicago recovered. Sherman circled end for 6 points and the methodical Manders tabbed the counter for a 21-to-14 lead. The Eagles fought back to

Four Withdraw From AmateurGolf

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—The United States Golf Association announced today four players, including former Walker cuppers Walter Emery, of Tulsa, Okla., and Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, Tex., had withdrawn from the National Amateur championship next week at the Winged Foot G. C., Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Emery will be replaced by Earle Berryhill, also of Tulsa, and Smith by Robert R. Walker, South Bend, Ind. The other withdrawals are Jack Tinnin, Dallas, replaced by O'Hara Watts, Dallas, and Charles L. Dexter, jr., Dallas, replaced by C. B. Kindred, Dallas.

Riggs Paces Field In National Singles

Erstwhile Tennis Clown Turns Serious, Wins Easily Over Hal Surface, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3; McNeill, Cooke, Kramer, Schroeder Advance

By Henry McLemore
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 5.—Robert L. Riggs, who used to play tennis as if he were rehearsing for a clown act with Barnum & Bailey, turned serious today and paced the field into the quarter-final round of the National Singles Tournament with a game worthy of a champion.

Using Hal Surface, of Kansas City, as a foil, Riggs won 6—4, 6—3, 6—3, and at the finish of the match few of the spectators doubted his ability to defend successfully the title he won on these same courts a year ago.

Surface, who has been playing much better of late than his twelfth spot in national ranking warrants, never had a chance against the determined Riggs. He employed everything he had, but Riggs had the answer for it all. The champion went all out, and during the three sets displayed a remarkable range of shots.

Dark Horses Shine

Five other seeded players, and two who were overlooked by the officials when the draw was made, advanced into the round of eight with Riggs.

Don McNeill, the Oklahoma menace, trounced Harris Everett, of Jacksonville, Fla., 6—4, 6—3, 6—3; Elwood Cooke, New York, bounced out Charles Olewine, California, 6—3, 6—3, 6—0; Jack Kramer, another California youngsters, maintained his whirlwind pace to crush Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, 6—2, 6—4, 5—7, 6—0.

Ted Schroeder, who shares the National Doubles title with Kramer, whipped the fading Bryan Grant, 2—6, 6—3, 9—7, 8—6; Frank Kovacs toyed with Charles Mattman, 6—2, 6—4, 5—7, 6—0; Frankie Parker ousted William Gillespie, 6—2, 6—3, 10—8, and Joe Hunt, the stalwart

Billy Southworth Named Manager Of Cards for 1941

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 5.—President Sam Breadon disclosed today that Billy Southworth, who replaced Ray Blades as the Cardinals' manager last June 7, was given a contract for 1941, as well as for the remainder of the 1940 season.

No announcement on length of the contract was made when Southworth was signed.

"Coming in as he did, Southworth was entitled to another year's contract right away and he got it," Breadon said.

Under Southworth the Cardinals have won 50 games and lost 30, climbing from seventh place to third in the National League standing. Southworth formerly was manager of Rochester of the International League.

Boston Takes Third Straight From A's, 9 to 7

Sockers Score Six In Second; Macks Tally 7 in 3d

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 5.—A seven-run Philadelphia rally was offseet by the Boston Sox today as they made a clean sweep of a three-game series by topping the Athletics, 9-7.

After the sockers pounded Starter George Caster for six tallies in the second inning, the Athletics rebounded in the next frame and pounded Jim Bagby, jr., and Emerson Dickman for six consecutive singles plus Bob Johnson's twenty-fifth homer of the season, a drive into the leftfield screen with two on base.

After the seventh Philadelphia run was posted, Earl Johnson took over the Boston mound and held the opposition to two hits during the last six and two-thirds innings, to wind up as the winning pitcher.

Joe Cronin inspired the sockers into launching a 12-hit barrage against Caster and Bill Beckman by lashing out three two-baggers on as many trips to the plate.

Caster opened the Athletics' big third with a single, but when he was due to bat again in that inning, he gave way to Pinch-hitter Miles.

Roy Ryden Wins 2 Major Trophies At Winchester Club

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Sept. 5.—Roy Ryden played two rounds of golf at the Winchester Country Club and won the two major trophies of the season, the Byrd Trophy and the club championship.

He defeated Ralph Grimm in the finals of the Byrd Trophy match, 5 and 3, after giving Grimm two strokes on each 18 holes. On the last 18, he turned in his cards of 67 and set a new amateur record. Par for the course is 71.

Grimm also was Ryden's competitor in the finals for the championship. Ryden last year won the Byrd Trophy match. With Peter Page, he was coholder of the amateur record of 70 prior to his record breaking round this week.

Cleveland's Lead Cut To 2 Games

Detroit Home Runs By York, Campbell Win for Second Day; Tigers Now Third

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Sept. 5.—The collapsing Cleveland Indians, playing like anything but potential American League champions, lost their fourth consecutive game today to sag within two games of the bombarding Detroit Tigers, their conquerors, and the onrushing New York Yankees.

The score was 11 to 3, and for the second straight day Detroit homers clinched the issue and sent 18,500 Tiger followers home happy.

Rudy York and former Indian Bruce Campbell each belted a four-base drive with two teammates on base to wreck Cleveland's hopes of drawing even in the three-game series which ends tomorrow. Campbell also homered yesterday.

Tigers Drop to Third

Although they won, the Tigers fell back into third place a single percentage point behind the Yanks, who swept a double-header with the Washington Senators.

Neither starting pitcher survived today. Al Smith, Cleveland southpaw, left the scene after allowing eight Detroit runs in seven innings. Tommy Bridges, of the Tigers, yielded to big Alton Benton in the fifth when the Indians scored all their runs. Benton, Detroit's No. 1 relief flinger, was invincible the rest of the way.

The Tigers scored single runs in the second and third innings and clusters of three in the sixth, seventh and eighth.

Greenberg Opens

In the second, Big Hank Greenberg opened with the first of his two doubles and raced home as Jeff Heath muffed York's fly ball against the screen in left.

The next inning, Bridges doubled and then moved to third when Ken Keltner booted Dick Bartell's easy grounder. The Tiger pitcher scored when Campbell forced Bartell.

Bridges, who had been going great guns, collapsed unexpectedly in the fifth. Ray Mack opened with a single but was forced by Rollie Hemsley. Smith walked. Lou Boudreau's single scored Hemsley. Roy Weatherly popped but Ben Chapman and Roy Bell both singled, scoring two runs. Benton came on the scene and thereafter the Indians were helpless.

York slammed his twenty-fifth homer of the year into the centerfield stands in the sixth, scoring behind Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg.

Campbell's eighth homer, which was preceded by a single by George Tebbetts and a walk to Bartell, produced Detroit's three scores in the seventh.

Joe Dobson, who replaced Smith after the Cleveland eighth, was pounded for three unneeded Tiger runs when Greenberg doubled, York walked, Sullivan tripled and Tebbetts hit a long fly ball.

In the final game of the series tomorrow big Louie (Buc) Newsom will pitch for Detroit and Johnny Allen for Cleveland.

Bucs Come From Behind to Win; Frank McCormick Sparks Attack

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 5.—The never-say-die Cincinnati Reds gave Johnny Vander Meer a push along the comeback trail today, coming from behind to defeat Pittsburgh, 6 to 3, for the young fireballer's first major league decision of the year.

Sparked by Frank McCormick's first-inning homer, with one on, and his single in the eighth good for another pair of runs, the champions retained their eight-game margin over the runner-up Brooklyn Dodgers, who also won at Philadelphia.

In Good Shape 'Til Eighth

Until the Rhinelanders staged their ten-man parade to the plate in the eighth, Johnny Lanning held things in fair control and, aided by a tie-breaking marker in the Bucs' half on two singles and a balk, appeared headed for the first Pittsburgh victory at Crosley Field in 18 games.

But he fed successive singles to Bill Werber and Mike McCormick, bobbled Goodman's sacrifice bunt to load the bases, and was yanked for Bob Klinger as Frank McCormick's second hit of the day put two men across.

Well-meant strategy exploded with a bang when, after Jim Ripple sacrificed, Ernie Lombardi was purposely passed to fill the sacks again and little Lonnie Frey dumped a double down the left-field line good for two more markers.

Reds Load Bases Twice More

Twice more the Reds jammed the bricks, once on Klinger's second intentional walk and again as Vander Meer's grounder forced Lew Riggs, running for Lombardi, at the plate. But the rally ended as Werber, up a second time, popped to Gustine.

Vander Meer, hero of two successive no-hit games in 1938, came back to Cincinnati recently after a tour with Indianapolis, of the American Association, to improve his control. He walked five men in his first appearance since recall, then settled down and struck out six, putting out the side in order in the fourth, fifth and seventh.

Yankee Stars Hold Arithmetic Session After Beating Nats

Outfielder Charlie Keller (left), and Second Baseman Joe Gordon (right), go in for a bit of subtraction on the New York Yankees' dugout wall at Griffith Stadium. They're erasing the "3½" mark denoting the number of games New York is behind Cleveland and preparing to chalk up two. The champs are just two out of first place now after beating the Nats, 2-1 and 8-1, respectively run in the fourth. Dahlgren singled to center and, with two out, Bonham beat out a roller to Travis. Gordon got the run home with a double to left.

Leonard held the Yanks to two hits thereafter, but Bonham made his 2-1 lead stand up in the last five innings with the help of George Case. In the sixth, Case led off with a single to put the tying run on base with none out and the heavy end of the batting order coming up. Buddy Lewis drove a long fly to DiMaggio and Case converted it into a Yankee double play with a bit of base running that would have curdled mother love. He just kept going, and as he neared third base, was he surprised to learn that DiMaggio had caught the ball. He was out by 40 feet in his attempt to regain first.

In the ninth, the Nats again had the tying run on base when Travis singled to center with one out, but Jimmy Bloodworth, who had already made three hits, banged into a double play.

That second game developed into a very messy affair for the Nats who set a new minimum for results in the second inning when they got a double, a triple, two singles and stole a base, yet somehow managed to score only one run.

The strange fact is that in their 8-to-1 beating, the Nats outhit the Yankees, 12 to 9. But, unlike the Yanks, they were getting their hits when they would do the least good.

For seven innings, Walter Masterson was doing a clever job of it in his duel with Atley Donald. He was holding the Yankees to four hits and only two runs. Both of the Yankee runs to that point evolved from walks he issued. In the first, after Masterson walked two batters, DiMaggio drove home a run with a single, and in the sixth, after a walk and two cheap infield hits filled the bases, a run scored in the course of DiMaggio's double-play grounder to Pofahl.

Travis Is Out at Third

The Nats resumed their quaint base running of the first game, in the second inning of the finale. Cecil Travis led off with a double against the rightfield wall, and imagining himself to be Charley Paddock, no doubt, tried to stretch it into a triple. Keller and Gordon threw him out by a dozen feet.

The Nats finally got a run in the inning when Bloodworth followed with a triple against the same wall and scored on Sanford's single to left. Pofahl followed with a single that was the third straight hit, but the rally subsided on strikeouts by Early and Masterson.

In the third inning the Nats chucked away a scoring chance when Buddy Lewis, after hitting a double to left with one out, tried to steal third for no reason at all. He was thrown out.

Yanks Score in Eighth

The game rocked along at the 2-1 figure until the eighth when the first five Yanks to face Masterson reached base. Henrich drew a walk. DiMaggio was hit by a curve ball and given a base. Keller singled to center, Rosar single to right and Dahlgren singled to left. The Yanks had three runs by that time, and Rene Monteagudo finally got the side out, fanning Rolfe with the bases full.

Monteagudo got his in the ninth. He hit Henrich, pitched a double to DiMaggio, a triple to Keller against the right center wall, and a long fly to Rosar. Three more Yankee runs. That's the way it went.

Dodgers Win In Tenth; Beat Phils, 8 to 5

Clubs Collect Total Of 27 Hits; Mulcahy Reached for 15

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 5.—The Brooklyn Dodgers were forced to ten innings today to whip the Phillies, but when the chips were down in the tenth they put the ball game out of reach by scoring three runs to win 8 to 5.

The game was a slam-bang session of 27 hits with Brooklyn getting 15 of them off Hugh Mulcahy, who went the route. In the tenth Pete Coscarart and Johnny Hudson singled with one out. Then Relief Pitcher Vito Tamulis forced Hudson at second, but Coscarart scored as Ham Schulte threw wild trying for a double play at first. Pete Reiser tripled and Dixie Walker singled.

The Dodgers had scored twice in the fourth on Ducky Medwick's homer, a double and a single and three times in the fifth by loading the bases with none out and slipping the runners in one at a time.

The Phillies kept punching, a run in the second, another in the fourth, two in the fifth and finally tied up the score in the ninth on three successive singles.

Promoter Jacobs replied that he would hold November 29 for a fight between Farr and some other heavyweight in Madison Square Garden for the benefit of the British Red Cross.

Emory-Henry College Starts Grid Practice

Graduation Loss Of 18, Handicaps Coach Porterfield

By the Associated Press

Emory, Va., Sept. 5.—The Emory and Henry College football team has started their early football grind to prepare for the opening game with the Catawba College eleven at Salisbury, N. C., on September 14.

The loss of 18 men by graduation from the Emory squad will be a handicap to Coach "Pidney" Porterfield this year. He lacks the line support of such men as "Moon" Mullins, "Brock" Brockman, "Beef" Hedrick, and Gaza Kovach who were the strong men of last year's line.

Also the backfield will miss "Stan" Sanderson, the hard-running, hard-hitting back of last year, and Henry Quinlan, who led last year's "pony backfield" to victories over such teams as Concord, East Tennessee State teachers, and Milligan.

Coach Porterfield has not found men capable of taking the places left vacant by the men of last year's squad. He hopes to find in Billy Edmondson the speed that Quillan had last year in the backfield. Also Shaffer, Orr, and Kovacs will step into the vacancies left in the line.

The wasps will continue throughout this week with two practices each day with Coach Porterfield taking the kinks out of the squad.

Motorcycle Races To Be Held by Club

The first annual District motorcycle championship races will be staged September 22 by the Ramblers Motorcycle Club at Pine Grove, Md., 1 mile from the District line on the Marlboro pike.

Racing will be in three classes—amateur, novice and expert—and there will be eight events. Such outstanding riders as Bob Wells, Ed Weisner, Don Smith, George Sabine, of Washington, and the Keever brothers, of Glenmont, Md., will compete. A practice run will be held a week from tomorrow at 3 p. m. at Piney Grove.

Giants Beat Boston Bees Twice, 8-7, 4-1

Winners Score Four In 9th Inning of Opener; Salvo Beaten

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 5.—The Boston Bees and New York Giants gave two versions of baseball in a double-header today, but the Giants proved masters of both to win 8 to 7 and 4 to 1.

There were 25 hits in the first game and the Giants got 15 of them. They bunched four singles for three runs in the fourth and rallied for four more runs on five singles in the ninth to win.

Boston used five pitchers and New York three.

While the echo of this bombardment was still ringing in the customers' ears, Hal Schumacher and Manuel Salvo tangled in a hurling duel which Schumacher won by allowing just three hits and Salvo lost by giving five.

A double by Sibbi Sisti and a single by John Cooney accounted for two of the Bees' hits and a run in the third inning. They didn't get another man on base until Sisti singled in the eighth.

In the meantime Babe Young hit his fifteenth homer to tie the score in the fourth and in the last of the eighth the Giants loaded the bases on a single, a double and a walk and ultimately scored three times.

Conn-Pastor Bout Expects 15,000 Fans

Fight at Garden Tonight Scheduled For 15 Rounds

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 5.—The tussle to decide who's going to help Joe Louis keep the wolf from the door and, at the same time, work up a little exercise comes off in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night between Billy Conn and Bob Pastor.

Some 15,000 people are expected to drop about $50,000 into Promoter Mike Jacobs' cash registers to see the (fortunately) once-postponed bout between two of the best boxing "big fellows" in the game—Pretty Boy Billy, who is about to abdicate his light-heavyweight championship, and former College Boy Bob, who went 20 full rounds with Louis before being bombed to sleep.

For some unaccountable reason the odds favoring Conn, which had been dropping all week, suddenly went up again today. The gambling men, after slicing the price to 5 to 7, turned right around and offered 5 to 9 on the Pittsburgh Irishman.

Conn Reported in Good Shape

This corner stays with Billy to win a decision as close as one-and-one over the 15-round route, largely because he is reported by his manager, Johnny Ray, in better condition than he has been for some time. Billy has been bothered by boils most of this year, and had another one treated less than ten days ago, but now, Ray says, "he's grade-A." If he isn't, Pastor has all the equipment necessary, plus experience in heavyweight competition, to do some mighty unpleasant things to the Smoky City fellow.

In addition to experience, Pastor also will carry a pull in the weights. The former New York University footballer expects to scale about 183 pounds, while Conn's highest hopes are that he even will come within shouting distance of 180.

Switch Was Opportune

One of the luckiest things to hit this particular punch-party was the rain—and box-office apathy—which caused its postponement from mid-August and an accompanying switch in locale from the Polo Grounds to Madison Square Garden. Box-office men estimated today that the Polo Grounds affair wouldn't have drawn $35,000 at best, while tomorrow's showing has a good chance of going over $50,000.

The winner of this bout was promised a shot at Louis. Now there's talk Jacobs may take such a fight to California or even put it on in the Garden here in October or November, but the best bet is that if and when it is unfolded, it won't be before next New Year's Day is forgotten.

Two California Girls Advance At Philadelphia

Gain Final Round Of 23d National Junior Girls Net Tourney

By the United Press

St. Martins, Pa., Sept. 5.—Two Californians — Louise Brough, of Beverly Hills, and Pearl Harland, of Santa Monica—today gained the final round of the twenty-third annual National Junior Girls' Tennis Championships at Philadelphia Cricket Club.

Miss Harland eliminated top-seeded Patricia Canning, of Alameda, Calif., 7—5, 1—6, 6—4. The upset carried the Santa Monican to the finals in her first year of junior competition, which also will be her last since she passes the age limit before next season.

Miss Brough came back from an opening set defeat to eliminate 15-year-old Doris Hart, of Miami, Florida's women's champion, 7—9, 6—4, 6—3. Seeded second in the junior tourney, the Californian was extended to win over Miss Hart.

In quarter-final round matches postponed from yesterday, Miss Canning, eleventh nationally ranked women's player, defeated Margarita (Sissy) Madden, of Boston, 6—3, 6—2, and Miss Harland eliminated Robin (Twink) Briscoe, a fellow townsman from Santa Monica, 6—1, 7—9, 6—0.

Jackie Cooper Wins International '225' Title

Toronto, Sept. 5 (AP).—Jackie (Pops) Cooper, 60-year-old daredevil from Kansas City, today added the international 225-cubic-inch hydroplane championship to the Canadian title he won yesterday by driving his powerful Tops III to victory in each of three hits at the Canadian National Exhibition today.

David Forman, of Buffalo, ran his Eaglet III to second place in each heat to place second in the final standing.

Grady Nine Wins 53d Game, Starts Football

Closing their season with their fifty-third victory, the Brady Boys midget baseball club yesterday defeated the Cecil Midgets, 10-1, at Magruder Park. The first football practice of the year will be held today at 11 a. m. at Turkey Thicket for 105-pound aspirants.

Furr Signed for Title Bout With Armstrong

30-Year-Old Welterweight to Meet Champ At Stadium September 23; Local Fighter To Receive 15 Per Cent in Variety Show

After all the hue and holler as to just where Henry Armstrong planned to defend his world's welterweight championship September 23, it was finally decided upon yesterday. The place is Griffith Stadium, and the lad Henry will face is, of all people, Washington's Phil Furr.

The 30-year-old welter, who in 1936 tried unsuccessfully to deprive Barney Ross of the crown, signed a contract for the business yesterday at Turner's arena.

Promoter Joe Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez already had a contract signed by fat Eddie Mead, manager of the champion, to fight anybody Turner could obtain—well, almost anybody.

Runaround for Izzy

While Izzy Jannazzo, who defeated Holman Williams Wednesday night here, may not be the ideal opponent for Armstrong, it appears that he has been given the bum's rush in the "struggle" to find an Armstrong opponent.

Jannazzo, who now ranks third on the 147-pound ladder, doesn't hit as hard as Furr, it is argued. Yet when he stepped into the ring at the ball park it was with the understanding that the winner would meet Armstrong.

The battle will be Washington's third world's championship fight, and if Furr can match the pace he hit the night he knocked out Steve Mamakos recently in the stadium, it may be a fairly presentable battle.

Fudd Gets 15 Per Cent

For his share, Furr will get the challenger's 15 per cent while Armstrong will get 40 per cent. The Variety

Spencer and Shorey Defeat Doerer and Price in Golf Match

Rock Creek Course Pair Lose, 2 and 1

Winners Dropped Previous Match; Birdie Deuce on 17th Is Decisive

Rock Creek's giant-killer team of Pro Al Price and Manager Tommy Doerer, jr., was handed a 2 and 1 defeat by the pro team of Cliff Spencer, East Potomac, and Mel Shorey, Indian Spring, in a return match yesterday over the Rock Creek course.

Price and Doerer upset the favored pro team by the same margin in the first challenge match last week and a third and rubber match will be arranged for the near future.

Spencer and Shorey were three up and five to play yesterday but Doerer put on a birdie streak, 3-2-3 on successive holes, to cut the margin to one and two to play. Shorey halved one of his birdies. Spencer clinched the match on the seventeenth when his tee shot received a favorable bounce off the bank to the left of the green and rolled within 2 feet of the pin for a birdie deuce.

Shorey and Doerer tied for low individual score with 33-34, 67, and 36-31, 67, respectively. Spencer posted a 35-34, 69, and Price 37-36, 73. The winners had a best ball 64 and the losers a 66.

Doerer will stage a hole-in-one contest Sunday on the fifth hole of "A" course at Rock Creek. The hole will be open all day, and two prizes will be awarded the men and two to the women with shots closest to the cup.

White to Meet Alexander In Capital Play

Defending Champion In 1st Round Sunday; 6 Flights to Compete

Frank X. White, defending champion in the Capital Club championship, drew William Alexander as a first round foe in Sunday's first round of match play. Medalist Pat Martino will meet Frank Gradoville while two-time former champion Billy Houghton will take on John Phelan.

Pro Tony Sylvester announced six flights would compete. Youngest threat to the title is Buster Mrstik, the Bethesda High School golfer, who has quite a task in the initial match play round, George Molloy.

Sunday also marks the beginning of club championship qualifications at Indian Spring, Beaver Dam and Kenwood while Belle Haven will conclude the medal tests.

Pairings, starting times and 36-hole qualifying scores in the Capital competition:

Women Golfers Compete Today In Corby Cup

The women golfers return to action today in the annual Corby Cup Tournament at Columbia, an 18-hole medal play event limited to players wit hhandicaps of 18 and under. A field of 79, including the gross prize favorite, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Middle Atlantic and Maryland State champion, will compete.

The event is a forerunner of the busy fall schedule of the District Women's Golf Association, that includes, in order: The inter-city match with Philadelphia here on the 20th, The Washington Post Trophy play on the 24th, and the inter-city match with Baltimore there, October 2.

Other October events are the Harris Cup play on the third; President's Plate on the fifteenth; N. B. C. Cup on the eighteenth, and Team Field Day on the twenty-second. Outside events include the Middle Atlantic Championship at Chevy Chase, October 7-11, and the Mrs. R. W. Payne Trophy play, 3-5, at Congressional.

Gordon Hittenmark set September 17 as the date of the third annual radio golf tournament, to be played at Kenwood. The event is open to men and women amateurs. First prize is the golden putter, while other merchandise awards will be awarded. Play will start at 8 o'clock.

Sarah Palfrey Returned This One but Missed Too Many Others

midshipman, defeated Veteran Frank Bowden, 6—1, 6—8, 6—4, 6—2.

The only real upset of the day came in the women's division when Mary Hardwick, of England, brushed aside Sarah Palfrey, of Boston, 6—1, 6—3. Miss Palfrey, ranked third in the United States and fourth in the world, had been chosen by many of the critics to meet Champion Alice Marble in the final. She had prepared for the tournament by taking lessons from Don Budge's tutor, Tom Stow, and was reported to have developed an all-consuming attack. If she had one, she never showed it against Miss Hardwick.

Out-hitting and out-smarting her opponent from the start, Miss Hardwick required little more than half an hour to reach the fourth round. Against the English girl's superior driving, Miss Palfrey made 55 errors.

Miss Marble breezed as usual, scoring as she pleased to defeat the English youngster, Rita Jarvis, 6—3, 6—0.

Another English girl, Valerie Scott, had little trouble with Mrs. Penelope McBride, of Short Hills, N. J., winning 6—1, 6—4.

In the other third-round women's match, Helen Bernhard, of New York, outlasted Margaret Osborne, of San Francisco, 5—7, 7—5, 7—5.

Jim Thomson Wins Scranton Driving Contest

Long-Hitting Pro Is Awarded Ton of Coal In Pretourney Play

By the Associated Press

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 5.—An arrow-straight 290-yard drive today won Jimmy Thomson part of his winter heating bill at chilly Chicopee Falls, Mass., as professionals and amateurs tuned up their drives for the Anthracite Open Golf Tournament, starting tomorrow.

Thomson, golf's siege gun, won both driving prizes. A ton of the hard coal of which this section is proud went to him for the mightiest single swat and he won a cash award for the greatest aggregate yardage—863 for three drives.

Sammy Snead, of Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., took second money with 800 yards, and Ed (Porky) Oliver, of Hornell, N. Y., third, with 794.

30 in Field

The driving contest crowned a practice day for more than 100 professionals and 30-odd amateurs entered in the three-day $5,000 tournament with a $1,200 bundle as principal lure.

Most of those who went around the Scranton Country Club course kept no cards. None reported bettering the 67 fired yesterday by Ray Mangrum, of Oakmont, Pa. Thomson had an even par 35, 35—70; Lawson Little, of Bretton Woods, N. H., a 71; Gene Kunes, of Philadelphia, a 73. Snead was two under par for the nine holes he played.

Picard Holds Record

Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., who won the first annual Anthracite Open last year with a sparkling 72-hole 273, holds the tournament record—63—for the hilly 6,782-yard layout.

For the first time since the National Open Golf Tournament at Canterbury Club, Cleveland, last June, Little, Gene Sarazen and Oliver will match strokes. Little won the Open in a playoff with Sarazen. Oliver, who had tied, was disqualified.

Also entered are three of the semi-finalists in the Professional Golfers Association Tournament at Hershey, Pa.—Byron Nelson, Toledo, Ohio, champion; Ralph Guldhal, of Chicago, and Snead.

Martinsburg Soph Gridder Breaks Ankle

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 5.—The first accident of a serious nature of the 1940 football training season at Martinsburg High School occurred yesterday afternoon when Leonard Meavers, 115-pound sophomore, suffered a broken ankle. The accident occurred during a short signal drill on the high school athletic field and it is thought it will keep the rookie candidate out for the rest of the training season and possibly the greater part of the regular playing season. Beavers and Bud Folk, a senior and possibly one of the first-string men this season, were both racing to recover a fumbled ball. Beavers dived for the pigskin and Folk accidentally fell across Beaver's leg, fracturing it at the ankle.

5 D.C. Netmen Enter North Virginia Open

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 4.—With a total of 49 entries including such top notch netmen from the Washington area as Barney Welsh, C. Alphonso Smith, Dick Murphy and F. Shields McClandish, play in the annual Northern Virginia Open Tennis tournament starts here Friday morning and continues through Sunday.

In view of the record entry list, matches will be in progress throughout the day Friday at five local courts, and the quarter-finals and semi-finals will be run off Saturday.

Twenty-five entries—18 of them from out of town—have been received for the Northern Virginia singles and 12 teams are entered in the doubles. These include performers from Washington, Richmond, Norfolk, Danville, Charlottesville, Lynchburg, Orange, Dahlgren, Arlington, Fairfax, Alexandria, Rockville, Md., and Bethesda, Md.

Smith, Murphy Back

Welsh, rated No. 1 in the Middle-Atlantic States by the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Smith, ranked No. 5, top the list of entries for the northern Virginia attraction. Welsh, whose home is in Rockville, Md., has held the District of Columbia championship for a number of years.

Smith, winner of the northern Virginia crown here for the past two years, held the Virginia State Closed championship in 1938 and was runner-up in 1939.

Coming here with Smith to defend the doubles championship they won last year will be Dick Murphy, stellar Washington southpaw racqueteer.

More Threats

Another formidable entry is that of F. Shields McClandish, of Fairfax, who has copped the northern Virginia tournament at Purcellville for the past two years.

Other out-of-town entries include David H. Smith, Washington; Sudie Warren, of Danville; Edward Paulette, J. C. Lewter and George Botts, of Arlington; Otis B. Jones and the Rev. Charles Covell, of Orange; Bill Morell, of Bethesda, Md.; Dick Wilson, Frank Hartz and Arthur Peach, of Richmond; Nick Smith, of Lynchburg; Dick Spindle and Jack Mallory, of Norfolk; LeRoy Strickler and Harold Burrows, of Charlottesville, and Dr. L. T. E. Thompson and C. A. Parsons, of Dahlgren.

Fredericksburg netmen who will take part in singles or doubles competition are Bob Chichester, Barney Driscoll, John Musante, Richard F. Lewis, Byrd Holloway, S. B. Donahoe, Harry Boyer, Donald Porter, Peck Garrett, Warren Rendall and the Rev. Robert F. Caverlee.

Joe Barse Captures Columbia Junior Title

New Club Golf Champion Scores 4 and 3 Victory Over Steve Olds After Narrow Escape in Semifinals Against Jim Stanton

Joe Barse is the new junior golf champion of Columbia Country Club, after a 4 and 3 thiumph over Steve Olds, but for a while yesterday morning it looked like he would not even make the final round.

Barse was two down on the seventeenth tee to young Jim Stanton in the semifinals but a pair of well-played pars on the seventeenth and eighteenth squared the match and he won on the first extra hole with a par four to Stanton's five.

Meanwhile Olds advanced to the title round with a 2-and-1 victory over George Rita. Olds played the back nine in par 35 for the victory.

Barse was up all the way in the title round, playing the out nine in 37 and leading, 2 up. He closed the match on the fifteenth green, 4 and 3.

J. B. Nicolaides won the second flight, and Tom Perry, jr., the third, while consolation victors were Ben Hartig, Litell Wilson and Tom O'Brien.

Championship Flight

Joe Barse defeated Jim Stanton, 1 up, 19 holes; Steve Olds defeated George Rita, 2 and 1.

Finals—Barse defeated Olds, 4 and 3.

Second Flight

J. B. Nicolaides defeated George Finch, 2 and 1; Danny Walser defeated W. C. Barkdull, 1 up.

Nicolaides defeated Walser, 2 up.

Third Flight

Finals—Tom Perry, jr., defeated Dana Belser, jr., 3 and 4.

Consolations

First flight—Ben Hartig defeated Charles Stockell, 7 and 6; Marty West, jr., defeated Owen Williams, 1 up.

Finals—Hartig defeated West, 4 and 3.

Right-hand Pitcher Has Won 20 Games; Cash, Player in Deal

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 5.—The Boston Red Sox management announced tonight the purchase of 35-year-old Dominic "Mike" Ryba, the International League's outstanding righthanded pitcher, from the Rochester Red Wings for an unannounced sum and a player to be selected later.

Ryba, known as the "one-man ball club," has played every position during his long career as a St. Louis Cardinals' farmhand.

This season, for the second time, he became a 20-game winner. The Red Sox current figures credit him with 20 wins against 8 defeats and only 48 bases on balls in 226 innings pitched.

Ryba won 20 games for the Columbus Red Birds in 1935 and the following season he won 14 for that American Association club before being recalled by the Cardinals and winning 5 National League games.

He started in as a catcher when he entered professional baseball from St. Francis College in Loretto, Pa.

He served as manager of their Springfield, Mo., club in 1934.

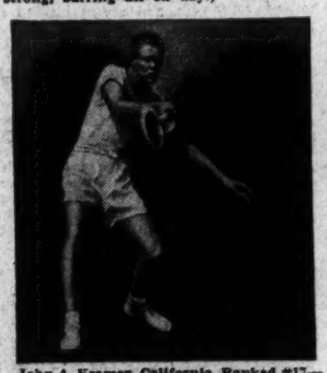
THE NATIONAL TENNIS SINGLES LOOKS TO TED HUSING

READ HOW TED HUSING SIZES THEM UP, PLAYER BY PLAYER!

Rob't L. Riggs, Chicago, Ranked #1 — Impressive. A great retriever; smashes superbly. More underrated than overrated. (Cinch to cop the crown if he starts strong, barring an off day.)

Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, Ranked #3 Has matured his game. Keeps opponents in backcourt. Tigerish when held close. Most improved of players. (Good chance to win, but the draw is against him.)

Frank Kovacs, California, Unranked, but seeded third—His play and clowning make him a man to watch, above McNeill and Riggs. (That semi-final with Riggs will break your, his and my heart.)



John A. Kramer, California, Ranked #17—May be the surprise of the tournament. Winning the doubles at 19 this year means he will bear watching. (Must get by Prusoff but this seems unlikely.)

Elwood T. Cooke, Portland, Ranked #6—Always a threat until meeting with equal ability and more daring. Lacks aggressiveness to dominate the higher brackets. (Will get to McNeill but, I think, in vain.)

Frank A. Parker, Beverly Hills, Ranked #2—Relies mostly on steadiness at baseline to win. Fine backhand control. Forehand the despair of all. Smashes well. (Quarter finals, yes, semi-finals, no!)

WEST SIDE TENNIS STADIUM, FOREST HILLS, Sept. 5:—"Riggs downs McNeill in gruelling five set battle."

"National champion forced to the limit to triumph over American and French clay court star." These should be the headlines next Tuesday morning (weather permitting) when the 59th National Lawn Tennis Championship comes to its close.

Six seeded and two unseeded stars enter the quarter-finals. The two unseeded youngsters are national doubles champions (won at Longwood Cricket Club, August 1940) Jack Kramer and Ted Schroeder, of California, while the seeded players are champions Bobby Riggs, Don McNeill, Frank Kovacs, Frank Parker, Joe Hunt and Elwood Cooke.

Matches Friday should see Don McNeill ride through Elwood Cooke, while young Jack Kramer, who is blazing thru this championship, should eliminate the steady Frank Parker.

Saturday Bobby Riggs should end the tour of Ted Schroeder while the meeting between Frank Kovacs, the clowning Californian, and Midshipman Joe Hunt should wind up with Kovacs on top, since Naval orders and varsity football will affect Hunt's concentration.

Sunday McNeill will outsteady young Kramer in a contest heightened by slugging and tactical maneuvers, with Riggs bobbling Kovacs who might try to upset Bobby with his comedy antics.

Monday McNeill will be loaded for bear, but the machine-like precision of Bobby Riggs, from all sides, should return him the championship again.

Walter Light Captures Governor's Day Purse at Timonium

Miss Maker Is Second With Randle's Queen Third; Winner Pays $6.80 Price for $2

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Timonium Race Track, Md., Sept. 5.—Walter Light, 3-year-old son of Sir Walter and racing in the colors of Mrs. J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va., survived a three-way photo finish to win the Governor's Day Purse, featuring today's program. With Jockey A. F. Martinez, the Cuban rider, putting up one of his best saddle efforts, Walter Light drove to the imaginary wire a head in advance of the Hillbrook Farm's Miss Maker with Randle's Queen, owned by U. S. Randle, of Washington, D. C., third in a field of eight going 6½ furlongs.

Those who backed the winner, trained by C. M. Feltner, of Berryville, Va., collected a $6.80 mutuel but those who backed Little Mowlee collected a lot of headaches. Little Mowlee, a second edition of Man O'War at Marlboro after running a dismal race in a previous outing, reverted back to a plow horse today and was an "up-the-race-track" last after showing a puff of speed directly after the start.

Little Mowlee Breaks First

In fact, Little Mowlee broke on top, but was soon second as Jockey Kelly rushed Randle's Queen out in front. Little Mowlee faded as quickly as a 25-cent necktie in a cloudburst and Ravenurst assumed the position closest to the leader. Walter Light and Miss Maker were well placed.

This was the order until the swing for the stretch when Walter Light responded to a drive to move up gamely between horses. Miss Maker, which had been losing ground from the start, rallied on the outside. In the final run to the wire, Walter Light took a slight lead over Randle's Queen. Then Miss Maker came with a bold rush that just missed taking it all.

Betting Is Brisk

Despite the fact that many fans said they "would never smile again" after yesterday's fourth-race photo finish, today's gathering was even larger than usual and the betting went along at a brisk pace.

Those who invested in the right combination, that of No. 5 and No. 6 in the daily double, collected $131.70 for the usual $2 investment. Star Canter jolted the favorite players to their very heels in the first race when he downed All Gray, one poorly handled by Jockey Sammy Palumbo. Trapshot, with a $22.60 price tag, led all the way in the second race.

TOTTY	(Faust)	115	1	3	3	3	3	3	21.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR CANTER, $11.00, $4.80, $3.20; ALL GRAY, $3.40, $2.30; FALL HAZARD, $2.70.

STAR CANTER moved up boldly along backstretch to reach contention, went between leaders to take slight advantage and was kept to pressure to end. ALL GRAY, the best, raced wide into first turn, was kept on outside and closed with good energy to just miss. FALL HAZARD raced MOROLEE into submission and held on with good courage in closing test. MOO could not threaten.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:35. Winner, Mrs. W. Cole Byron's br. c. (3), by Happy Time—Reigh Shot. Trained by J. W. McAbee. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAPSHOT, $22.60, $9.40, $5.60; KENNER, $6.80, $4.10; SATIN ROYCE, $3.00.

TRAPSHOT withstood early challenge of XMAS CAROL to take lead, opened daylight gradually and won easily. KENNER could not keep up early and responded to punishment to close boldly. SATIN ROYCE lacked early speed and closed full of run. XMAS CAROL forced early pace and tired.

Daily Double, STAR CANTER and TRAPSHOT, Paid $131.70

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:02. Winner, B. A. Hall's ch. g. (7), by Donnacona—Gold Chord. Trained by J. Anderson. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 3:53⅕.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARL'S CHOICE, $15.50, $4.40, $2.60; JUSTA BUD, $3.20, $2.40; LEICESTERSHIRE, $2.70.

CARL'S CHOICE was rated early, took lead and drew out to win handily. JUSTA BUD set good early pace, could not stay with winner, but closed gamely. LEICESTERSHIRE, allowed to race on own courage early, went to contention with rush when asked, almost lost rider at fifteenth fence, and was tiring at close. EDGEMONT made bad landings and boy lost stirrup.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:32½. Off 3:33. Winner, A. A. Baldwin's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS KSAR, $10.20, $5.20, $3.50; PRECIOUS TIME, $15.50, $5.90; BLENETHEL, $3.10.

MISS KSAR was rushed to take command over PRECIOUS TIME, set good pace and won easily. PRECIOUS TIME had keen speed in early stages and was second best. BLENETHEL was in trouble early and closed with good energy. NEW STEP was held safe.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01½. Off 4:02. Winner, Mrs. J. B. Belk's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WALTER LIGHT, $6.80, $4.40, $2.80; MISS MAKER, $6.00, $4.10; RANDLE'S QUEEN, $4.10.

WALTER LIGHT was close up from beginning, responded to urging to get to front inside eighth pole and barely held MISS MAKER safe. The latter raced far out throughout and closed gamely and just missed. RANDLE'S QUEEN set good pace and held on in final drive.

SIXTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:39. Off 4:39. Winner, M. B. Goss' gr. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOHOEV, $5.70, $4.20, $3.30; LAST REVUE, $10.10, $4.90; PERFECT LIAR, $3.40.

DOHOEV, within striking distance from start, moved up with good energy to take command when put to drive and drew out to win easily. LAST REVUE gained ground for half and came willingly in final test. SNUGGLE ran out while setting pace and failed to recover. GOODWINE had early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:07½. Winner, D. Christmas' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY SOLACE, $6.30, $3.30, $2.70; ACCIDENTAL, $3.20, $2.70; BLENNY, $3.40.

LADY SOLACE, allowed to settle into best stride, came around horses to better position and won going away. ACCIDENTAL set steady pace while saving ground, but could not cope with winner's closing bid. BLENNY was forwardly placed throughout and closed gamely. LATERAL PASS saved ground and tired right at close.

EIGHTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:38. Off 5:39½. Winner, Mrs. C. H. Baumgardner's br. g. At The Post

Selections at Timonium

Dear Al:

Spinach, T. T. Mott's steeplechase horse, has been placed on the veterinarian's list for some reason or another. I saw the 13-year-old yesterday while two veterinarians were examining him. The old fellow appeared to be as sound as he ever was, and, what's more, Trainer Judy Johnson had ridden him a turn of the steeplechase course only two hours before. Spinach has shown little this year and fallen twice. At Bel Aair he stumbled over a horse which broke a leg in front of him. Jockey Penrod, who rode him the other day when he went down, said that Spinach was bumped while in midair which caused him to fall. Just why Spinach should be picked out as an old horse to be kept idle, is not known. If the stewards, the track vet or anybody else wants to see some bad legged cripples, they don't have ot lok farther than right on the race track any afternoon as the fields are going to the post. What's more, Spinach probably gets better care than half of the horses sent postward on either the half milers or the milers. Perhaps somebody who once owned Spinach wants to see the old fellow retired. If that is the case, he should not have been run in a claiming race. Owner Mott put up his money and certainly has a right to run the horse. If Spinach has been barred because of old age or lack of ability, he should have plenty of company. At least, he has been fairly consistent about not winning, which is more than can be said about some of the younger horses hereabouts, and I do not mean Little Mowlee or those Channing flip flops. I don't like to see horses treated cruelly. However, they are allowed to perform with all sorts of ailments, so I can't see where old age should be singled out. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Real Boy was hotter than two firecrackers in the paddock before that last. Went up into a blind switch last out and had no chance. I'm going to string along. Misprint has been close and is a fit maiden. Meer Khan comes from a stable that cuts them loose.

Second race—Mudsill came back after a long rest to show a good effort at Marlboro. May have needed that effort as a tightener. Schley Ginna has shown speed on occasions and is running in cheap company. Poker Dice had plenty of foot and is a threat.

Third race—King Dominant has a world of speed on the flat and is a fair jumper. I believe he can turn back this brand of timber toppers. Forest Charms' last was a brilliant try. Bay Arnold would be close if taken off the reserve list.

Fourth race—Butterman seems well placed in this company. Carries top weight, but I'm going to be there. Eltonhead has plenty of foot and gets in this comparatively light. Hi-Blaze is fit but may not like the hard track.

Fifth race—Sistaur looks like the best bet of the day. Has the speed to make the most of that No. 1 post position and I see no reason for mistakes. Flagetta has been quitting in longer races and will appreciate the short route. Anya for the show end.

Sixth race—Frank H. is in excellent condition as that last indicates and seems headed for another set of brackets in this company. Worthowning is as good as that last. Marivah will improve on the hard track.

Seventh race—Chilly Ebbie has won two in a row and may keep right on gathering purses. Garrett will do the riding and the old plater runs for him. Kai-Min and Flyball for the place and show.

Eighth race—Irish Oak has the stretch punch to be dangerous in this field and I'm going to string along. Netta Wood's last was encouraging. Summer Stock, if in shape, would take it all.

Best bet—Sistaur.

Go Home Is Home First at Narragansett

Takes $1,600 Feature Sprint; Legal Light Is 2d; Favorite Out

By the Associated Press

Pawtucket, R. I., Sept. 5.—Sprinting along the rail to gain command soon after the start, W. J. Sprow's Go Home won the $1,600 Gloucester Purse at 6 furlongs in 1:12 3-5 today at Narragansett Park.

The 7-year-old son of Grandace was three and a quarter lengths in front of Henry A. Parr 3d's Legal Light, which had only a neck on the A. C. C. Stable's Son Altesse. Bogert, the favorite, finished fourth, two and a half lengths farther back.

Legal Light and Bogert were first out of the gate, but both were quickly overtaken by Go Home, ridden by Teddy Atkinson and carrying 116 pounds. There was no catching Go Home after he raced to the front.

Son Altesse made a strong bid for second, coming from nowhere as the field passed the quarter pole with Legal Light and Bogert starting to fight for the privilege of taking Go Home's dust. Legal Light just lasted.

The winner paid $10.30, $5.90 and $4.30 Legal Light returned $4.20 and $2.20, and Son Altesse $4.60.

Key Staples in Arms Program Swirl Higher On Revised Estimates of War Duration

Metals, Textiles In Heavy Demand On Fighting Speech Of British Leader

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 5.—Key commodities essential to the national rearmament program were caught in a rapid swirl of accumulation today which brought substantial upward price revision in some.

News of continued strong British resistance to German attacks, emphasized by the fighting speech of Prime Minister Churchill to Parliament in London today, gave commodity men grounds to revise upward their estimates of the length of the conflict and the amounts of American materials which may eventually be required abroad.

Strong stock markets, both in London and New York, also served as spurs to commodity buying. Not all of the better demand could be traced to actual U. S. Government purchasing of materials, but much of it was undoubtedly, market experts said, attributable to anticipation of such orders later.

Copper Leads Rise

Leading producers of copper started the ball rolling by following Phelps Dodge Corporation in an advance of ½ cent a pound for the red metal to 11½ cents. Copper has been in heavy demand both at home and from warring Europe and other foreign countries lately. The trade reported greater demand from all sides after the quotation was hiked, buyers apparently having an eye to what has been described as a "tight" immediate supply situation recently as well as the fact that copper sold as high as 12½ cents a pound earlier in the year.

Zinc was boosted a little better than 1-3 of a cent a pound to the highest price since the summer of 1937.

Scrap copper and various sorts of fabricated metal were marked up proportionately with the new refined-metal levels.

Heavy Textile Buying

New York's textile center—Worth street—hummed with activity again. The heavy buying movement which got under way late last week continued. Prices of several constructions were marked up ⅛ to ¼ cent a yard, which fact, spokesmen for several large houses said, served only to spur buyers to greater speed in closing contracts. Buying was reported general, embracing converters, bag manufacturers and practically all classes of mechanical users. Some of the business—possibly a larger share than could be definitely identified—was for Government account.

Associated with the Government's preparations for an enlarged Army was a rise in prices of hides and leather.

The trade has noted a gradual pickup of demand for both raw hides and tanned leather recently and when an active market became a certainty today tanners moved their selling lists up, some as much as 2 cents a foot from quotations of last week. It was pointed out in leather circles that buyers have been "overly cautious" within the last two or three months and for a time there was widespread cutting of prices in order to attract business. Tanners say the newly established selling prices merely restore the declines which took place during this period of slack demand.

Zinc in Demand

Nonferrous metal trade circles reported sales of zinc were good at 6.85 cents a pound, East St. Louis basis, a markup of .35 of a cent a pound. This is the highest price for this metal, used widely in heavy industry as well as in armament making, since it sold at 7¼ cents a pound in August, 1937. Trading in zinc futures on the commodity exchange was fast with sales of about 900,000 pounds reported at the close. Prices were higher.

Marked activity and rising prices in these and other key staples was quick to transmit itself to commodities futures in general. Wheat attained the best price in around two months at one time during the day. Wool tops, sugar, cotton, cocoa, rubber, silk and copper were among others to move up to some extent.

Wheat and rye flour prices in the metropolitan area of New York were marked up another 10 cents a barrel to a level 30 cents higher than a week ago.

Wheat Touches 2-Month Top, Then Recedes

Recent War Progress Encourages Buying; Cashing Pares Gains

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 5.—The highest wheat prices in about two months were posted on Board of Trade blackboards around noon today at the crest of an advance of almost two cents a bushel.

Wheat traders, following the trend of securities and stiffening prices in other commodities attributed to the national defense program, increased purchases. Brokers said recent progress of the war and the Churchill speech accounted for some encouragement and they attributed most of the buying to milling and elevator interests as well as dealers covering previous short sales or enlarging speculative accounts.

Profit taking attracted by the 10 cents advance since mid-August when the year's lows were established pared the gains but closing prices were ⅝ to 1¼ higher than yesterday, September 76⅜@76½, December 78@78⅛. Corn closed unchanged to ⅞ up, September 63¼, December 57⅜@57½; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; soybeans ½@1¼ up; rye ¼@⅝ higher and lard 5@12 lower.

Lifting of hedges by elevators selling cash wheat to the Federal Crop Insurance Agency, which was investing premium payments in accordance with law, added to the buying.

New crop corn contracts lagged behind but September futures rose about a cent at times. Government reports indicated about 54,000,000 bushels of 1939 corn originally sealed and 1938 corn resealed have been redeemed by farmers recently, leaving about 390,000,000 still under loans on farms. The Government is taking over some corn on which loans will not be extended but plans for erection of more steel bins were regarded as assurance that none of this grain would be dumped on the market.

Strength in rye was associated with the comparatively low price in relation to quotations on wheat and corn, brokers said.

Stocks and Bonds Continue Spirited Rise; Turnover Expands as Leaders Gain $1 to $4

New York, Sept. 5.—Spirited bidding for stocks and bonds went ahead in today's trading and some nearby records were established. Among speculative leaders on the big board gains of 1 to 4 points were the order of the day and the composite average of 100 representative issues advanced 0.67 point, taking the list well above the narrow range which held it since the middle of June. It is now at the highest since May 14, trading of 1,247,320 shares made it the most active day since June 12 and the bond volume was the best since May 21.

While the gains of today and Wednesday, as well as the one of a week ago, have been impressive, the rally has not yet convinced all of the technicians that there has been a fundamental change in the condition of the market. The recovery is still within the limits of a normal technical rebound following the decline which got under way following the rise of the outbreak of the war a year ago.

If the market shows an ability to break out on the upside, leading issues could easily add another 10 to 20 points, one technician said today. Another more cautious student of the market declared he was having his customers take profits on 25 per cent of their holdings on the theory that the recent push has been too rapid, and that an opportunity will be presented to replace holdings at lower levels. There is very little bearish sentiment abroad but there is plenty of caution.

Aside from the favorable figures of business indices, the present incentive appears to be stemming from the resistance being shown by the British to the German onslaught. A few weeks ago the general assumption was that the German attempt to invade England would not be delayed for long, and that consequently securities in our markets would suffer.

As more days pass without Germany daring to make the attempt, confidence is being restored and the feeling now is that while England may not be able to win in a hurry, certainly it will not lose in a hurry. Added to this is the domestic consideration of Federal spending on a scale never approached at any time in our history. Whatever may be the ultimate cost, the immediate prospect is for a guarantee of big orders for the heavy industries. With such an outlook, many of those traders who persisted in staying on the sidelines awaiting a reaction have been turning to the buying side.

Allied Chemical gained 4, Phillip Morris led the tobaccos when it soared 6½ points, Ingersoll Rand, in the heavy-industry division, gained 4; Penney starred in the store division with a 3-point gain, and Dow Chemical gained 3.

New York Central was again the most active stock of the day, adding a major fraction. Steel gained a point and Anaconda nearly a point. The breadth of the market was as pleasing to traders as the trend of prices. A total of 840 individual issues appeared on the tape, the greatest number since May 28. The best that last week could offer was 700 issues on August 30, and the best of the previous week was 402 on August 19.

Fresh gains in listed bonds developed today with all groups again participating in the upswing. Recent lows now have been left behind, and the excellent inquiry for best grade and speculative issues, alike, showed no signs of abating during the session. United States Treasury bonds were slightly better, and some highly rated corporate issues are verging near top levels. Trading amounted to $9,600,000, which represent a fair amount of business.

Speculative rails moved steadily upward in the domestic department. Gains of a point or two were numerous, and some bonds showed even larger advances. Industrial specialties and share privilege issues moved higher, and the holding company bonds also reflected the greater optimism.

FCA Agencies Seek to Repay $315,000,000

$79,050,000 in U. S. Bonds Sold Recently By Farm Credit Units

Corporations affiliated with the Farm Credit Administration, it was learned yesterday, have sold $79,050,000 worth of Government securities since July 1 to obtain cash for capital repayments to the Treasury.

The Federal Land Banks, Federal Farm Corporation and Intermediate Credit Banks, Production Credit Coporation and Banks for Cooperatives have been ordered by President Roosevelt to repay this fiscal year $315,000,000 of the capital invested in them by the Treasury.

The Treasury hopes to get repayments totaling $700,000,000 from these agencies, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and others in which it has invested capital.

However, officials have indicated that the bulk of the $700,000,000 will be paid out of cash received by the corporations from repayment of loans or by selling their own securities to the public.

A July 31 statement of the FCA agencies showed that they owned about $185,000,000 worth of Treasury securities.

C. B. S. Time Sales Rise

Gross billings for time on the radio network of the Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc., for August, amounted to $2,875,657, an increase of 22.8 per cent over August, 1939, time sales of $2,341,636.

Cumulative billings for the first eight months of 1940 aggregated $26,404,427, an increase of 22.2 per cent over the $21,606,562 figure reported for the similar 1939 period.

The Washington Stock Exxchange announced yesterday that regular Saturday sessions, suspended during the summer, will be resumed tomorrow.

Bank Clearings Continue Drop

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—Decreased turnover at New York largely accounted for another decline in bank clearings for the week ended September 4, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Total transactions for 23 cities amounted to $3,995,513,000, a drop of 10.1 per cent from last year's $4,444,294,000. Both weeks included Labor Day. The turnover for the latest period was $191,991,000 under the previous week.

New York transactions were $2,148,486,000, down 19.2 per cent from last year's $2,658,342,000. Total for the 22 outside cities was $1,847,027,000, a gain of 3.4 per cent over the same week last year.

Bell System Gains 65,400 Stations

New York, Sept. 5 (AP).—The Bell System added 65,400 stations to its lines in August, the largest gain for that month since 1936, the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. announced. In July the increase was 22,400 stations and in August, 1939, it was 52,300.

The August gain brought to 536,700 the number of telephones added to the system for the first eight months of 1940, against 433,400 in the same months of 1939.

Corporations Need Ample Cash Reserves in This Uncertain Era

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser
Economic Commentator

One of the silliest prejudices of the business-baiting politicians is against the accumulation of cash by corporations. They view such liquidity with suspicion and alarm.

When this viewpoint is thought through to its logical conclusion, it results in placing a heavy penalty on efficiency.

Cash is a tool of a going concern, and the measure of good management lies in part in a capacity to turn over goods quickly and convert them into cash, which then can be similarly reemployed.

Mr. Rukeyser

On the other hand, the incompetent business executive, who misjudges the quality and price of goods that the public wants, tends to get frozen. Having produced unsalable goods, he fails to recoup his cash, but keeps an undue proportion of his total resources in unmarketable inventory. That status is an index of the trend toward failure.

Another way the efficient accumulate cash is through keeping depreciation reserves against machinery or any other asset that is gradually wearing out, in liquid form. Thus, if a machine is supposed to last 10 years and is depreciated at the rate of 10 per cent a year, then by the end of 10 years the accumulated cash resources are sufficient to pay for the acquisition of a new and modern machine.

On the other hand, if the reserves are only bookkeeping entries and if the cash has been used during the 10-year period to acquire brick, mortar and other fixed assets, then it is not available for use to replace a worn-out tool with a new one. Many corporations find themselves in that unhappy plight.

From the standpoint of a single corporation, ample cash funds heighten its readiness to meet contingencies.

It is ready for the disappointments of panic, depression, diversion of trade through war, and the other developments which were not envisaged during moments of high optimism when promoters, hoping for the best, divested themselves of cash in order to get land, factory buildings, power equipment and machinery.

Neither extreme liquidity nor a thoroughly frozen condition is desirable. The essence of good management lies in sound judgment as to balanced conditions.

But it adds another and unnecessary hobble to stigmatize provident managers who recognize the importance of reasonable liquidity if an enterprise is to build a permanent success.

In fairness to the anti-cash contingent, it is confused by the belief that cash is necessariliy idle, and that it is ther

Alphonso Smith in D. C. Net Finals

Third-Seeded Player Beats Hugh Lynch

Defending Champion To Meet Welsh For Recreation Title At Reservoir Courts

C. Alphonso Smith advanced to the finals in both singles and doubles of the D. C. Recreation Department Tennis Tournament yesterday on the Sixteenth Street Reservoir Courts.

Smith, third-seeded and defending champion, upset second-seeded Hugh Lynch in the singles by the surprisingly decisive scores of 6—4, 6—2. He will meet five time champion Barney Welsh for the title next Wednesday afternoon.

In the men's doubles, Smith and Dick Murphy routed Harvey Kreuzburg and W. Mehl, 6—0, 6—1, in the quarter-finals and then turned on Frank Shore and Buddy Adair in the semifinals, 6—4, 6—2. The other doubles finalists will be Welsh and Hugh Lynch, who defeated Bob Threadgill and R. L. Willis, 6—2, 6—3.

Due to all the players competing in the Virginia State tournament over the week-end, the doubles finals has also been put off until Wednesday.

In the women's singles semifinals, Margaret Keever defeated Dorette Miller, 6—4, 7—5, and will meet Charlotte Decker for the title tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. The doubles finals will follow in the first woman's tournament with Charlotte Decker and Frances Rowan meeting Miss Bransford and Margaret Keever.

The Decker-Rowan team defeated Dorette Miller and Peggy Smith, 6—3, 8—6, yesterday, while Bransford and Keever won over Eleanor Voith and Helen Levy, 6—3, 6—3.

Lou Plummer, Newman Win At Stadium

Easily Win Feature Of Team Wrestling Show in Ball Park

Lou Plummer and Ed Newman spotted the two-man wrestling team of Sheriff Tom Hanley and Herb Freeman 100 pounds but easily won the feature of the mat card last night at Turner's Arena.

Hanley was pinned in 11 minutes the first fall and six minutes for the second while Freeman went down in 12 minutes the first time and five the second.

Former world's champion Danno O'Mahoney used his Irish whip to effect in tossing Emil Dusek in 23 minutes.

Babe Zaharias and brother, Chris, netted 1,000. Babe winning in 18 minutes with a body press over Abe Yourist while Chris required a minute longer to win the nod over Maurice LaChappelle with the same hold.

Gus Lesnevich Wins 2d Straight As Heavyweight

Garfield, N. J., Sept. 5 (U.P.).—Gus Lesnevich, 187, Cliffside, N. J., scored his second straight victory as a heavyweight tonight, forcing Henry Cooper, 192, New York, to retire in the fifth of a scheduled ten-rounder at Belmont Bowl.

Lesnevich, leading challenger for the light-heavyweight title, floored Cooper for a count of one in the second and for nine in the third. Following the conclusion of the fourth, in which Cooper was buffeted severely, the Brooklyn battler informed the referee that he wished to "retire from combat."

Heurich Nine Sets Out for Title Tourney

Post League Champs Open Play Saturday At Birmingham, Ala.

The Washington Post Industrial League's powerful Heurich Brewers, D. C. sandlot baseball champions for the second straight year, embarked for Birmingham, Ala., yesterday, where they will compete in the National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament beginning Saturday.

Eighteen players and Managers Bill Fiester and Ralph Bennie were in the party whose expenses will be paid for in full by the local chapter of the federation. Pairings for the week-long, double elimination tourney will be made tomorrow night at a meeting of team managers.

Last year, when the annual event was staged at Griffith Stadium, the Brewers romped into the semifinals where they were finally beaten out by a close margin. Fiester, in charge of the team, and Sponsor Chris Heurich, jr., were in high hopes the team could repeat the performance, at least.

Today the Beerman will arrive in Cincinnati, in company of champions of New York, Waterbury, Conn.; Baltimore, and Cumberland, and there seven more titlists will be picked up for the final lap.

Izaac Waltons To Try Again To Land Swimmer

Washington's Izaac Walton League members will make their third attempt to "land" a 220-pound swimmer from the Takoma Pool tonight at the final performance of the Red Cross Aquafete.

In two tries the angling society has unsuccessfully sought to bring Elmer Hipsley, former national life guard champion and director of the huge water carnival, to shore with rod and reel. A $50 wager between the club and Hipsley has added increased incentive to both sides.

Dr. Fred Orsinger, director of the Aquarium, will be on hand tonight to attempt the feat with deep-sea fishing equipment.

There will be 5,000 free seats available for the first comers tonight. Numerous interesting aquatic features will sprinkle the program.

Savannah Wins Title In South Atlantic Loop

Savannah, Ga., Sept. 5 (AP).—The Savannah Indians won the South Atlantic League baseball pennant for 1940 tonight by defeating Columbus 11 to 7. The Indians' victory tonight was their ninetieth of the season and gave them a lead of 11½ games over Columbus, now in second place.

Palisades Girls Win Recreation Softball

Palisades girls softball team won the D. C. Recreation Department softball crown by virtue of a 6-4 victory over Virginia avenue in the finals of the annual tourney.

M. Becker turned in a six-hit pitching effort for the winners, while Palisades sluggers registered nine off E. Daniel. Misses Rich and Becker paced the hitting with two singles apiece.

Youth Opposes Veteran in Cup Regatta Here September 14-15

18-Year-Old Lad to Vie Against Fellow Townsman, 43 in Match Division

In the smallest class of the sailing races of the President's Cup Regatta September 14-15, an 18-year-old lad, Roscoe Stevenson, and a 43-year-old yacht captain, Eddie Channing, are to wage a battle for top honors, it was revealed yesterday by Arthur H. Clephane, chairman.

The division will be the 11-foot moth, one of 11 classes for the sailing races over the Potomac off Hains Point.

Clephane stated that Channing twice won the moth class races of the regatta here, while Stevenson annexed the series in 1936. Both hail from Elizabeth City, N. C., and are two of five moth sailors entered from that town in the three-race series.

Others entered from Elizabeth City are Dorr Wiley, winner in 1930; Charles Higgins and Harry Henderson.

Clephane said that Norfolk, Va., will have three sailing experts entered in Dave Pritchard, Jack Vail and Clay Catewood.

From a standpoint of size only one other class in the regatta will come close to the moths. It is the little penguin dinghies. Two men, according to the rules, will be in the penguins. A moth carries only one.

The other classes are the 20-footers in divisions I and II, Hampton one-designs, comets, snipes, Class B canoes, handicap A, handicap B and lightnings. These lightnings are new one-design sloops.

The penguin class, in which a record entry is predicted, will stage its first regatta off Alexandria just two days prior to the President's Cup regatta races. The comet class nationals open today in Huntington, Long Island, involving a number of outstanding skippers due here a week from Saturday.

A raft of attractive trophies and cups will be given the triumphant skippers, with the presentation slated September 15 at the Capital Yacht Club, with Herbert L. Stone, editor of Yachting Magazine, doing the presenting.

Girls' Softball Champs Lose in Title Play

Detroit, Sept. 5 (AP).—One defending champion was dethroned quickly tonight in amateur softball's world championship play as the Alameda, Calif., girl team bowed before Detroit, 2 to 1, in extra innings.

The Detroit feminine stars of the small diamond put together two singles, a walk and an error for the winning run in the eighth inning before 5,000 fans assembled in the flood-lighted University of Detroit Stadium. Each team got six hits.

Archery Tournament Is Scheduled Today

The "Robin Hood Pageant and Tournament of 1940" will be today's feature at Brook's Stadium, with 150 stellar archers taking part in activities depicting the evolution of archery from 400 B. C. to the present.

Area champions will clash in the city bow-and-arrow championship as a highlight. Action will get underway at 4 p. m.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

His 2-1 defeat by the Yankees, notwithstanding, Dutch Leonard merits yesterday's chief award in the Nats' Man of the Month contest. Points were awarded as follows:

To Leonard, 12 points, because he held the Yanks to eight hits and only one earned run.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, six points, because he made five hits in the double-header, including a triple, and scored two runs.

To Jimmy Pofahl, seven points, because he hit two doubles and three singles, and played a brilliant game in the field.

The totals:

Sid Hudson	22	Jack Sanford	10
Dutch Leonard	22	Cecil Travis	7
Jimmy Bloodworth	17	George Case	6
Buddy Lewis	13	Walter Masterson	5
Jimmy Pofahl	13	Rick Ferrell	5

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Ocean City Reports Marlin Fishing Is Good

Delayed action is the word for the Ocean City white marlin fishing, that, when it should have been good, was next to nothing, and now, when it ordinarily should be over, is going great guns.

The same is true of the tagging, with United States Bureau of Fisheries discs, and the following release of the fish, because the one naturally is dependent on the other.

ACKERMAN

Mrs. C. L. (Peggy) Parker caught her first marlin of this season on Tuesday; on a feather trolled for tuna, and on Leo Droughton's 6-ounce rod on which she had caught seven last year. Proving beyond any doubt her sportsmanship, for she tagged and released this fish for which she has fished offshore more days than many of the charter boatmen.

It puts her in a position to receive the fine Tycoon rod to be awarded by Frank O'Brien, of Miami, for the most white marlin tagged and released this season at Ocean City, for she is the first woman to turn the trick.

It appeared, until Tuesday, as though these Tycoon rods, offered through Ray Camp, of the New York Times; Hammond Brown, of the Baltimore American, and Bob Wilson and yours truly, would of necessity be held over until next year for with the men there was a tie between Paul Blundon, of Keiser, W. Va., and Paul Townsend, with two fish each tagged and released back in July.

Townsend broke that tie, on Tuesday however with another release, and it is likely it will be followed with others for he is fishing all this week. In catching it, he had nine fish up, and hooked eight, so it is understandable why others are having trouble.

A real indication, however, of the grand sport to be had at this nearby resort right now. The weather perfect, with every likelihood of continuing so, and most of the good boats available for any day. Boats, for which anglers were crying, and offering any amount of money only a few weeks back.

Don't pass by the reopening of the New Jersey trout season for the month of September and the beginning of the three-month rail season.

Well-stocked streams await anglers, and during the month trucks from the world-famous Hackettstown hatchery will continue to transport large trout to the streams for those anglers taking advantage of this late season. Since 1934, when the first September trout season was opened, the period has gained in popularity.

Regulations prevailing during the regular season from April 15 to July 15 will be in effect during the September season.

The rail bird season will remain open until November 30. It will be also the open season for sora, marsh hen or mud hen, known also as Clapper and King rails, and other rails and Gallinules except coot. During the open season the south Jersey counties will be the mecca of many sportsmen, for the birds inhabit Salem, Cumberland, Gloucester, Camden, Burlington and Atlantic counties in great numbers.

Under Federal regulations rails may be hunted from sunrise to sunset and no Federal stamp is required. The daily limit in Jersey, as well as in nearby Maryland, is 15 sora.

Miss Guilfoil Upset in Golf Tournament

Loses in Mason-Dixon Play; Mrs. Meckley Wins in Consolation

By International News Service

White Sulphur Springs, Va., Sept. 5.—In the first major upset of the tournament, Marjorie Harrison, of Ausable Forks, N. Y., today defeated Virginia Guilfoil, defending champion and medalist from Syracuse, in the annual Mason and Dixon Women's Golf championship by 3 and 1 to advance into tomorrow's semifinals.

Miss Guilfoil faltered on the greens to reach the turn 2 down, rallied briefly to stand all square at the eleventh, then let her chances slip away to lose finally on the 535-yard seventeenth, where Miss Harrison shot a clinching birdie 4.

Mrs. Jerome Sloman, of Baltimore, moved into a semifinal match with Miss Harrison by eliminating Mrs. R. J. Paisley, of Lakewood, Ohio, 5 and 3.

Mary Morrison, of Hershey, Pa., defeated Mrs. J. D. Hoblitzell, of Parkersburg, W. Va., 2 and 1, and next will tackle Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, who eliminated Katherine McCloskey, Pittsburgh, 2 and 1.

In the first flight consolation play, Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, of the Kenwood Club in Washington, defeated Mrs. George R. Hedges, Columbus, 5 and 4, and advanced to the semifinals. The District player will meet Mrs. S. N. Juffaord tomorrow.

The third flight consolation will be an all-District final as Mrs. H. L. Lacey, of Manor Club, defeated Mrs. Albert Rich, Baltimore, 2 and 1, and Mrs. H. A. Mihills, Manor, won by default from Mrs. C. F. Rhodes, Manor. In the second flight consolation, Mrs. H. A. Knox, Congressional, lost to Mrs. R. B. Blubaugh, Charleston, 2 and 1.

WINNIE WINKLE — Aides to Eros — BY BRANNER

SO BECAUSE YOU'RE THE SON OF NATHANIEL NABOB, THE MULTI-MILLIONAIRE, YOU THINK THAT GIVES YOU THE RIGHT TO STEAL MY WIFE, EH?
I CAN EXPLAIN THAT, BILL!
BOB IS SURE BEING ONE GOOD EXPLAINER!
I WANT TO MARRY AN ACTRESS, PRISCILLA PARKINS! MY PARENTS OBJECT! PRISCILLA IS STARRING IN A SUMMER THEATRE IN DOLDRUM, A LITTLE TOWN NEAR HERE! MY FATHER'S DETECTIVES ARE ALL OVER THE PLACE, HOPING TO CATCH ME IF AND WHEN I COME TO SEE HER!
PRISCILLA IS JUST WINNIE'S BUILD AND LOOKS LIKE WINNIE, ONLY SHE'S A BRUNETTE!
I BEGIN TO SEE, BOB! YOU WANT ME TO GO TO DOLDRUM AND----
WHY, BILL, WE'VE SIMPLY GOT TO HELP BOB! YOU CAN'T REFUSE-
WHO'S REFUSING? OF COURSE WE'LL HELP!
SURE! WE ARE ALL BEING LILLY CUPIDS!

MR. AND MRS. — Getting the Case History — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

I FEEL TERRIBLE. MUST HAVE EATEN SOMETHING
I THOUGHT YOU PROMISED TO BE CAREFUL
I WAS. I HAD JUST A GLASS OF MILK, COLD SLICED CHICKEN AND ICED TEA
WHEN WAS IT YOU HAD THAT? TODAY?
NO! TWO DAYS AGO. YOU TOLD ME TO BE CAREFUL AND I WAS. IT'S THE BUNK
WHAT DID YOU EAT FOR YOUR LUNCH TODAY?
JUST A LIGHT LUNCH. CLAMS, BEEF A LA MODE WITH POTATO PANCAKES, FRIED EGG PLANT AND ICE CREAM
HOW LONG DO YOU THINK ONE DAY OF COMMON SENSE WILL LAST YOU?

Today's Radio Highlights

10:15 a. m., WOL—How's your police record—traffic court, that is? Mutual's mid-morning airings from the District Police Court are both revealing and instructive.

6:30 p. m., WRC—Alec Templeton resumes his weekly program of improvisations and parodies at the piano. Ray Noble's Orchestra and Pat O'Malley's Lancashire Lad stories are other features of this half hour which is set through April.

7:00 WMAL—It's also a new spot for The Bishop and the Gargoyle, that series of a kindly ex-bishop who relaxes by dabbling in the solution of crime. Tonight's stars the Austrian Lotte Stavisky in "The Item of the Girl from Vienna." Miss Stavisky is heard in the daily serial, Against the Storm.

7:30, WOL—Alfred Wallenstein returns from his holiday to resume his Sinfonietta concerts. Boccherini's Symphony in A major and Saint Saens' Marcel Etienne Suite No. 1 are programmed.

7:30, WJSV—Ted Husing, Art Mann and Cas Adams captain an unannounced lineup on the sports quiz, Choose Up Sides.

9:00, WMAL—Billy Conn finally meets Bob Pastor in that bout postponed from August 13. Sam Taub and Bill Stern are the announcers.

9:00, WRC—Here's a playlet for you, you folks who are always phoning for dramalets: Don Ameche and Claire Trevor act "The Son of Mama Posito," the story of a fugitive from justice mistaken for a mother's long lost son.

11:00, WOL—From Virginia's sixth annual Tobacco Festival in South Boston comes the music of Guy Lombardo and the voice of Martha Scott, Queen of the Festival and screen star of "Our Town" and "The Howards of Virginia."

Listen! with Glynn

In case any of you people ever get stuck when called upon to give the meaning of the word "scat," a term in modern popular music, it's only human kindness to tell you that a very satisfying definition can be found in the latest edition of the weighty and scholarly "Oxford Companion to Music."

The learned editors explain its inclusion rather apologetically. "The definition of such manifestations of the twentieth century spirit in this branch of music is difficult to the mere theorist," they say. And they "judged it best to leave the responsibility to one of its most famous exponents."

The word, found between Scarlatti and scemando, is defined by its famous exponent thusly: "You put enough hot licks in, and you have a scat song such as Cab Calloway or any other Negro scat singer sings. If I have to be a little more technical, I would say it is a case of an unhampered musical figuration just barely held to the melodic line—the atonal exuberance of a racial melancholy."

The eminent lexicographer who is responsible for that definition is a Mr. John Green, a Harvard graduate and the conductor of a dance orchestra.

We just brought the matter up because of its encyclopedic interest, of course. But, incidentally, the orchestra, known popularly as Johnny Green's, can be heard over WJSV and the Columbia network every Friday night at 8 in a program called "Johnny Presents."

Contract Bridge

A swing to satisfy the keenest gambler was won on today's hand by Mr. and Mrs. George Kennedy. They picked up 950 points by encouraging master players Fred D. Kaplan and B. Jay Becker to double them at two hearts which they made for an overtrick and game. Kaplan and Becker could have made four no-trump on their cards, but decided unwisely on the double instead.

Mrs. Kennedy rescued her partner successfully from the double of two diamonds; her hand would be worthless to him except for the ace of clubs, whereas she might be able to take whatever high cards he had and win a few tricks by ruffing. The result was better than she had expected.

She managed the play nicely by giving up two spades at once, instead of trying to ruff the suit.

The lead of the jack of clubs helped considerably, and Mrs. Kennedy made the most of it, putting on the club queen which held the trick. She played the queen of spades; Becker won with the king. He returned a low heart and West's ten forced the ace. A low diamond was ruffed, then Mrs. Kennedy put through the nine of spades. Kaplan discarded a club; dummy also threw off, and East won with the ace, taking the heart queen and playing a diamond. The diamond was ruffed, and, as declarer's spades were now established and she held the jack of hearts all she had to do was lead spades. When Kaplan trumped with his heart king, she would win the next lead, either with the club ace or a ruff, and play out the remainder of the spades.

Mrs. Kennedy made two hearts, doubled, with an extra trick, losing two spades and two trumps.

Drafted Police Not To Lose Pensions

Montgomery Seeks To Extend Benefits By New Legislation; May Aid Widows

Members of the Montgomery County (Md.) Policemen's Association who may be called for military service will not become ineligible for benefits under the association's pension fund, it was announced yesterday.

Sergt. J. S. McAuliffe, association president, said members who are called into any branch of the service will continue eligible for death benefits and other privileges, it was decided by a vote of the association, he said.

In addition to the association's own benefits, members of the force also are entitled to half-pay from the State retirement fund after 25 years of service. Sergt. McAuliffe said the association had under consideration several proposals to seek legislation extending the benefits provided by this State law.

The association, he said, hopes to have the State Legislature approve an amendment to include all men permanently disabled in line of duty in the pension provision, regardless of their length of service.

Another proposal being considered by the association would give widows of officers who die while on the force $60 a month with $10 additional for each child under 16 years. This pension would end if the widow married again.

The association also is considering a proposed amendment which would provide that members who sever their connections with the force for any reason shall receive a refund of the amount paid into the State retirement fund.

The proposed amendments to the State retirement law has been submitted to Donald M. Bowie, attorney, for study.

Wilkins Calls For Alexandria Council Peace

The principal task confronting Alexandria's new city council, which meets for the first time Tuesday, is to give taxpayers a return of "100 cents on every tax dollar and every license dollar they spend," Mayor William T. Wilkins told members of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club at its weekly luncheon yesterday in the George Mason Hotel.

In his first public talk since he assumed office as mayor on September 1, Wilkins expressed the hope the two factions of council—those elected as ward representatives and those named by the people at large—will "forget their differences" and work for unity and the betterment of the city. He referred to a political battle of a year ago, in which a move to have the entire council elected at large was halted.

The mayor expressed a definite opposition to the sale of bonds by the city for any other than emergency measures. "Occasionally it is necessary to issue bonds to finance some worthwhile project," he declared, "but I am not New Dealer enough to vote for them for every whim and cry that appears."

Wilkins also said he was opposed to the practice of "spot zoning," which he described as undermining the stability of the city's zoning laws. The law is designed to maintain property values, he said, and "spot zoning" defeats the purpose for which the ordinance was enacted.

"My principal interest in relation to the new council term," Wilkins said, "is to become a conservative borrower, and a conservative and business like spender."

Burrell Appointed To Police Force

The appointment of Richard C. Burrell, 24, to fill one of two vacancies on the Alexandria police force, was announced yesterday by City Manager Carl Budwesky. The appointment will become effective on September 10, although the new officer will be formally sworn in a day before he assumes his duties.

Burrell was one of nine applicants who successfully completed a special police training course conducted by the Alexandria department two weeks ago. He was among the top-ranking students in academic work, the city manager said, and was appointed on the basis of all-around qualifications.

The new officer is a graduate of the George Washington High School, and attended Bullis Preparatory School in Washington for two years. He is well known in Alexandria as an athlete. He was one of the few students to win sports monograms in four major high school sports during a single year.

Namesake Embarrasses Maurice Rosenberg

Maurice D. Rosenberg, Alexandria delegate to the Virginia General Assembly, has been "considerably embarrassed" by the campaign activities of Maurice D. Rosenberg, Washington banker, who is an active supporter of Republican Nominee Wendell Willkie, he asserted yesterday.

One of Alexandria's staunchest supporters of the New Deal and President Roosevelt, Delegate Rosenberg said he had received numerous protests from Democratic supporters in Alexandria who have recently seen the name of Maurice D. Rosenberg on the letterhead of the District's Willkie-McNary Club.

"I have been deeply gratified by the protests," Delegate Rosenberg declared, "for it shows that Alexandria delegates are still for President Roosevelt. Nevertheless, I wish to assure my friends and fellow Democrats that Banker Rosenberg and myself are entirely different personalities and apparently our political views differ widely."

Rail Express Strike Averted By U. S. Board

30,000 Threatened Walkout in Dispute Over 44-Hour Week

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 5.—A strike by 30,000 Railway Express Agency employes who handle, among other things, express shipments of national defense materials, was averted today by the settlement of a 44-hour work week dispute between the agency and the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

The settlement was announced in a joint statement by L. O. Head, president of the agency, and George M. Harrison, brotherhood chief.

They did not disclose how they disposed of the differences which threatened to culminate in a strike, but simply stated that the two sides had agreed to accept the recommendations of President Roosevelt's fact-finding board for putting the 44-hour week into operation.

The statement said also that all other matters in controversy "had been satisfactorily adjusted."

The President's emergency fact-finding board was established early in July under terms of the Railway Labor Act to inquire into the dispute growing out of the Brotherhood's demand that the agency establish the 44-hour week, in place of the 48-hour week, for the clerks as it had previously done for the vehicle drivers represented by the teamsters' union.

The board recommended the extension of the 44-hour week except for certain classes of employes in the general and accounting offices and train messenger department. It called also for flexible application of the plan for the sake of efficiency and economy.

Until Harrison went to New York Wednesday to talk to Head, the Brotherhood had negotiated with an agency committee headed by A. M. Hartung, vice president.

A week ago, Harrison disclosed that the negotiations with Hartung had broken down, and he made preparations to call the clerks off their jobs, contending that the agency did not want to apply the new hours plan "in a fair and reasonable" way.

The agency argued that the Brotherhood was making demands that went beyond the President's broad report.

Old Dominion City Councils Reorganized

New Members Seated, Officers Elected in Many Localities

Reorganization meetings were held this week by city councils in many Virginia communities. Some of these sessions, in which new members were seated and officers elected, were in Winchester, Charlottesville, Fredericksburg, Berryville and Strasburg.

Winchester

Winchester, Sept. 5.—Members of Common Council, in their first meeting of their new term, reorganized for the ensuing 12 months and re-elected City Manager S. Lee Grant and other employes and officials.

Dr. Allen Hawthorne was named to succeed Herman Hable, retired, as vice president. Dr. C. R. Anderson was reelected president and Frank Krebs, although incapacitated with a broken hip, was re-elected clerk, a position he has held for more than 30 years.

Charlottesville

Charlottesville, Sept. 5.—At the first meeting of the newly organized city council, presided over by Mayor W. Dandridge Haden, Miss Carrie Burnley, principal of McGuffey School, and A. Hewson Michie, were appointed to the city library board.

The gasoline bulk storage ordinance amendment, drawn up by City Attorney Lyttelton Waddell, following consultation with oil representatives, was passed by council, and requires the diking of tanks that may be deemed unsafe.

Upon request of City Auditor James Bowen, council granted an appropriation of 6,543.34 to cover overexpended items for the year. Biggest items listed include street cleaning, $1,551.63; public parks, $610.75; public buildings, $373.96; and softball field at McIntire Park, $224.80.

Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Sept. 5.—At a reorganization meeting of the city council, Claude Parcell was re-elected president of the body. He has served for the last four years.

Other officials, also reelected, were: Cecil L. Reid, vice president of council; Beverly S. Roberts, clerk of council; D. W. Scott, city collector; Dr. Thomas B. Payne, city health officer; Mrs. C. S. Hunter, Dr. E. R. Ware, Mrs. J. C. Chichester, Mrs. W. W. Braxton, city health board; R. E. Beckham, sanitary officer and sealer of weights and measures; C. O'Conor Goolrick, city attorney.

The meeting was the first for two new members of the Council elected in June. They are A. B. Young and J. J. Garner. Mr. Young, however, has previously served 16 years in the body.

Berryville

Berryville, Sept. 5.—W. D. Wisecarver, jr., was elected to fill the vacancy in the common council left by the death of H. B. Whiting. Mr. Wisecarver will represent the Second Ward.

Newly elected Mayor Leonard H. Bell was sworn in by former Mayor H. B. Harris who retired after two terms. Another newcomer in the council is Dr. D. Blanton Allen of the Third Ward. Holdovers are L. N. Russell, First Ward, and Dr. Frank E. Tappan, Fourth Ward.

S. M. Carper, of White Post, was elected town sergeant to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of H. R. Cheshire, Dr. George N. Hardesty was reappointed town treasurer, and the following officers also were reappointed: Superintendent of water system, William M. Levi, assisted by George B. Thomas; attorney, Edward McC. Williams; assessor, William Shank; bookkeeper, Kenneth G. Levi, who was also reelected recorder.

Dr. F. E. Tappan, Dr. D. B. Allen and K. G. Levi were appointed to the budget committee.

Strasburg

Strasburg, Sept. 5.—Committee assignments were handed out and several town offices filled at the reorganization meeting of the town council here. Miss Beulah Lemley and C. D. Guthrie were re-elected town treasurer and clerk-manager, respectively. Elections of a town sergeant, office clerk, day and night police, police justice and assistant police justice were deferred.

There were no changes in the council, the entire body and Mayor C. S. McCarty having been re-elected without opposition in the municipal elections last June. Committee chairmen were named as follows: Finance, W. W. Stickley; water and sewer, H. L. Snapp; streets, Mrs. J. M. Boles; fire department, A. E. Johnson; public safety, W. J. Flanagan; building and sanitation, W. T. Glaize; lights, R. L. Stark, and ordinance, J. J. Crawford.

Doctor Is Suicide

York, Pa., Sept. 5 (AP).—Coroner L. U. Zech listed today as suicide the death of 40-year-old Dr. Wallace R. Swartzwelder, found in his automobile with a gunshot wound near the heart. He said a letter found in Dr. Swartzwelder's clothing gave final notice that taxes on a Mercersburg, Pa., property in the name of the physician's mother, Mrs. R. V. Swartzwelder, must be sold.

Staunton, Va., Sept. 5.—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals ruled invalid today the action of Gov. Price in increasing the salary of Secretary of the Commonwealth Raymond Jackson and after hearing argument it took under advisement the Henrico-Richmond annexation case.

The Governor last year raised Mr. Jackson's salary from $4,000 to $5,000 a year because of additional duties imposed in the office. Several months later Attorney General A. P. Staples ruled that the Governor did not have the authority to increase the salary of the secretary and State Comptroller Leroy Hodges stopped payment of the increase and asked for a return of the amount of the increase paid in salary checks prior to the attorney general's ruling.

Jackson petitioned the court for a mandamus compelling the comptroller to pay the salary increase.

Justice John W. Eggleston, who wrote the opinion, held that the Governor's action was "unauthorized by law."

In the annexation case, Thomas B. Gay, chief counsel for the county, was given two hours the present his case and he contended that there were major legal errors in the 2,000,000-word record and in the opinion of the special three-judge annexation court which ruled that Richmond could go ahead and take over some 8 square miles of rich Henrico territory.

The city was not permitted to give oral argument today under the rules of the court.

Gay contended that the annexation court erred when it permitted Richmond to proceed with a separate suit against Henrico when it was admitted that the city also sought about 5 square miles of Chesterfield County territory. He stated that this violated statutes directing that annexation proceedings be embraced in a single case and be handled by a single court.

A truck load of Henrico County exhibits and records were stacked around the small courtroom and Gay referred to these frequently in citing governmental services performed by the county. Tapping a large map of the city and county he pointed out sections of the city which were not as thickly populated as the county areas sought for annexation.

Richmond, Gay said, had not sustained its contention that it was necessary, expedient or desirable to annex the Henrico territory.

Marriages Slump In Fredericksburg

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 5.—Virginia's premarital test which went into effect August 1 put a crimp in Fredericksburg's marriage license business. Thirty-four licenses were issued here in August against 484 in July.

WALK WARILY

Suggestions from an Overworked Guardian Angel

RURAL RULES. The higher speeds of the highway have increased the death rate for rural walkers 64%. Follow these rules: walk on the left side, facing nearest traffic. Get off the pavement for oncoming cars. Watch closely for drunk or drowsy drivers. Carry a light at night.

Higher Prices Cheer State's Oyster Trade

Early Surveys Indicate 'Very Good' Season Is in Prospect

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Sept. 5.—First reports from conservation inspectors indicated today that Maryland can expect a "very good" oyster season.

They said bivalves were large, had excellent meat and were free from mussels. And from the commercial standpoint, oysters are bringing prices as high as 60 cents a bushel, inspectors declared.

Conservation commission officials said last season the prices per bushel averaged 45 cents.

Reporting for the Cambridge district, Inspector D. C. Kinnamon said:

"Oysters are in very good shape. The price per bushel is the best I can remember. Prices per bushel offered on the dock were 60 cents. I just can't recall if oysters ever were 60 cents a bushel on opening day" (September 1, when the tonging season opened).

William P. Marshall, inspector for the Herring Bay district, said:

"Eight boats operated on bars the opening day. Oysters are in better shape than they have ever been for five years. They have good size, excellent meat and are entirely free from mussels. Prospects are for a very good season."

Inspector M. P. Edwards reported from the Chester River district:

"I've taken samples from 12 or 13 bars. Oysters are clear of mussels. They are in good shape and show wonderful growth."
